IN JAIL, CONVICTED, CLAIMS KINSHIP WITH ROTHSCHILDS

Jules Nahoum, Found Guilty of Embezzling $60,000 From West Coast Trading Co. Tells His Story.

INNOCENT, HE SAYS; CHARGES FRAMEUP

Declares He Is Descended From Nahum of Bible in Long Line of International Bankers.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW ORLEANS, La., April 26.—The Orleans Parish prison in New Orleans now holds its most distinguished prisoner, Jules Nahoum, who last Tuesday in Judge Echezbaal's section of the Criminal District Court was found guilty of embezzling $60,000 from the West Coast Trading Co. of Cajeme, Sonora, Mexico, of which he was president and general manager at $18,000 a year.

Nahoum swears he is innocent, that he has been "double-crossed, frozen out and framed" by two partners, Americans, who testified they had changed to Mexican citizenship "for economic reasons." Nahoum's lawyers have announced they will appeal.

Meanwhile Nahoum awaits sentence. The maximum sentence is 14 years.

Claims Noble Kinship.

It was disclosed for the first time yesterday that Nahoum says he is a scion of the Rothschilds and Sassoons, the two wealthiest financial dynasties in Europe, and that his wife is descended from a former Archbishop of Canterbury.

"I did nothing but what business men and financiers all over the world are doing," he declared, over and over again.

His tailoring is costly, his linen immaculate. He speaks English, French, Spanish, German, Italian and Greek. He is, at 41, accepted as an expert on international finance and the export and import trade, as a specialist in financing and organizing. His book ""The Key to National Prosperity," published recently by Dutton of New York, is like a treatise in higher mathematics.

In his family have been financiers for centuries, so his story goes. Data supplied by the Italian Government shows Nahoums active in finance in the city of Pisa in 1789. Long before that they were bankers in Cadiz, Spain. Nahoum's father, he says, was born in Spain. He married Mlle. Rita Amar, daughter of Leon Amar, famous French banker of Paris. It was one of those unions where ancient, honored Jewish blood and modern high finance were united. The Nahoums had brothers and sons and cousins in finance and the export and import trade in England, France, Spain, Belgium and Italy.

Born in Constantinople.

Nahoum was born in Constantinople, in 1889, the fifth of nine brothers. He had two sisters. His father had amassed wealth in Constantinople. Starting as a banker, the father became president of the Constantinople Stock Exchange and held the office many years. When he died in 1910, the first or second executive in five of the seven great banks in Constantinople was a Nahoum.

The boys were educated in the College of St. Joseph by the French Friars and their two sisters in the convent of the Franciscan Sisters. From his earliest schooling Jules Nahoum shone in languages and mathematics. His father knew him for a born financier. The boy was only 20 years old when the revolutionary period of 1909-1910 made a maelstrom of Constantinople.

With members of his family he traveled through Europe and stayed a while in Greece. In 1911, he arrived in New York. He had been the personal guest of the Baron Lambert de Rothschild in Brussels, before he arrived in New York. He had gone to Brussels with a letter from his father introducing him to Rothschild as "my son and your cousin."

Married New York Girl.

Six years after he arrived in the United States, already become a naturalized American citizen, he met Miss Marion Ireland, New York society girl. Miss Ireland's grandmother was a cousin of Dr. Davidson, the Archbishop of Canterbury of her day in England.

She was also a cousin of Sir Moses Montefiore and was likewise

No One Nation Chargeable With Failure of Five-Power Naval Treaty at London

State of Public Opinion in Countries Involved Was Real Reason—Growing Rivalry Kept France and Italy Apart.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, April 26.—Now that the London Naval Conference at last has come to an end, it is possible to see in clearer perspective some of the troubles that bedeviled it.

The difficulties that restricted the conference to a three-Power naval limitation agreement were not created during the negotiations. It is important that this fact should be recognized in any appraisal of the results. All the troubles that arose, except only the disheartening delay caused by the domestic political crisis in France, had been foreseen. They were deep-rooted in the situation faced by the conference at the outset.

Everybody who had given any thought at all to post-war European rivalries and fears knew that the road to a useful agreement among all the five Powers represented at the London conference would be far from easy. An outline of the major obstacles was given by this writer in an article published in the Post-Dispatch before our delegates departed for London. No second sight was required to make the prediction there made, namely, that the outcome would lie somewhere between failure and the complete realization of the Hoover-McDonald aims.

Hopes and Results.

Nevertheless, there was the chance that a way might be found to bring France and Italy into a compact with the three other nations. It was a chance that seemed to Mr. MacDonald and Mr. Hoover to be eminently worth taking, and they took it. Enveloped, quite naturally, in an aura of optimism given off by their own meeting of minds on the Rapidan, they believed, or hoped, that the difficulties in the path of an all-inclusive agreement would be overcome. The fact that their hopes were disappointed does not argue that the effort was not worth making. Indeed, it seemed for some weeks after the opening of the conference, even when the problems were fully understood, that a solution might be found, and it was not till near the end that the search was definitely abandoned.

The Prime Minister worked desperately to achieve the object on which he had set his heart—too desperately, it appeared to many Britishers, who feared that in his eagerness to satisfy the French demand for additional security he would entangle the nation in some dangerous political commitment.

Political Preparation Inadequate.

If MacDonald left anything undone, it was not during the conference but before it. As the event showed, the political preparation was inadequate. Technically, the preparation on all sides was excellent; but politically too little attention had been paid to France and Italy. The MacDonald-Hoover understanding was not an unmixed blessing; it improved Anglo-American relations and paved the way for the three-Power agreement, but it made the French suspicious.

Throughout the conference the French press reflected the national feeling that England, turning more and more away from the League of Nations, was shouldering France aside to fall into line with America. This being the case, it was argued, France must hold tightly to her physical weapons of defense, except only as they might be scaled down in return for definite guaranties. It may be true, as MacDonald's critics have asserted, that he ought to have gone to Washington by way of Paris.

But even if the political preparation had been much better than it was, it is doubtful whether the conference could have achieved much more than it did. Even had France been led by a new security formula to modify her tonnage demands to a point permitting her inclusion in the treaty, the thorny problem created by the Italian demand for parity with France would have remained.

Way Paved for Progress.

It should go down on the credit side of the ledger that the conference disbanded in an atmosphere of conciliation rather than augmented ill will. Diplomatic negotiations over the European phases of the armament problem can now go forward with better prospect of success than if the last supreme effort to effect an all-around agreement had not been made. Two weeks before the end it seemed certain that the French and Italians would go home with exacerbated feelings. It was due in part to MacDonald's heroic endeavors and in part to the diplomatic legerdemain of

CHANCE WORD LEADS TO LIQUOR SEIZURE

Customs Officers Overhear Smuggler's Boast and Capture Three Boats.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 26.—A conversation overheard in a lower East Side restaurant last night, led to the seizure today of three speedy liquor boats valued at $50,000 and $15,000 worth of liquor.

Deputy Surveyor John McGill and a friend were eating dinner in a restaurant when they overheard a man at a nearby table say:

"These Customs stiffs have quit watching the rivers now and the boys are going to run a couple of loads in right under their noses and show them up."

The Customs men took up a watch in patrol boats in the bay. About 4 a. m. three speedy motor boats passed them, two lighted boats in front, a heavily laden darkened boat behind.

The darkened boat, equipped with airplane motors, outdistanced the pursuing patrol boat, but McGill stuck to the trail and followed the cruiser to a Weehawken pier. Its occupants, however, escaped. Several shots were fired at the boats, but none was struck.

Two other motor boats, believed to be the convoy for the speedy liquor runner, were later found tied up at a shipyard in Coney Island Creek.

GRAF ZEPPELIN LEAVES LONDON ON ITS FLIGHT BACK HOME

German Dirigible Remains for Short Visit at Cardington Airfield.

By the Associated Press.

CARDINGTON, England, April 26.—The dirigible Graf Zeppelin, after a brief visit at Cardington where it picked up Dr. Hugo Eckener, its commander, started back for Friederichshafen late today. Thousands of spectators witnessed the arrival and departure of the first Zeppelin to visit these shores since the days of the World War.

The Zeppelin was held by a ground crew for 40 minutes and then was released, heading back on its way home.

Twelve years ago the appearance of a Zeppelin over England was a signal of terror. Sirens shrieked a warning. All illumination except search lights, was doused, Londoners ducked for their cellars, anti-aircraft batteries opened up, and swift pursuit planes roared aloft to attack the great fish-like purveyors of death. But today the Graf Zeppelin sailed peacefully over the capital of the British empire and was hailed by thousands.

CABINET MEMBERS TO ERECT COTTAGES AT HOOVER'S CAMP

Wilbur, Hyde and Mitchell Interested in Plan—All Are Anglers.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—At the invitation of President Hoover, members of his Cabinet who often accompany him on week-end fishing trips to the mountains of Virginia, are planning to erect two cottages on the Rapidan River about three-quarters of a mile from the President's camp. Secretary Wilbur, Secretary Hyde and Attorney-General Mitchell, who, like the President, are ardent anglers and woodsmen, are interested in the project.

The two new cottages, each of which will have a large living room, bedroom and bath, will provide additional accommodations for members of the Cabinet at the camp and enable the President to include a greater number of his friends on these outings. The cottages will be located in a beautiful grove of trees.

FORT WORTH FLYER WHO SET ENDURANCE RECORD, KILLED

James Kelly Crashes With Plane Near Alvord, Tex.; Companion Also Fatally Hurt.

By the Associated Press.

FORT WORTH, Tex., April 26.—James Kelly, the endurance flyer, was killed in an airplane crash near Alvord, Tex., tonight.

G. W. Mennis, also of Fort Worth, was killed. C. W. Williams of Keota, Ok., was injured seriously. The other passenger, "Red" Rass of Oklahoma City, was not injured.

The plane ran into a storm and crashed five miles northwest of Alvord.

Reports from Alvord said the plane was piloted by Kelly. It was owned by Mennis, a student of the former co-holder of the world's endurance flight record. The ship left Oklahoma City at 5:15 P. M. for Fort Worth with three passengers.

Kelly and Reg Robbins, last May 29, set a world's record for endurance flying in the "Fort Worth." Their time was 172 hours and four minutes. They were forced to land by a broken propellor.

WARDEN BLAMES LEGISLATURE FOR PRISON DISASTER

"PROMISES WERE NEVER FULFILLED"

In Answering Convicts Charges of Brutal Treatment, He Says It Never Has Been Used.

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., April 26.—Ohio's Legislatures alone have been responsible for the State's overcrowded prisons and for the maintenance of fire traps such as that in which 320 Ohio Penitentiary convicts lost their lives Monday, Warden Preston E. Thomas declared today before the Governor's investigating committee.

Thomas declared that for 12 years he had importuned the Legislatures to provide relief measures; that he had been promised everything and had received nothing.

Laws were passed, he declared, which increased minimum sentences and filled the prisons to overflowing because no means was provided to care for the long-timers.

Better Than Fire Drills.

Replying to inferences that fire drills should have been held at the prison, the Warden said that he never heard of a prison which followed that procedure. He contended that order and discipline in true military fashion are maintained at the Ohio Penitentiary and that they amount to more than fire drills.

Thomas commented on the accusations of convicts that he had permitted them to be brutally treated. "That is something that is not practiced in the penitentiary," he declared.

Alleged instances of brutality is foreign to the purpose of the investigating committee and will not be considered in its report, Attorney-General Gilbert Bettman declared today.

Chief Deputy Testifies.

The first of a long line of witnesses summoned by the Warden were called to the stand. Among them was J. C. Woodard, Chief Deputy Warden and chief disciplinarian at the penitentiary. He testified that during the 17 years he has served as chief deputy he knew of no instances of unwarranted, severe punishment.

Through Guard Sergeant Hostetter it was established that a fire watch was maintained at night, as well as in the day time at the cell block building in which the prisoners died.

First-hand information from convicts of their attitude toward rioting and of their reasons for sullenness and hate were obtained by Perry Cragg, staff photographer for the Cleveland News, who today went inside with the convicts and conversed with many of the prisoners.

"Big Jim" Morton, notorious Cleveland bank robber, told Cragg, "we don't want to start anything. We don't want bloodshed. It's the fellows on the outside who are trying to agitate us."

MOVE TO BLOCK 15-YEAR COUNTY WATER MONOPOLY

Metropolitan Development Committee Withdraws Proviso That Greater City Buy Plant.

WILL TRY TO EVOLVE SOME OTHER PLAN

Contract for Sale of Property at $3,000,000 Above Valuation "Materially Alters Situation."

The water service plan for the proposed City of Greater St. Louis recommended by a subcommittee of a citizens' advisory group has been rejected by the City and County Metropolitan Development Committee on the ground that the prospective sale of St. Louis County Water Co. has "materially altered the situation."

By this action, which is understood to have been decided upon at an executive meeting Friday, the committee withdraws an extraordinary arrangement for protection of the county water company from municipal competition for 15 years in case the Greater City did not buy its plant at a price satisfactory to its owners—an arrangement which it has been said probably induced the Commonwealth Utilities Corporation of Philadelphia to contract to pay $8,250,000 for the water company, or $3,000,000 in excess of the State's valuation of the property.

The Metropolitan Committee announced that after a discussion of the subcommittee's report on water, "The Committee felt that by reason of the prospective sale of the property of the St. Louis County Water Co. the situation has been materially altered. It has therefore decided to make a new study of the matter with a view to seeing if it is not possible to provide for the prompt acquisition of the water company at a price fair to the public and to the stockholders of the company."

Original Plan Opposed.

The sentiment of the Metropolitan Committee is understood to have been overwhelmingly against the subcommittee's recommendation which provided, first, that the Greater City might purchase the water company by agreement at a valuation fixed by the State Public Service Commission; and, second, that until so purchased, the municipal waterworks should not compete with the private company for 15 years.

The significance of the recommended plan from the standpoint of the prospective buyers of the water company was pointed out by Joseph H Grand, city attorney of University City and representative of the County League of Municipalities, in protesting to the Public Service Commission against the approval of the sale at a hearing at Jefferson City last Tuesday. He pointed out, as was shown in the Post-Dispatch last Sunday, that the owners of the water company would not be obliged to sell to the Greater City if the valuation fixed by the commission was unsatisfactory to them, and that failing to purchase the private company, the Greater City would be obliged not to extend its municipal service to those of its citizens residing in the area now served by the private company.

Fears Exploiting of Property.

Grand charged, as did Associate City Counselor Ferris of St. Louis, that the prospect of transferring the water plant to the new municipality at a high price, or meanwhile collecting excessive rates without fear of competition, was the basis of the Philadelphia company's willingness to pay an exorbitant price for the property. Ferris charged that without exploiting the property at the expense of the consumers the new owners could not expect to obtain a reasonable return on the purchase price.

In fact, it has been pointed out, the County Company's plant would not be necessary for the supplying of water to St. Louis County. The new St. Louis waterworks on the Missouri River was designed to provide capacity for all of the county. The City of St. Louis has the right to sell water in the county and the county company has no exclusive privileges.

The Commonwealth Corporation's application to buy the water company was taken under advisement by the Commission.

If this sale should be approved, the new owners undoubtedly would not willingly sell to the municipality for less than they paid and it would be natural for them to demand a profit.

SENATE GROUP INDORSES BILL TO CURB LABOR INJUNCTIONS

Measure Approved by Subcommittee Also Provides for Jury Trials in Cases of Contempt Not Committed in Open Court.

DIRECTED AT 'YELLOW DOG' CONTRACTS

U. S. Judges Would Be Barred From Acting as Complainant, Prosecutor and Jury in Citations Against Newspapers.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—The Shipstead bill, which proposes to curb the issuance of injunctions by Federal Judges in labor disputes, and which would provide for jury trials in all cases of contempt not committed in open court, will be favorably reported to the full Senate Judiciary Committee Monday by a subcommittee which has been engaged in drafting it for months.

The measure is more sweeping than any heretofore offered for the purpose of remedying the "injunction evil." It will be strenuously opposed by organizations of employers and other foes of organized labor, and there is doubt that it will be considered by the Senate and House at this session of Congress. Organized opposition already has succeeded in delaying its presentation for approximately two years.

Features of Proposed Legislation.

Among the features of the bill, the following are outstanding:

A declaration of policy, on which Congress would declare the right of labor to organize, to be represented by agents of its own choosing, and to authorize those agents to negotiate for wages and working conditions; together with a similar declaration of the right of employers to do equivalent things.

A provision to prohibit the issuance of injunctions based on "yellow dog" contracts—a form of agreement which workers in some industries are required to sign before being employed, under which they promise not to join a labor union, or to engage in other activities of which their employers disapprove.

A clause prohibiting the issuance of injunctions that would restrain workers from quitting their jobs or joining a labor organization; that would restrain workers from receiving benefits, insurance or other material assistance during labor disputes, or that would restrain others from rendering such assistance.

Publicity of Facts Guaranteed.

A clause prohibiting injunctions that would restrain workers from making public the facts involved in disputes with their employers, or that would restrain workers from acts of "conspiracy," except when it was shown that the enjoined persons actually participated in or ratified such a conspiracy.

A section providing that no temporary restraining order shall remain in force for longer than five days.

A provision, equivalent to the Vandenburg bill, recently offered as a separate measure, that would prohibit any Federal Judge from hearing a case of contempt alleged to have been committed against his own court, unless it actually occurred in his presence. This is designed to end the notorious practice, often employed against newspapers, whereby the presiding Judge acts as the complaining witness, the prosecutor, the jury and Judge. It would provide for the designation of another Judge, by the presiding Circuit Judge, to hear such trials.

Action on Affidavits Barred.

In addition to the foregoing, the measure would provide that injunctions could issue in labor disputes only after the taking of testimony in open court, and would curb the prevailing widespread practice whereby Federal Judges issue such orders on the strength of mere affidavits presented by one side of the dispute.

Injunctions designed to protect property and prevent disorders

SENATE EXPECTED TO REJECT PARKER AFTER HARD FIGHT

Supreme Court to Hear Labor Injunction Case at Same Time Confirmation Debate Is On.

BORAH REPLIES TO CAROLINAN

Accused in Letter of Playing Politics, Idahoan Says American Principle Is at Stake.

PAUL Y. ANDERSON,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—The long-deferred battle over the confirmation of John J. Parker as Justice of the United States Supreme Court will open on the Senate floor Monday, unless his name is withdrawn before then, which is not expected. A struggle surpassing in intensity that which attended the confirmation of Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes is in prospect.

Parker was nominated by President Hoover more than a month ago. Opposition to confirming him has now reached such proportions in the Senate that rejection is considered likely.

The principal objections raised against Parker are as follows: His opinion upholding an injunction against West Virginia coal miners under the notorious "Yellow Dog" contracts; his disparaging allusions to Negro voters when he was Republican candidate for Governor of North Carolina in 1920; his failure as Prosecutor of alleged war frauds when he was assistant to Attorney-General Harry Daugherty in 1923; and his general judicial qualifications.

Late developments in the backstage conflict which will emerge on the Senate floor Monday were the disclosure today that Federal Judge Johnson J. Haynes of the middle District of North Carolina has been actively lobbying for Parker's confirmation, and the making public by Senator Borah of a letter written by himself to a North Carolina textile manufacturer who had accused Borah of a demagoguery in opposing Parker.

A Washington Coincident.

By an extraordinary coincidence, at the very time when the Senate is engaged in debating Parker's opinion upholding "Yellow Dog" contracts, the Supreme Court a few yards away will be listening to arguments in a case in which another Federal Judge enjoined a railroad company from compelling its employes to sign such contracts.

More significant still is the fact that the Court, on the basis of past performance, may be expected to divide four-to-four, on the issue, which would result in the injunction against "Yellow Dog" contracts being upheld as occurs when the court divides evenly. While this was happening, the Senate would be considering filling the ninth place on the court with a man already committed to the "Yellow Dog" principle.

Federal Judge Haynes' activity in behalf of Parker was bared by Senator Overman (Dem.), North Carolina, who appears to be weakening in his support of the nomination. Overman made public a telegram he had received from Judge Haynes, in which the latter urged Overman to increase his efforts in Parker's behalf, and advanced arguments which might be used in persuading other Senators to support him. Most of them related to Parker's anti-Negro utterances.

Borah on Labor's Rights.

The Borah letter was addressed to Rignal W. Baldwin of Baltimore, who was identified as part owner of a textile mill at Marion, N. C., where bloody riots occurred last year in connection with a strike of mill workers. Baldwin had written Borah, accusing him of opposing Parker in order to get the "labor vote." In his reply, Borah said:

"You state in your letter: 'Labor has rights, and I recognize them. But labor, because of its enormous vote and organization, has thereby no increased rights.' You have stated the proposition well, and with your statement I thoroughly agree. Labor has no rights because of its votes, great or small, but it has rights regardless of its votes.

"If some principle of law and social justice were at stake, you would not, I presume, refuse to support it simply because someone might charge you with seeking labor votes. You would not, I presume, abandon a position which you thought a just one because you happened to be found in company with labor.

"It is very easy, when matters are pending here which involve the rights of labor, for people to say that those who support the cause are demagogues and political cowards. If these same people would devote their rare intellectual attainments to ascertaining just what the question is, and whether or not it is right, they might make a great saving in adjectives and epithets.

"There is involved in this controversy a so-called contract which in my judgment ought to have no place in a free government and can have no place in any defensible system of social justice. It so happens in this instance that labor is interested. But I maintain the public also is interested, and the public welfare is also involved."

The Supreme Court Case.

The injunction to be argued before the Supreme Court Tuesday was issued by Federal Judge Hutchinson of Houston, Tex., against one of the Southern Pacific lines. He held that the imposition of such contracts on employes constituted a violation of the railway labor act. The road appealed to the Circuit Court of Appeals, at New Orleans, which sustained the injunction, whereupon an appeal was taken to the Supreme Court.

Labor will be represented in the argument by Donald Richberg, attorney for the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, and noted as an authority in labor and utility valuation matters.

Tremendous pressure has been exerted on Senators from administration sources within the last few days, in an effort to have Parker confirmed. One Senator reported receiving a message to the effect that he must take his choice between administration favor and the Negro vote in his state. There has been a strenuous campaign to "line up" Southern Democrats by emphasizing Parker's anti-Negro record, and the Klan is said to have become active in his behalf.

Telegrams denying reports that Negroes were being intimidated in North Carolina because the National Association for Advancement of Colored People opposed the appointment of Judge Parker to the Supreme Court were made public today by Senator Overman.

The telegrams were from Gov. O. Max Gardner, Federal Judge John J. Hayes and James H. Ramsay, Salisbury postmaster. They were received as Senate Republican leaders were attempting to line up enough votes to insure confirmation when the appointment is taken up in the Senate next week.

SENATE GROUP FOR CURB ON INJUNCTIONS AGAINST UNION LABOR

could be issued only after local peace officers had testified to their inability to preserve order by the usual means. In no instance could an injunction issue unless it was shown that the injury resulting from failure to issue it would exceed the injury resulting from its issuance.

Complaints applying for restraining orders in labor disputes would be required to prove that they had made every reasonable effort to settle the dispute by negotiating, either personally or through the official machinery provided for mediation and arbitration.

Criminal Contempt Prosecutions.

The provisions governing punishment for criminal contempt relate not only to contempt citations growing out of the issuance of injunctions, but to general prosecutions for criminal contempt. They would authorize any defendant accused of contempt to file a demand that the case be heard by another Judge, "if the contempt arises from an attack on the character or conduct of a Judge, and occurs otherwise than in open court."

The "yellow dog" contract, has been mentioned frequently in the discussion surrounding the nomination of Judge John J. Parker of North Carolina as an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court.

The subcommittee includes Senators Norris of Nebraska and Blaine of Wisconsin, Republicans, and Senator Walsh (Dem.), Montana.

Norris said after the meeting that the bill, if enacted, would "outlaw yellow dog contracts."

Senator Norris said that the bill approved had been drafted to meet existing conditions. He said that all of the many specific restraints that would be placed upon the jurisdiction of the courts had grown out of specific instances of misuse of the power of injunction.

The full committee held extensive hearings on the bill, and appointed the sub-committee to redraft it.

NAVAL DELEGATES CONSENT TO NEW YORK WELCOME

Leviathan Runs Into First Bad Weather as It Passes Mid-Ocean.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 26.—A radiogram from Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of State and leader of the American delegates to the London naval limitation conference, has been received by Police Commissioner Grover A. Whalen, accepting the city's offer to participate in the official welcome to be given the delegates on their arrival here.

The message read: "We have your kind inquiry and should be happy to accept your welcome. Will you kindly send us plans when formulated? Henry L. Stimson."

S. S. LEVIATHAN, April 26.—The homeward-bound American naval delegation, now passed mid-ocean, today struck their first unpleasant weather on their returning voyage. Intermittent squalls and winds kept nearly all passengers indoors.

The Zeiser & Kling Dress Co., occupying the fourth and half of the third floor, was damaged $3500 by water; Beverly Dress Co., third floor, $1500, and the Bruno-O'Meara Clothing Co., second floor, $500.

GANDHI ORDERS SALT DEPOT RAID HE ONCE VETOED

Nationalist Leader Now Willing to Offer His Head, He Tells Crowd at Charvada, India.

By the Associated Press.

BOMBAY, April 26.—Mahatma Gandhi today announced he soon would lead a group to take possession of the Government salt depot at Dharasana.

Previous manifestations sponsored by the Nationalist leader have centered around the manufacture of salt illegally. At the out set of his campaign he ruled out a suggestion that salt depots be raided, fearing Government authorities would fire on the invaders.

Now Gandhi is prepared to offer his head for the cause, he told a crowd at Charvada, whence he had motored from Bulsar. He said he would take with him both men and women, but only those who wore homespun cloth, had given up liquor and boycotted foreign cloth.

The Mahatma made a strong appeal for martyrs, saying he would have been glad had Ramnik Nal—his first supporter—been shot or suffered a broken head instead of having been arrested. He added that he and all his volunteers would present their broken heads to the Government.

He concluded by saying that breaking of the salt act alone would not bring independence, asserting that other acts would have to be violated to attain the desired end.

News from other parts of India showed the country more quiet than recently. Peshawar was orderly and it was said the fierce border tribes living about the city apparently had not been stirred by disturbances in the town. Troops were still on the alert, machine guns were posted at all strategic points and markets were closed.

In the gold fields of Oorgaum strikers burned several buildings and coolies employed in the mines began a general exodus to their own villages.

Two platoons of Assam rifles have arrived at Chittagong to assist in the search for the insurgents who attacked the arsenal there last week.

Unofficial reports say the insurgents have fled from the Hathazari Mountains and that 23 guns, with some ammunition, have been seized by troops.

Viceroy of India Says Gandhi Group "Rejects Way of Peace."

SIMLA, April 26.—Lord Irwin, Viceroy of India, today accepted the resignation of V. J. Patel, speaker of the Legislative Assembly, and discussed Patel's action in the following letter:

"I have to acknowledge receipt of your two letters wherein you submit your resignation from the office of president of the assembly and discuss at length the reasons that led you to that decision.

"Your letters make it plain that your course of action is not one that could be influenced by reasonable argument and it is evident that nothing is to be gained by a detailed reply, nor is it necessary for me to vindicate the officers of my Government against charges which bear on their face their own refutation.

"You have, however, given an account of various conversations you have had with me during the time we were in official relations, and though I am not in a position to question the explanation of your motives and actions must claim to be the best interpreter of my own.

"One conspicuous example of the misunderstanding of the events lies in your belief that it was at your request, or in accordance with your advice, that my government discharged responsibilities in connection with the movement for refusal of payment of land revenue at Bardolita and Luka in 1928.

"I regret that our official connection should be terminated under such circumstances, and can only hope that you and those with whom you once again are to be openly associated may come to realize how grave a wrong you do India by rejecting the way of peace that lies open through a free conference with his majesty's Government in order to encourage your countrymen to deliberate and dangerous defiance of law."

Why the Five-Power Naval Pact Failed

Dwight Morrow that this outcome was avoided.

If the French and Italians did not leave in a particularly happy frame of mind, at least the relations between them and between the French and the English were no worse than they had been before the conference. Franco-English relations were probably better. It meant something of international comity that the three-Power compact was formed without a cavalier slamming of the door against the others. These gains, it is true, were purely negative, but they were gains none the less. How important they were may be gathered by contrasting them with the unfortunate results that followed the break-up of the Geneva conference on a note of irritation in 1927.

No One Villain of the Piece.

It cannot fairly be said that any one nation at London was responsible for the failure to reach a five-Power agreement. There was no single villain of the piece. France, it may be argued, blocked the way with her insistent demand for more security in exchange for any material reduction in her navy. But it cannot be said of France that she introduced an unforeseen obstacle into the conference. She declined even to attend the Geneva conference, and when she agreed to come into the London gathering she put the nations on notice regarding her attitude.

Consistently for the last 10 years France has held to the thesis that the peace of the world must be "organized" through general and regional agreements to use military and economic force against a peace-breaking state. She has contended, moreover, that the subject of land armaments is intertwined with that of naval armaments and that the proper place for the discussion of limitation is at Geneva, under the aegis of the League of Nations. She has long stood for the "global" theory of limitation as against the method of reduction by categories.

France made known her views in her memorandum of last December. They were couched in unmistakable language. It was not her fault that some of the officials of our government believed or pretended to believe that the memorandum was issued for home consumption merely and that France at the conference table would talk in a different key.

France soon showed that she meant precisely what she had said. Her attitude at the conference may have been founded on a wrongheaded doctrine of what constitutes national security, but in her view it was, and is, a doctrine flowing logically from the covenant of the League of Nations. It is beside the point that England holds another opinion of the obligations assumed by members of the League. The point is that the attitude of France was well known in advance and that throughout the conference she pursued a consistent and above-board course.

Rocks and Shoals.

According to the point of view, it might be said that France wrecked the chance of a five-Power agreement by her demand for a new security formula; or that Great Britain wrecked it by (a) her insistence on the two-Power naval standard vis-a-vis the Continent and (b) her refusal to incur new military commitments; or that Italy wrecked it by her demand for parity with France; or that the United States wrecked it by declining to alter her isolationist policy. Taken alone, any one of these reasons for the failure is as good as another. The truth is that all of them interlocked to make a barrier that the delegates found it impossible to get over.

The failure in the last analysis, of course, was due to the state of public opinion in the several countries. Some nations are perhaps willing to take greater risks in the cause of peace than others, but no nation in the present condition of world affairs is willing to go very far. If France demands her security, we demand our isolation, which is another form of security. If Britain demands a navy equal to the largest two Continental navies, we demand parity with Britain. There may be more justification for our claim to parity with Britain than for Italy's claim to parity with France, but you would have a hard time proving it to an Italian. The day may come when the nations will place complete faith in the Kellogg pact, but that millennium has not yet arrived. Meantime, disarmament can only be achieved by slow degrees.

England the Pivot.

The London conference dealt with two triangular problems, with England as a common factor. One problem was to bring America, England and Japan into accord, and the other to make an agreement among England, France and Italy. Though the solution of both was necessary to a rounded compact among the five Powers, they were quite distinct one from another and required different methods of approach. America was interested in the second problem only insofar as the solution might affect the basis of our agreed-upon parity with Britain.

Had the United States and Great Britain alone been concerned, the naval conference need not have lasted a week. Since parity between the two had been agreed upon, no political principles were involved. The outlines of a tonnage agreement had been drawn in the conversations last summer between Ambassador Dawes and Prime Minister MacDonald and later between President Hoover and MacDonald. Between the two nations there was a genuine will to agree—that was the important thing.

Winning Over Japan.

Britain and the United States having reached an agreement—and reached it in a manner auguring well for future relations between the two countries—it remained to complete the triangle by bringing in Japan. Japan at Washington received a 60 per cent ratio in capital ships. She came to London asking for 70 per cent in auxiliary tonnage, and particularly in the heavy cruiser category.

How to satisfy Japan and yet not go so far as to endanger the treaty in the Senate was a nice problem. Its solution reflects credit on both delegations and especially on Ambassador Matsudaira and Senator Reed. These two delegates, who had known each other at Washington, sat down together day after day till they had worked out a formula acceptable to themselves and their colleagues.

It was not an easy task. From our point of view, the trouble lay in the fact that we had little except blue prints to match against Japan's completed cruiser fleet. We were asking Japan to stand still and let us catch up. This in effect is what the agreement provides for. Except for some replacements, Japan practically ties herself to the post for the next six years. She gets, however, her 70 per cent in the light cruiser and destroyer categories and she gets parity in submarines. In the 8 inch-gun cruiser category, she gets only 60 per cent of the total allowed the United States, but during the life of the treaty, owing to retarded building by the United States, she will have about 72 per cent of the American total actually afloat.

A Fair Settlement.

Japan comes into the battleship arrangement by agreeing to put one of her 10 capital ships out of commission, so that her ratio in this class will remain at the Washington treaty figure of 60 per cent. The agreement represents concessions on both sides. It is fair to both and fits smoothly into the Anglo-American agreement.

The three-cornered pact, considering all the circumstances, is probably as satisfactory as could reasonably have been expected. It is a far better arrangement than was ever in prospect at Geneva three years ago. Britain there asked for 70 cruisers. At London she came down to 50. Like Japan, Britain pegs her navy at approximately its present strength and allows the United States the opportunity to build up.

One Insurmountable Hurdle.

The second triangle could not be completed. Ramsay MacDonald went as far as he dared in offering France a security formula. Nothing that he proposed was sufficient to bring down the French tonnage figures. The search for a formula went on for weeks and finally narrowed down to an effort to interpret Article 16 of the League of Nations covenant in a way that would reconcile the conflicting British and French conceptions of the obligations imposed by the covenant. The problem was to find a formula sufficiently weak to satisfy British opinion—which at the moment is almost as isolationist as that of America—and sufficiently strong to satisfy France.

Britain interprets the article as giving each nation complete freedom in determining whether or not to bring military action against an offending state. France stands for the automatic application of sanctions in certain cases. No form of words, except they were equivocal words with mischief-making possibilities for the future would have squared the British view with the French.

The consultative pact proposal of the American delegation was not made in response to any suggestion from the French. The Americans had been told by the French, in fact, that no such pact in itself would take a ton off their demands. The proposal was made as an aid to MacDonald in his effort to satisfy the French. When this effort was abandoned, the consultative pact—to the relief of the American delegates—passed out of the picture.

Where France and Italy Clash.

France's demand for a new security compact was motivated by her growing rivalry with Italy. There is bad blood between these two on many counts. Chief of these is the aggressive attitude of Italy in seeking to expand her African colonial possesisons. That is another story, which will be dealt with in a later article. Suffice it for the present that the Mediterranean problem more than any other caused the breakdown of the effort to reach a five-Power limitation agreement.

Italy's demand for parity with France has been referred to. It was advanced from the first hour of the conference and was never modified. National prestige was here at stake. Though Italy has no plans for building up to the French level, she declined to say the word that would have labeled her an inferior power. She had received parity with France in capital ships at the Washington conference and would take no less in auxiliary tonnage. Italy never produced tonnage figures. All that she would say when pressed to do so was that she would cut to as low a level as France.

France pointed out that because of the necessary dispersal of her fleet on three fronts, parity with Italy would mean French inferiority in the Mediterranean. France was as firm in her refusal to grant parity as Italy was insistent in claiming it. The irresistible force had encountered the immovable body.

Always hanging over the conference was this Franco-Italian problem. Even if the Franco-British difficulty had been solved, this would still have remained. Whether the conference could have coped with it successfully can only be conjectured.

M'DONALD MAKES REPORT TO LEAGUE ON NAVAL PARLEY

Advance in Limitation of Tonnages Achieved at Conference, He Informs the Secretariat.

GENEVA, April 26.—Interest in disarmament again is centered in Geneva with the receipt at the League of Nations Secretariat of J. Ramsay MacDonald's report on the London naval conference and the preliminary announcement of the program of the Arbitration and Security Committee, which meets Monday.

MacDonald transmitted copies of the London treaty, minutes of the plenary sessions and reports of the conference committees with the request that they be transmitted to Chairman Loudon of the Preparatory Commission and to members of the twenty-eight governmental delegations interested.

He pointed out in a note that the three-Power naval treaty was so drawn as to make the decision regarding tonnage consistent with the scheme of limitation on which the French and British, who heretofore at the League conferences differed, were now agreed.

"The London naval conference represents an advance on results heretofore achieved in this particular field: The limitation of naval tonnages," he concluded. "It is our earnest hope that the preparatory commission will find in the results of our work a contribution which will have its effects in facilitating its future labors."

MacDonald's explanations to the League that the conference cleared away many obstacles which confronted the Preparatory Commission is interpreted as an indication that Britain will throw her full support to Germany and neutral states in pressing for an immediate general disarmament action by the League.

Eric Colban, chief of the disarmament section and the League's official observer at London, arrived yesterday, and the technical problems connected with the early summoning of the preparatory commission were tackled immediately.

CITES BASS CASE AS WARNING TO INSURANCE FIRMS

State Superintendent Thompson Denounces Scant Inquiry Before Issuing $200,000 Policy.

URGES EXTENSION OF HIS POWERS

Plans to Notify Companies Operating in Missouri to Discourage Slack Investigations.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, April 26. — Lax methods of investigating applications for life insurance, such as permitted Dr. A. J. Bass of Columbia, to have $200,000 in life insurance issued to William R. Pearman, Columbia (Mo.) automobile mechanic, under the name of William Folta, who was subsequently murdered by Dr. Bass in a plot to collect the insurance, were severely criticised today by State Insurance Superintendent Joseph B. Thompson.

After learning of the scant inquiry made by the insurance companies before issuing the insurance, disclosed yesterday by the Post - Dispatch, Superintendent Thompson announced he would send a letter of warning to all life insurance companies under his supervision in Missouri, insisting that they exercise extraordinary care in investigating all applications for life insurance.

The inquiry made by the companies, as told in the Post-Dispatch, produced only information furnished by Dr. Bass who became the beneficiary of the insurance, and by references furnished by Dr. Bass, who learned what they knew about "Folta" from Bass. Since confessing the crime, Dr. Bass has signed releases invalidating the four policies, for $50,000 each, which were issued by the Lincoln National Life Insurance Co. of Fort Wayne, Ind. The Lincoln National carried $50,000 of the amount and had reinsured the remainder in three other companies.

Opens Way for Fraud.

"Such loose methods make the companies subject to fraudulent schemes," Thompson said. "We have no direct control by law over the methods of the companies in investigating applications, but under the general powers of the department may insist on proper precautions in writing insurance.

"This department must register its vigorous protest against this sort of practice. Indiscriminate acceptance of risks means high mortality and great losses, and permits the carrying out of a conspiracy that results in murder.

"I cannot too strongly urge and direct companies doing business in Missouri to allow this ghastly Pearman case to serve as a warning that inspection, which precedes the issuing of a policy, should be conducted with extraordinary care. Competition for business is one thing. Reckless and haphazard acceptance of it is quite another."

Thompson said he believed most of the insurance companies carefully investigated applications, but added that he considered it his "plain duty to criticise the laxity disclosed by the circumstances in which the "Folta" policies were issued.

Hard to Penalize Loose Methods.

All life insurance companies operating in Missouri are licensed by the State Insurance Department, which has general supervision over the companies, except as to their rates. The department examines the companies, licenses their agents and supervises reserves required to be created by the companies to protect their Missouri business. Stipulated premium companies and those which register their policies deposit their reserves with the department. Certain other companies keep the reserves in their own possession, under department supervision.

The provisions of the law are such, Thompson said that action to revoke the license of a company for loose methods in conducting its business could not be taken, unless examination showed the company to be insolvent.

Superintendent Thompson said the department had no authority over inspection bureaus maintained in various cities of the State, to check insurance applications for the companies. The "Folta" application was referred to such a bureau by an agent of the Lincoln National Life in Kansas City, after Dr. Bass had taken "Folta" to the agent to make the application.

Thompson said the department kept no record of such inspection bureaus, had no power to examine them or regulate their methods. He said nearly all the life insurance companies utilized the services of such bureaus, and that the law should be altered so as to give the department some control over them.

Thompson said he believed most of the insurance companies carefully investigated applications, but added that he considered it his "plain duty to criticise the laxity disclosed by the circumstances in which the "Folta" policies were issued.

Hard to Penalize Loose Methods.

All life insurance companies operating in Missouri are licensed by the State Insurance Department, which has general supervision over the companies, except as to their rates. The department examines the companies, licenses their agents and supervises reserves required to be created by the companies to protect their Missouri business. Stipulated premium companies and those which register their policies deposit their reserves with the department. Certain other companies keep the reserves in their own possession, under department supervision.

The provisions of the law are such. Thompson said that action to revoke the license of a company for loose methods in conducting its business could not be taken, unless examination showed the company to be insolvent.

Superintendent Thompson said the department had no authority over inspection bureaus maintained in various cities of the State, to check insurance applications for the companies. The "Folta" application was referred to such a bureau by an agent of the Lincoln National Life in Kansas City, after Dr. Bass had taken "Folta" to the agent to make the application.

Thompson said the department kept no record of such inspection bureaus, had no power to examine them or regulate their methods. He said nearly all the life insurance companies utilized the services of such bureaus, and that the law should be altered so as to give the department some control over them.

related to the family of the present Lord Reading.

Miss Ireland and Jules Nahoum were married quietly in Philadelphia in 1917. One son was born to them, Felix Nahoum, now 11 years old. Mrs. Nahoum and her boy live in Westwood, a suburb of Los Angeles.

The one fear of Jules Nahoum as he sits in his cell is that his son will hear the story. His wife knows, but both father and mother are pledged to keep the tale from their boy.

The plump white hands of Nahoum played nervously with a stub of a pencil and a pad of paper. He began to tell the story of his business relations. He jotted down figures. It was a complicated tale of intricate finance.

For five hours, steadily, that tale went on, taken down by a stenographer. Nahoum has an astounding memory for figures and names and places. Through the tale cropped out the names of those with whom he had had business dealings, among them Earl Harding, formerly of the New York World, one of the active editorial figures in the second and successful campaign of Woodrow Wilson for President; State Senator Bettwy of Arizona; Louis Whitney, Mayor of Phoenix, Ariz., and former Assistant Attorney-General of Arizona; Mrs. Jeanne Carpenter, director of the Women's Naturalized Citizens' Division of the New York State Republican Committee.

First Meeting With Partners.

Nahoum says he first met the two American-born Mexican citizens, who became his partners, in the office of the John Hays Hammond organization in New York.

By his own word, at this time, Nahoum had made his mark in finance. He tells of having handled $25,000,000 worth of business in one year. Finally he went into business with these two men. They were interested in the rich delta of the Yaqui Valley in Sonora, Mexico, where, roughly, John Hays Hammond interests and the Harry Payne Whitney interests controlled one-third each and Nahoum and his partners the other third. Nahoum became president and general manager of the West Coast Trading Co. and the Compania Arricera Rio Yaqui, both at Cajeme in Sonora. He went down there to develop a rice mill.

"When I landed in Cajeme in 1924," says Nahoum, "there was a one-room wooden railroad station in the desert, one little rice and flour mill, one brick warehouse, one little three-room house owned by an American, one shack restaurant operated by a Chinaman, and half a dozen palm shacks. When I wanted to eat at the Chinaman's that ended work for the day. I had to wade hip-deep in mud to get to him.

"There in Cajeme I built the largest rice mill in Mexico. Cajeme now has a population of 9500. I made that town.

Charge Preposterous, He Says.

"Why should I, who have handled millions, who have borrowed $400,000 on my signature at the California Bank of Los Angeles, embezzle a mere $60,000? It is preposterous.

"I did no more than business men and financiers are doing in New York and London and Paris and Berlin and Chicago this very day. To have that bring a conviction for embezzlement is preposterous as to have the multiplication table explode in your face."

Interminable in its windings the tale goes on. It takes hours to finish. And then this Jules Nahoum, goes back to the Book of Nahum out of the Old Testament—the book that was the vision of Nahum the Elkoshite, his ancestor.

"Jehovah is slow to anger," he quotes, "and great in power and will by no means clear the guilty . . . Jehovah is good, a stronghold in the day of trouble and he knoweth them that take refuge in him . . . Though they (the enemy) be in full strength and likewise many, even so shall they be cut down. . . Though I have afflicted thee I shall afflict thee no more . . . And new will I break his yoke off thee, and will burst thy bonds in sunder."

MISSOURI SHERIFF SHOT BY KIDNAPING SUSPECT

Ed Spickard of Grundy County Wounded After Arresting Pair at Trenton.

By the Associated Press.

TRENTON, Mo., April 26.—Sheriff Ed Spickard of Grundy County was shot here today by two men whom he had arrested as suspected kidnapers and robbers at the railroad station where they were waiting for a train. The two men escaped in a stolen automobile.

Early this afternoon Grant L. Stengel, a taxicab driver from Kansas City, was found bound and gagged, on a highway near Edinburg, Mo., five miles west of here. He said he had been kidnaped last night in Kansas City by two men in an automobile.

The cab driver said he was thrown out at the place on the highway where he was discovered this afternoon.

The kidnaping was reported to Spickard. He noticed the two men near the railroad station here and thought their descriptions tallied with those of the alleged kidnapers. While he was searching one of the men from whom he said he took a revolver, the other man shot him. The bullet penetrated his left shoulder. Physicians said they did not believe the wound would prove fatal.

The two men fled on foot and a short time later, Charles Lewis, a brakeman, reported two men held him up on the road and stole his car.

Two carloads of vigilantes, armed with shotguns set out in pursuit, and police at St. Joseph were requested to aid in the search.

MILITARY BURIAL FOR DEPUTY KILLED FIGHTING HOLDUP MAN

About 1000 Persons Attend Funeral Services for William Goericke.

Deputy Sheriff William Goericke of St. Louis County, who was killed Wednesday night in an exchange of shots with holdup men, was burried with military honors yesterday in Sunset Burial Park. About 1000 persons, including St. Louis County officials and police, attended the funeral.

Services were held a Kirkwood Episcopal Church. The Sixth Regiment Band from Jefferson Barracks played at the cemetery. Goericke was a member of the Austin and Floyd Key Post of the American Legion and was a First Sergeant in Company L of the One Hundred and Thirty-eighth Infantry during the war.

LIQUIDATION OF NEGRO INSURANCE FIRM ORDERED

Midwest Life Put in Hands of Agent by Court Following Suggestion of Its Officers.

Troubles of the Midwest Life Insurance Co., Negro organization with $1,500,000 insurance in force, taken over by the State for liquidation yesterday, were related by one of its directors, the Rev. B. F. Abbott, pastor of Union Memorial M. E. Church, 208 North Leffingwell avenue.

"Financial embarrassment—that's the reason we're going out of business," said the Rev. Mr. Abbott, a leader in Negro circles. More in sorrow than in anger, the preacher-director mentioned a white insurance broker, formerly connected with the now defunct International Life Insurance Co.

Blames Broker.

"He helped to get us in bad," continued the clergyman. "He promised to help us a year ago last March by hypothecating some securities the company owned. He hypothecated them all right and raised $22,000, but he gave the company only $7000 and kept $15,- for himself. We're thinking about bringing some pressure on him; we may have to sue him.

"The company has had several changes of management. Unfortunately, the first management was not very good. The present officers have been on the job about a year and have been working hard, but we were embarrassing the State Insurance Department so we decided to liquidate.

"Frozen assets? Yes, we had them, too. Mostly first mortgages on property in St. Louis and around Missouri and Oklahoma. We're working out some plans and if liquidation is not forced, nobody will lose anything."

Organized Eight Years Ago.

The Midwest Co., organized in Kansas City eight years ago, was having financial struggles when it was brought here in 1925 and merged with the Douglas Life Insurance Co., a Negro organization which had been forbidden to operate by the State Insurance Department. Negroes were urged as a matter of racial pride to subscribe for Midwest insurance stock. The home offices were at 2803 Pine street in a large converted residence with an observatory at the top. There were about 30 employes.

Following adoption by the directors of a resolution favoring liquidation of the business, State Insurance Supt. Thompson yesterday filed a petition before Circuit Judge Pearcy, alleging the firm was insolvent and its continued operation would be hazardous to the public and to policyholders. Judge Pearcy appointed Adolph Thym, an attorney, as a temporary agent to wind up the company's affairs.

Reinsurance Likely.

Policyholders will be protected against loss and probably will be reinsured with some other company, but stockholders may lose something, according to James K. Coolidge of Jefferson City and Fred J. Hoffmeister of St. Louis, attorneys representing Supt. Thompson. The company's books are in such shape as to make it difficult to determine the exact condition of the company. Coolidge attributed the failure to inexperience and frequent changes in management.

The company was licensed to operate in Missouri, Arkansas and Tennessee. It has $12,000 in unpaid death claims, protected, however, by a reserve fund of $140,000 on deposit with the Missouri Insurance Department.

In addition to the death claims and $100,000 capital stock, liabilities include $40,000 of borrowed money and $20,000 in current bills. Assets total about $200,000, including the Pine street property, appraised at $108,000 and mortgaged for $30,000, and real estate and mortgages in Missouri and Oklahoma.

Most of the capital stock is owned by the St. Louis Underwriters' Association, a holding company for the Midwest, according to the Rev. Mr. Abbott. Officers of the Midwest are: J. T. Wilson, president; J. L. Cohron, treasurer; A. C. Maclin, secretary. Directors, besides the Rev. Mr. Abbott, are the officers, W. H. Edwards and L. S. Williams, an undertaker.

MUSKOGEE, Ok., April 26. — David S. Smith and his brother, George, both of Connecticut, were slain in a hotel room here tonight by two men who, other members of the Smith party said, were robbers.

John L. Wike who was traveling with the Smith brothers was bound and gagged and the fourth member of the party, W. H. Seeley, who was in the bath room, was not molested. The Smith brothers, Wike and Seeley are loan brokers, traveling through Oklahoma on business. Other persons in the hotel said they heard no shots.

SALESMAN GOT YOUNGS TO REPAY CLIENTS' MONEY

K L Rundberg, Jefferson City, Says He Recovered Nearly $150,000 for His Customers.

By the Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, April 26. — One stock salesman for Young & Bros., Inc., of St. Louis, who became doubtful in 1929 of the stability of "the house that Youngs built," and the high pressure methods of selling stock, managed to recover the money paid for the firm's stock by all but one of his clients, in the vicinity of Jefferson City, totaling nearly $150,000, and resigned last October, nearly six months before the firm collapsed.

This salesman, Karl L. Rundberg, former manager of the Jefferson City branch of the firm, managed to protect his clients by methods varying from pleas that the clients needed ready money, to suggesting to the clients that they turn over to the postal auhorities written guaranetes to refund made by the Youngs—a method that readily produced the money.

Sale of Young Bros. preferred stock, which was not registered in compliance with the State blue sky law, was begun about June or July of 1929, Rundberg said. The Youngs wrote to their salesmen to pick out their best customers and give them a chance to buy this stock, as a reward for their business, Rundberg said. The salesmen were informed the stock was registered under the law, he said.

Rundberg said his doubt as to the methods of the company, that had developed during 1929, was strengthened when Fred Young and Blodgett Priest of St. Louis, one of the firm's attorneys, came here early in October, 1928, in response to a call from Securities Commissioner F. T. Stockard. Rundberg said they told him they were in Jefferson City to see about registration of another security, but Stockard later told him he had threatened to issue a cease and desist order against the firm for selling its unregistered preferred stock. Stockard told him, he said, that the firm had promised him to refund on demand the money paid for such stock and the threatened order was not issued.

After the conference Fred Young and Priest held with Stockard, Rundberg said, he received a message from the firm telling him not to make any further sales of Young Bros. preferred stock for the time being, because unexpectedly large orders had over-subscribed the issue. The threat by Stockard, and the fact the stock was unregistered, and was not to be sold for that reason, was not mentioned, he said. Rundberg said he resigned a few days later on Oct. 8, 1929.

For several months previously, he said, he had gradually obtained refunds for all of his clients except one, over protests from the Youngs that he had too many "sell-backs" and was not pushing sales. This was done by Rundberg suggesting the clients needed the money temporarily and would re-invest later, or wanted the money for new deals. Some of this stock had been sold on written guarantees by the firm and others on oral promises that a market for it would be maintained, at the purchase price. When the firm demurred at so many sales back to the company Rundberg said he told the firm that if quick service could be given on such refunds, he could keep the business of the clients.

One client in Callaway County, who held $21,000 in stock purchased from Youngs, was urged to sell it back last October and promised to do so but changed his mind after the Youngs visited him Rundberg said. He is still holding the stock.

GETS 30 DAYS FOR NOT PAYING $285 IN ALIMONY

A sentence of 30 days in jail for contempt of court in nonpayment of alimony was imposed by Judge William F. Borders of the City Court in East St. Louis yesterday upon William McCord, a mechanic. The judgment permitted McCord to escape the sentence if he could furnish security for $285 alimony in arrears and five years' future payments at $30 each month.

His divorced wife, Jennie, testified he had paid her only $45 since May, 1928. McCord said he had been unemployed and was not able to pay.

PARTIAL ECLIPSE OF SUN VISIBLE HERE TOMORROW STARTING AT 12:37 P. M.

Solar Phenomenon to Reach Its Height at 1:59 P. M.—Totality to Be Observed in Northwest.

An eclipse of the sun will take place tomorrow when the moon becomes exactly interposed between the earth and sun, and the great lunar shadow runs across North America.

In St. Louis the phenomenon will appear as a partial eclipse, beginning at 12:37 p. m., lasting two hours and 39 minutes, and reaching its height at 1:59 p. m., when about 56 per cent of the sun's disk will be blotted out. It should be observed through smoked glasses or a photographic negative. If a piece of cardboard with a pinhole in it is held before the sun about a foot from another piece of cardboard an image of the eclipse will be projected on the second cardboard. The image will become clearer and smaller as the cardboards are moved together.

Although the eclipse will be partial all over the United States, it will be total only along a narrow path in California, Nevada, Idaho and Montana. The path of totality will begin in the Pacific Ocean southwest of San Francisco and will end near Butte, Mont. Over extensions of this path, the eclipse will be annular, that is, a luminous ring of the sun will be exposed, as the edge of a nickel would be exposed if a penny were placed before it.

Eclipse Partial in St. Louis.

Dr. Jessica M. Young, Washington University astronomer, explains that the eclipse will be partial here, as St. Louis will lie within the shadow of the penumbra, or outer shadow. In those portions of the Western States over which the shadow cone of the umbra, or true shadow of the moon is trailed, the sun will be completely obliterated. Although the moon is only 2160 miles in diameter, it can hide the sun, which is 866,400 miles in diameter, because it is only 240,000 miles from earth, whereas the sun is 93,000,000 miles away.

While solar eclipses are common, occurring more than once a year on the average, they are visible only in parts of the earth, usually on oceans or inaccessible lands. At only two brief intervals each year is the new moon so nearly exactly between the earth and sun that a solar eclipse may occur; for half of the year the moon, as seen from the earth, is slightly north of the sun, and for the other half, slightly south.

At California observatories, astronomers are preparing to make photographic and spectroscopic observations of the corona, or halo of radiance, and the chromosphere, a gaseous envelope around the sun from which titanic jets of hydrogen flame occasionally gush forth. Quick action will be required, as the total eclipse will endure, at its maximum, only a second and a half, in any given place.

To Use Plane for Snapshot.

An attempt to photograph the shadow from an oxygen-equipped army airplane will be made near Honey Lake, Cal.

Spectroscopic examinations of the corona have revealed a light ray of a peculiar yellow-green hue which has not been identified with light emitted from any known substance on earth. As accepted ideas of the constitution of matter do not admit of unknown gases, astronomers think they may identify this ray with one of the known gases in electrical excitation. They hope also to learn whether the corona is reflected sunlight, and if so, what causes it.

In antiquity, eclipses were thought to express divine wrath or the distress of nature at earthly calamities. Thus Greek legends told that darkness shrouded the land at the deaths of Prometheus, Hercules, Aesculapius, Alexander the Great and other heroes. Romans say the earth was darkened after the deaths of Romulus and Julius Caesar.

In New England in the seventeenth century, Increase Mather maintained an eclipse evidenced nature's sorrow at the death of President Chauncey of Harvard College.

20 Astronomers at Camptonville, Cal., to Photograph Eclipse.

By the Associated Press.

CAMPTONVILLE, Cal., April 26—Twenty astronomers have made plans to photograph the eclipse of the sun by the moon here next Monday.

From Lick Observatory there will be four telescopic cameramen in addition to Dr. J. H. Moore and Dr. D. H. Menzel, who will man the spectroscopes, and about 12 observers.

Prof. C. B. Blain and assistants from the University of Nevada and four observers and cameramen from Johns Hopkins University have staked out vantage points in the line of shadow.

This is the first time astronomers have had to be concerned with a precise calculation of the path of the eclipse shadow. Usually it is 75 to 150 miles wide but this time the moon is so far from the earth the shadow will be only about a half mile wide. Its course was computed years ago and corrected recently by two Yale astronomers. The two Yale professors were 128 feet apart in their calculations so Lick authorities set down their spectroscopes midway between the two computations.

3000 LIQUOR CASES QUASHED IN MICHIGAN UNDER NEW ACT

DETROIT, Mich., April 26.—That the State Supreme Court's ruling on the new State dry law, wiped approximately 3000 cases instead of 1000 cases as originally estimated, from the Recorder's court docket, came to light today when the formality of dismissing the cases was gone through.

The high court declared the Cuthbertson act is not retroactive, and that since it replaced the earlier dry statute, there is no law under which prohibition cases filed prior to Aug. 28, 1929, may be tried.

Prosecuting Attorney James E. Chenot made a single motion before Judge Henry S. Sweeney, presiding Judge, which dismissed all of the 3000 cases, some of them dating back as far as May, 1918.

SAGER GETS TWO YEARS IN PRISON ON BRIBE CHARGE

Former St. Louis Circuit Attorney Was Found Guilty of Paying Juror in Federal Trial.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 26.—Three lawyers convicted three weeks ago of charges growing out of the investigation of the hung jury in the Utah Lead mail fraud trial, were sentenced to the Federal Penitentiary at Atlanta today by Federal Judge John C. Knox.

Arthur N. Sager, former Circuit Attorney of St. Louis and later an Assistant United States Attorney-General, received a two-year term for each of the three counts on which he was convicted, the first two sentences to run concurrently and the third to be suspended during good behavior.

Judge Knox also disqualified him forever from holding any position of honor or trust in the United States Government.

Joseph Shalleck and Edward H. Reynolds, who were convicted only of conspiracy—Sager was convicted also of bribing a juror—were sentenced to two years and 18 months, respectively. The sentences were stayed for two weeks and bail of $2500 each continued, pending appeals.

Judge Knox said imposing sentence was difficult because he had known all three men for years.

The Utah Lead case ended in a mistrial with one juror, John Cruz, holding out for acquittal. Questioning by United States Attorney Charles H. Tuttle brought a confession from Cruz that he had received $310 to hold out for an acquittal. The juror implicated the defense attorneys and Murray Wechsler, a Federal Court Bailiff. Wechsler confessed to acting as intermediary and both he and Cruz testified at the trial for the Government. Neither was indicted.

Conrad Budke, 14-year-old son of Mrs. Conrad Budke, a widow, of 9 Sylvester avenue, Webster Groves, was accidentally shot in the back yesterday afternoon by a boy companion with whom he was hunting for frogs.

Conrad had spent the day with his grandmother who lives near Chautauqua, Ill., and his companion on the hunting excursion was a boy of the neighborhood. They both carried .22-caliber rifles.

A doctor who was boating nearby on the Mississippi River, administered first aid and took the youth to St. Elizabeth's hospital in Granite City. Examination there disclosed that the bullet had penetrated his liver.

SUIT TO INTERPRET MRS. M'MILLAN'S WILL

Heirs Seek Distribution of Lapsed Annuities Under $2,000,000 Trust.

Lapsed annuities in the $2,000,000 trust estate of Mrs. Eliza McMillan, who died 15 years ago, are claimed by residuary legatees under her will in a suit filed in Circuit Court yesterday. The Court is asked to interpret the will and construe its provisions so that the trustees, William K. Bixby and the St. Louis Union Trust Co. may pay the lapsed annuities to the plaintiffs now instead of waiting until the expiration of the trust.

These annuities are at present accumulating at the rate of $17,800 a year, the 18 persons who were to receive them having died, and the amount from that source now totals approximately $180,000, it is estimated by Jacob Chasnoff of the law firm of Taylor, Chasnoff & Willson, representing the plaintiffs.

Trust May Run 60 Years.

In her will Mrs. McMillan, who was the widow of William McMillan, former president of the American Car & Foundry Co., placed the bulk of her property in trust, naming 60 persons who were to receive allowances ranging from $25 to $500 a month. It was provided that in event of the death of any of these beneficiaries the amount set aside for them should be applied by the trustees for the benefit of residuary legatees. However, it was not made clear, the suit sets forth, whether the lapsed benefits were to be distributed immediately or after the expiration of the trust.

It is the contention of the petitioners that Mrs. McMillan did not intend that the funds so designaed should accumulate until the termination of the trust, which does not expire until after the death of the last of the annuity beneficiaries.

The trustees, it appears, are uncertain regarding their power and while awaiting a decision have been applying to the principal of the trust estate the income formerly paid to deceased beneficiaries. Counsel for plaintiffs pointed out that some of the annuity recipients are young and in middle life; hence it was possible that the trust might continue 60 years or more.

Vested Interest Claimed.

Another provision in the will which is in need of explanation, petitioners say, is whether the residuary legatees have a vested interest in the principal fund which would give them the right to bequeath by will their interest before the trust expires. They assert they have such right but as the will is not clear on the subject they ask for an interpretation.

Plaintiffs in the suit are William Kingston, Florence Northrup McLeod, Eula Mabee, Grace Ashbaugh, Norah Kingston, Lawrence Cavers and Jean Cavers. At present they are receiving a certain portion of the income from the trust estate, the total of which amounts to about $70,000 a year. The will provides that at the close of the trust the principal shall be divided among residuary legatees, among whom are the plaintiff.

Accused of Annoying Girls.

James Luckett, 40-year-old shoeworker, 4924 Hooke avenue, was fined $250 by Police Judge Beck yesterday for annoying young girls. Three other similar charges are pending.

Luckett was arrested March 12 after two girls said he had annoyed them in Fairground Park. Luckett, who denied the charge, appealed.

The Court is asked to interpret the will and construe its provisions so that the trustees, William K. Bixby and the St. Louis Union Trust Co. may pay the lapsed annuities to the plaintiffs now instead of waiting until the expiration of the trust.

These annuities are at present accumulating at the rate of $17,800 a year, the 18 persons who were to receive them having died, and the amount from that source now totals approximately $180,000, it is estimated by Jacob Chasnoff of the law firm of Taylor, Chasnoff & Willson, representing the plaintiffs.

Trust May Run 60 Years.

In her will Mrs. McMillan, who was the widow of William McMillan, former president of the American Car & Foundry Co., placed the bulk of her property in trust, naming 60 persons who were to receive allowances ranging from $25 to $500 a month. It was provided that in event of the death of any of these beneficiaries the amount set aside for them should be applied by the trustees for the benefit of residuary legatees. However, it was not made clear, the suit sets forth, whether the lapsed benefits were to be distributed immediately or after the expiration of the trust.

It is the contention of the petitioners that Mrs. McMillan did not intend that the funds so designaed should accumulate until the termination of the trust, which does not expire until after the death of the last of the annuity beneficiaries.

The trustees, it appears, are uncertain regarding their power and while awaiting a decision have been applying to the principal of the trust estate the income formerly paid to deceased beneficiaries. Counsel for plaintiffs pointed out that some of the annuity recipients are young and in middle life; hence it was possible that the trust might continue 60 years or more.

Vested Interest Claimed.

Another provision in the will which is in need of explanation, petitioners say, is whether the residuary legatees have a vested interest in the principal fund which would give them the right to bequeath by will their interest before the trust expires. They assert they have such right but as the will is not clear on the subject they ask for an interpretation.

Plaintiffs in the suit are William Kingston, Florence Northrup McLeod, Eula Mabee, Grace Ashbaugh, Norah Kingston, Lawrence Cavers and Jean Cavers. At present they are receiving a certain portion of the income from the trust estate, the total of which amounts to about $70,000 a year. The will provides that at the close of the trust the principal shall be divided among residuary legatees, among whom are the plaintiff.

Accused of Annoying Girls.

James Luckett, 40-year-old shoeworker, 4924 Hooke avenue, was fined $250 by Police Judge Beck yesterday for annoying young girls. Three other similar charges are pending.

Luckett was arrested March 12 after two girls said he had annoyed them in Fairground Park. Luckett, who denied the charge, appealed.

How King of Byrd's Dogs Disappeared in Antarctic

Chief Driver, Back Home, Says Chinook Got Too Old for Job, Bade Master Goodby and Went Away to Die.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 26.—Arthur T. Walden, who went down to Antarctica as chief dog driver of the Byrd expedition, came home on the ice-scarred whaler C. A. Larsen yesterday.

Sixty-eight dogs came back with him—their job well done.

But Chinook, their undisputed king when they sailed from Norfolk a year and a half ago—Chinook, that always slept at the foot of his master's bed—was not among them.

And Chinook's master will never return to Antarctica.

Standing on the top deck of the whaler, his shaggy charges frisking about him, the wiry little gray-haired Walden, who is 58 years old and was driving dog teams in Alaska before the gold rush of '98 paid his tribute to Chinook.

As he finished, he turned away, and his keen blue eyes—intensely blue in a face reddened by nearly 40 years on the trails—were filled with tears.

"I'll never be half the man Chinook was," he said.

How Chinook Went Away.

"It was on Jan. 17, a year ago, his twelfth birthday that Chinook went away. The going was pretty hard down there, and, you see, Chinook was an old dog.

"The day before he went away, three of the other dogs pitched on him and got him down. That was the first time Chinook had ever been off his feet in a fight in all his life. I guess he realized then that he was through.

"That night he said good-by to me. Three times in the night he woke me up, putting his paw on my face. He didn't whine or anything, but, he seemed to be trying to tell me something.

"I didn't harness him the next morning, but, as I started down the trail he followed me a little way. Then he just—disappeared.

"One of the men said he saw him last, a long way off on the ice barrier, going away. That's the way they do, you know. When they realize they're through, they just go off by themselves and die. Chinook never came back.

"Chinook was the greatest lead dog I've ever seen. And he was more than a dog. I miss the old fellow more all the time. Very often at night I dream about him.

"Well, he didn't die in the harness. But he died with his boots on, and he was more of a man than I'll ever be."

Seven Others of Party on Ship.

With Walden on the C. A. Larsen were his two assistants, Norman D. Vaughan and Edward E. Goodale, both Harvard students.

Five other members of the expedition also were aboard: Martin Ronne, 69, sailmaker and tailor, who was the oldest man on the expedition; Clair D. Alexander, supply officer; George Black and Walter Leuthner, seamen, and Dr. Vocloo Vojtech, Czecho-Slovakian geologist.

Stowed away down in the hold, under Dr. Vojtech's charge, were a flock of the solemn penguins which were the explorers' neighbors on the Ross ice barrier.

All over the ship—some in crates, some of them chained, many of them running about loose—were the dogs. Well mannered dogs, these, which will shake hands with a stranger, but toward each other they are not so friendly.

"After Chinook went away," said Walden, "they fought for days to decide which was to be their new leader. Six were killed.

"It's the lonesomest place in the world down there. Nothing but ice—ice—ice, no vegetation, not a living thing except penguins, and even the penguins go away and leave you. I'll never go back there."

VERDICT JUSTIFIES KILLING OF ROBBER BY POLICEMAN

A Coroner's verdict of justifiable homicide was returned yesterday in the case of an unidentified man about 24 years old, shot and killed by Patrolman Chester Patterson near Eleventh street and Lucas avenue Friday night, after he had drawn a revolver and threatened to kill the policeman.

Patterson did not testify at the inquest. Witnesses were two taxicab drivers, who had pointed out the man to Patterson as one of two highwaymen who had attempted to rob one driver last Feb. 14.

Chief of Police Gerk will ask the Police Board to award the gold distinguished Service Medal to Patterson and to Patrolman Marshall Hayhurst, who shot a robber a week ago. The first medal was awarded recently to Patrolman Fred Paschedag, who shot a holdup man.

The body of the man killed by Patterson is at the morgue awaiting identification. The man's hat bore the label of a Seattle (Wash.) store, and he is thought to have come from that city.

CHECK ON SMUGGLING AT MISSOURI PRISON

Precautions Taken to Prevent Arms or Other Contraband From Being Sent Inside.

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, April 26.—Missouri prison officials are taking precautions to prevent the smuggling in or out of the Missouri Penitentiary of weapons, drugs, uncensored letters or other contraband.

Following discovery of uncensored letters which had been smuggled out of the prison, it has been decided to keep convicts working outside of the prison walls from contact with convicts inside the prison. The truck drivers, common laborers and other outside men will sleep and eat in a building outside the main stockade of the prison.

Another precaution taken by officials recently is to build another wall to inclose the prison gate proper. It will be of the same width and height as the other walls and will be manned by guards in a watch tower.

Shortly after the recent strike in the prison, members of the Prison Board said they had anticipated trouble of some sort, but had expected there would be an effort made from the outside of the prison.

Visitors will be searched in the new building outside the prison entrance before being allowed inside the walls.

In an emergency the prison offices can be isolated from both the inside and the outside. Automobiles can also be prevented from driving close to the main gate.

An automobile containing machine guns and amunition was found near the walls last year, and several years ago an attempt was made to dynamite one of the gates.

CITY-COUNTY MERGER PLANNER TAKEN ILL

Thomas H. Reed Stricken Just Before Meeting at University City.

Dr. Thomas H. Reed, city planning expert who is directing the proposed merger of St. Louis and St. Louis County for the City and County Metropolitan Development Committee, became seriously ill last night and was unable to speak at a public meeting held by the committee at the University City Hall last night.

Dr. Reed became ill on arriving at the City Hall and was examined by Dr. Leo P. FitzGerald, University City Health Commissioner, who said he was suffering with gastric ulcer and ordered him taken to St. Mary's Hospital. Dr. Reed, who has been going back and forth between St. Louis and Harvard University, where he is teaching, said he had been feeling badly for about a week.

Dr. Fitzgerald ordered a blood transfusion to counteract the effect of a hemorrhage, and this was completed about midnight, the blood being supplied by an interne at the hospital.

In Dr. Reed's absence, Robert A. Roessel, chairman of the committee, was the only speaker before a gathering of about 35 persons. Roessel made a brief answer to the attack by St. Louis County newspapers which on Friday carried front-page editorials as an "initial warning" to county residents against "annexation." He described the merger plan and was interrupted frequently by Probate Judge Hodgdon, a critic of the proposal, who asked questions about the details of the proposed enabling constitutional amendment.

Roessel declared that the merger movement had reached the stage where Dr. Reed was badly needed but added that plans would go ahead as scheduled with a view to placing the constitutional amendment on the ballot in November throughout the state. Petitions must be circulated and filed by July 4.

The manuscript of Dr. Reed's speech was issued as a public statement. It spoke of "deliberate misrepresentation" being circulated about the plan and characterized the newspaper attack as "vicious and abusive." It repudiated the editorial charge that the movement had been "characterized by trickery and deceit," and explained how the plan had been developed through the aid and advice of the Council on Metropolitan Government, a large advisory body of city and county residents, whose reports were given fullest publicity.

The proposed amendment, the manuscript explained, would only enable the holding of special, separate election in the city and county on the adoption of the proposed metropolitan charter. It pointed out that the proposed plan would give the county as many representatives on the Council as its present population justifies, in the expectation of growth here.

ADELE RITCHIE AND FRIEND IN SUICIDE PLAN, LETTER HINTS

Attorney Says He Found Missive in Desk of Slayer; Provisions of Their Wills

By the Associated Press.

LAGUNA BEACH, Cal., April 26.—Moresby White, attorney for Adele Ritchie, divorced wife of Guy Bates Post, who committed suicide Thursday after killing her friend, Mrs. Doris May Palmer, said tonight he had found a letter in Miss Ritchie's desk indicating the women had planned a suicide agreement. The contents of the letter were not disclosed. White said the letter was written last Wednesday, "which indicates," he said, "as far as she was concerned, that she and Mrs. Palmer would die together."

White, who also acted as legal counsel for Mrs. Palmer, said nothing had been found in her papers to indicate that she was cognizant of such a plan.

White disclosed the contents of Miss Ritchie's will and a will made by Mrs. Palmer. He said Mrs. Palmer's will is not legal because she failed to comply with the law. White, named executor of Miss Ritchie's estate, said the former musical comedy star's letter bore these instructions: "To be opened by Mr. White in case of an accident."

Funerals for the two women were held in St. Mary's Episcopal Church here today.

ST. LOUIS BROKER ARRAIGNED IN NEW YORK NIGHT CLUB RAID

Benjamin O. McReynolds Demands Immediate Trial but Case Is Set for May 7.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 26.—Benjamin O. McReynolds, an insurance broker of St. Louis, was arraigned with 10 other patrons of the Hollywood Night Club today before the United States Commissioner on a charge of possession of liquor.

The charges are based on a raid made by Federal prohibition agents early today, when they arrested persons at tables where liquor was found. McReynolds is charged with possession of a partly filled bottle of gin.

At the hearing today he demanded an immediate trial, protesting that business in St. Louis demanded attention, but the trial was set for May 7, and he was released under $500 bond. He is stopping at the Astor Hotel here.

It makes no difference how they look today! Whether your floors are varnished, shellaced, painted, or lacquered. Whether they are soft wood like pine or hard wood like oak and maple. Whether they are old, scarred, and dull, or simply worn in traffic spots.

Now you can do them over YOURSELF. You rent the machine, get all the materials you need—at your dealer's.

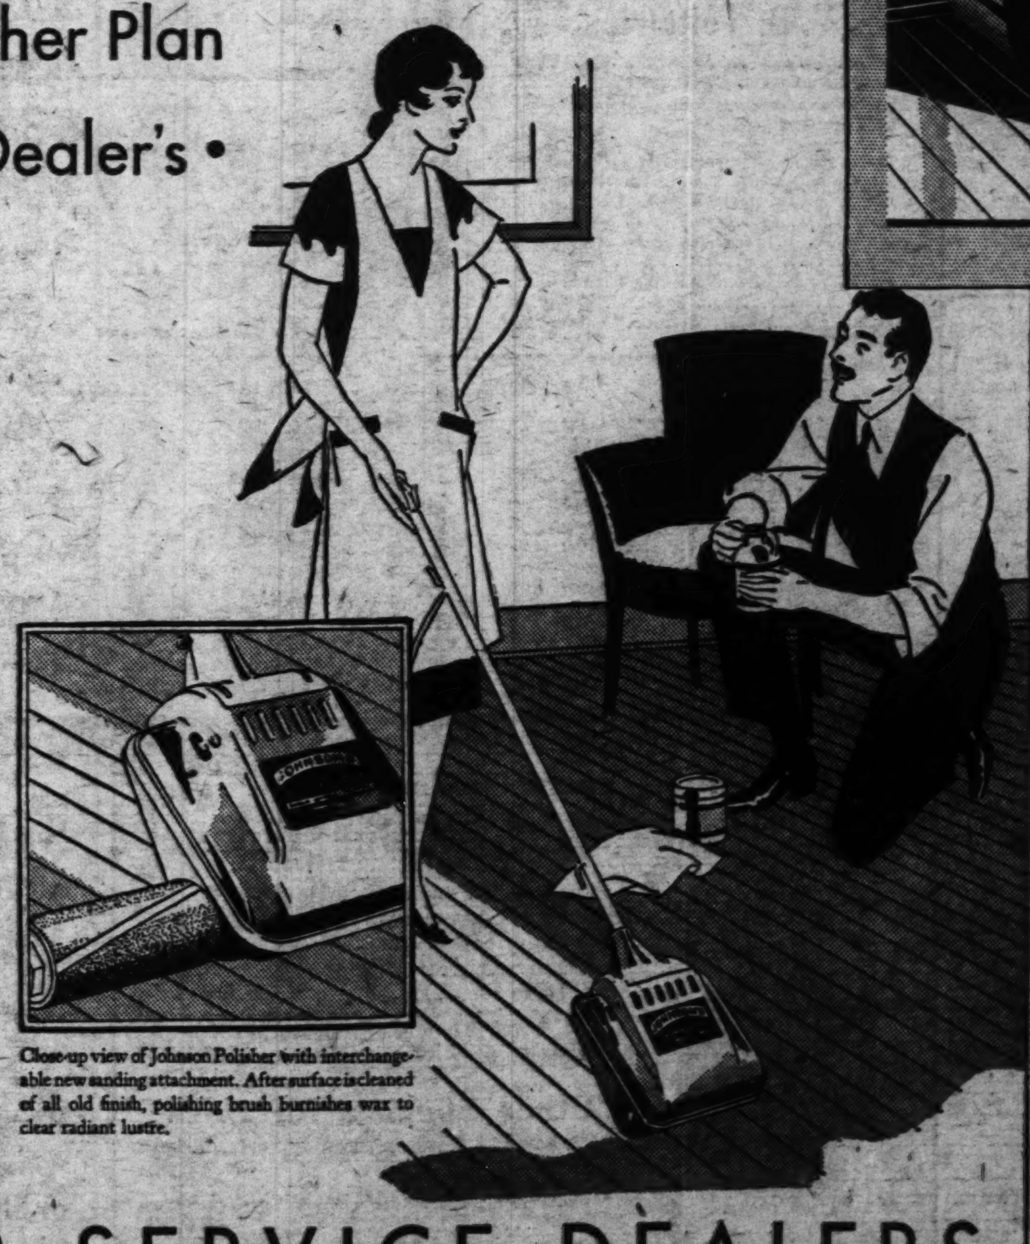
The exquisite clear waxed floors you have admired in so many fine homes and in beautiful illustrations—you produce them in your own home in a few hours, over the week-end.

The new Johnson sanding attachment takes off the old marred finish—varnish, shellac, or paint. New materials build exactly the finish you want, quickly, easily, in exactly the tone you want. Deep brown, mellow oak. warm amber—whatever fits your decorative scheme.

And then you have everlasting floors that will never need refinishing! For the hard but elastic wax protects them from scratches, worn spots, stains—takes all the wear.

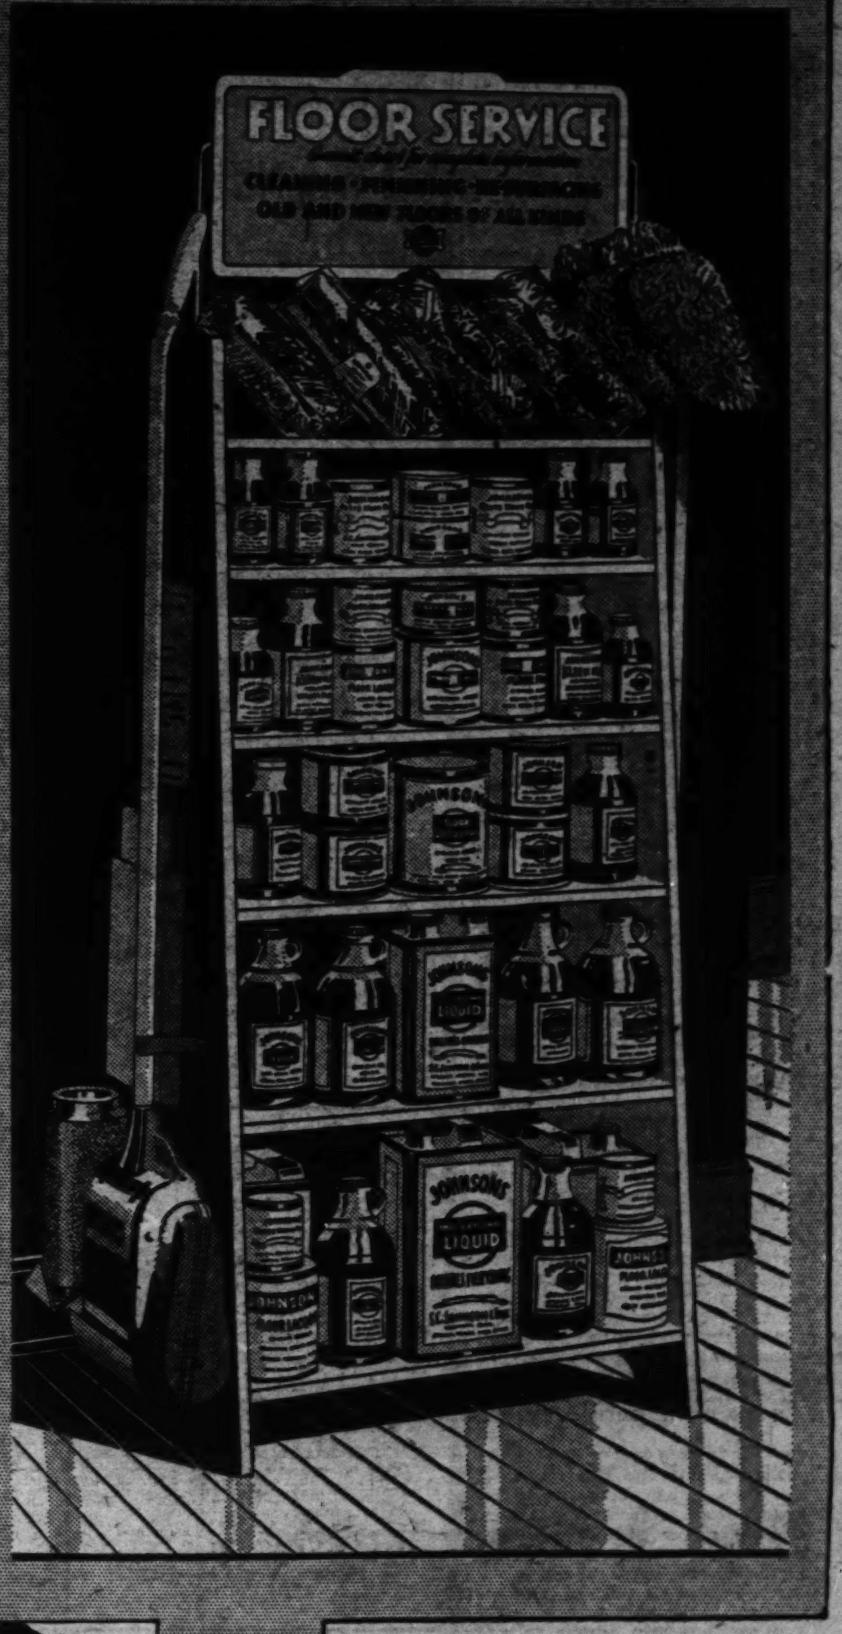
Scrubbing is ended for good. Wax itself cleans your floors and the only frequent care needed is dusting with a Johnson dry Floor Duster.

Look in adjoining columns for further details. If you have never used Johnson's Wax, send coupon at the right for a free 25c can to try.



Close-up view of Johnson Polisher with interchangeable new sanding attachment. After surface is cleaned of all old finish, polishing brush burnishes wax to clear radiant lustre.

See your dealer tomorrow about this greatly simplified method of refinishing floors.



With these new, easy, quickly drying materials you and your husband can do a professional refinishing job for a few dollars:

Johnson's Paste-Wood Filler ● Open-grained woods such as oak, require this special material to fill the open pores and give firm even foundation for the finish. Can be colored to any desired shade.

Johnson's Floor Lacquer ● This new crystal clear lacquer has all the sealing power of shellac without its brittleness or water spotting, and all the protection of varnish without its thick scratchable bulk. Waterproofs the surface and prevents dirt from being ground in. The ideal treatment for wood and newly laid linoleum, providing the perfect base for wax polish.

Note ● For close-grained woods (which do not require Filler), if a stained effect is desired, Johnson's Floor Lacquer comes in four shades as Johnson's Lacquer-Stain. Don't confuse this transparent lacquer-stain with ordinary opaque brushing lacquers which conceal the beautiful grain of the wood.

Johnson's Wax ● The ideal finish for floors. Made in two forms for your convenience. Paste may be preferred for original finish; Liquid, which acts as cleaner, for upkeep. Stands the wear of centuries. Easiest to clean and easily renewable.

Johnson Household Polisher ● The standard machine for regular monthly polishing of waxed floors. Effortless. Drives wax into pores, filling cracks.

Johnson Floor Duster ● A new dust mop especially for maintenance of waxed floors. Contains no dust collecting oils or chemical preparations. Reversible head is easily removable and washable.

ST. LOUIS CHEMICAL OUTPUT $100,000,000

Industrial Club Reviews Growth of Industry Here in 60 Years.

The chemical industry in St. Louis, which has grown during 60 years to a point where its annual production is valued at $100,000,000, is reviewed in a new advertising booklet, "Chemical and Mineral Resources of the St. Louis Area," issued by the Industrial Bureau of the Industrial Club of St. Louis.

The booklet, prepared by George C. Smith, director of the Bureau, has been issued with a view to attracting chemical industries or firms which might utilize the chemical products available here and fits in with the club's current advertising campaign in various chemical journals. Much of the information in the booklet was gathered by Dr. Charles W. Cuno, consulting chemical and metallurgical engineer for the bureau, and a former professor at Washington University.

More than 30 firms are listed in the booklet as being the principal producers of chemicals in the St. Louis district, while 11 manufacturers' branches and chemical supply houses are named. "Heavy chemical manufacturing is well developed," states the booklet. "The annual production of sulphuric acid approximates 300,000 tons. A growing demand for nitric acid, muriatic acid, caustic, chlorine and other heavy chemicals has called for continued expansion of these plants."

50 Other Chemicals Listed.

In addition, the booklet lists more than 50 intermediates and medicinal and fine chemicals produced in the St. Louis district. "St. Louis," it continues, "ranks as a center of production of medicinal and fine chemicals. To a large and growing clientele of manufacturers of prepared foods, extracts, flavors and confections, the chemical industry of St. Louis supplies a most valuable service."

Dealing with industrial, metallurgical and mining chemicals, the booklet states:

"A well-balanced industry, with St. Louis as its center, makes for a large consumption of those chemicals essential to those industries. The mining of lead and zinc, in which Missouri and the tri-state district lead the world, calls for special chemicals in the newer flotation processes.

"The new electrolytic methods for the reclaiming of zinc and lead are also developing new uses for heavy chemicals. Increasing production of iron ores in Missouri is benefiting the local iron and steel industries with consequent increased demand for chemical fluxes; the newer picking solutions, materials for the galvanizer, electro-plater and metal enameler.

"In presenting the chemical resources of the St. Louis area, the Industrial Bureau wishes to emphasize the growing importance of chemicals to industry. It has been said that more than 90 per cent of all industries purchase at least one chemical in large quantities.

St. Louis Logical Location.

"To most industries chemicals are an essential part of the manufacturing processes.

"That this migration of the chemical industry to St. Louis has been logical and in accord with the factors of scientific plant location is evidenced by the prosperity of the local industries. A review of two years' production and consumption of chemicals in the St. Louis metropolitan district discloses the fact that in this period almost every plant has carried out improvements and expansions, in some cases doubling the capacity of the existing plants. The new invested capital in this biennial period has been in excess of $9,750,000.

"The local consumption of chemicals in the St. Louis district is large and diversified and facilities for distribution are ideal."

In the section on "Mineral Resources Tributary to the St. Louis Metropolitan District," the book lists the important mineral resources of the area, and contains figures concerning annual production and value.

INDUSTRIAL ART TO BE SHOWN HERE

Modern Glass-Making and Rug Weaving to Be Exhibited at Mnseum.

Modern designs in glass making and rug weaving, assembled by the American Federation of Arts, for its second annual international exhibition of industrial art, are to be shown at City Art Museum, starting a week from tomorrow. The collection, first shown at the Metropolitan Museum in New York, will come here from the Art Institute of Chicago, to remain throughout the month.

Glass and rugs were selected this year to succeed ceramics as the subject of the exhibition because of new developments in these fields. Technical research in the making of glass has lately made possible effects of light and color never before accomplished and enabled European artists to bring decorative glass to a new artistic level.

Rug designs are in a state of transition, with Oriental patterns being discarded in an attempt to find themes better suited to contemporary needs. This situation has led to much experimenting, some seeking, though strong contrasts of color and form to make the rug the most conspicuous decorative object in a room, others working on the theory that a floor covering should be a subdued background for the other appointments.

Aside from the more common vases, and table ware the glass collection includes such varied objects as automobile radiator caps, perfume bottles, decorative panels, and electric light shades. The last illustrate a modern theory espoused in France that a light fixture needs only two elements, the electric bulb and some form of translucent glass to diffuse the light. Countries from which examples in the collection were secured are: Austria, Czecho-Slovakia, England, France, Germany, Holland, Italy and Sweden. The American examples are few, and without great distinction.

Rugs shown were collected from France, Germany, Austria, Belgium, Sweden and England. The French rugs were obtained with difficulty because a boycott has been declared there against loans to American exhibitions. French producers had become accustomed to American manufacturers copying their designs in women's clothing without remuneration, but when modern designs were extended to other fields, and these were also appropriated in America, the French manufacturers became indignant.

The most representative modern rugs in the collection are from France and Germany. In the former country there is a great variety of design and strong colors and novel forms are common. French rugs in most cases are hand woven and expensive. In Germany, the economic situation has encouraged the production of cheaper machine made rugs. Most are in sober colors and make use of abstract or geometrical designs.

Some of Carnegie Group of Paintings Still on Display.

Many of the paintings of the Carnegie International exhibition will remain on view at City Art Museum in Forest Park today, although the exhibition formally closed last Monday. Five of the galleries have been cleared, but the paintings that remain occupy the two large galleries.

The exhibit was the most popular ever held at the Museum, attracting 51,047 from its opening March 21, until the formal closing. This is an increase of 15,604 over the attendance figures for a corresponding period last year. The St. Louis attendance was twice as great as that at Baltimore. The first showing, at Carnegie Institute in Pittsburg, drew 132,544 visitors in November and December.

The Carnegie exhibit of 1932 will be shown in St. Louis. It is shown each year in two cities other than Pittsburg, but cannot be returned to any city for two years in succession.

WESTERN UNION HEAD VISITS OFFICE FORCE

Newcomb Carlton Does Not Appeal to Employes by Sending Holiday Cards.

An executive who believes that there is nothing to be gained by sending Christmas and Easter greetings to employes of his organization, or in seeing that they take gift geraniums home with them at the close of the day's work is Newcomb Carlton, president of the Western Union Telegraph Co., who was in St. Louis yesterday on what he terms "merely a visit" to the local offices.

"It doesn't take a genius to see that better service comes from a better satisfied group of employes," Carlton, a witty, gray-haired man, said, "and it doesn't take any more genius to see that you can get better service by stuffing a little more in the pay envelope. But this other stuff of telling them how to take care of their health, or giving them little books on how to take a pill, is something that doesn't appeal to me.

No Spiritual Massaging.

"And I don't send them greetings at Christmas or Easter and expect them to get hearty over it," continued the man, who might be expected to use the privilege most, considering the business his company does in the glad words on various holidays. "You can't expect an intelligent man to believe those things."

His visit to St. Louis, he said, was just to keep in touch with members of the office force here, without any of the "spiritual and mental massaging, followed by prayer and fasting," which, he termed, an all too prevalent business policy.

Expansion in St. Louis Discussed.

Expansion of the telegraph business in St. Louis, he said, was already necessitating a consideration of the expansion of the five-story building now housing the company at 900 Chestnut street. Provision was made at the time of the construction of the building for a seven-story extension at any time it would become necessary. Attention to such distribution facilities in centers of population will occupy the fore over any consideration of the branching of the telegraph business into the field of radio, he said.

"The development of overseas communication by radio is of slight importance compared with the handling of messages by cable, and the distribution of those messages within a country," he explained. "The tremendous amount of physical facilities required in centers of population will remain the same, regardless of radio transmission, which must necessarily be limited to long-distance sending because of the shortage of the number of wave lengths."

WARRANT FOR ONE OF EIGHT HELD IN EXTORTION SHOOTING

Sam Randazzo Identified by Matteo Gallina, Who Fired and Saved $5000.

A warrant charging attempted robbery was issued by the Circuit Attorney yesterday against Sam Randazzo, 717 Wash street, identified by Matteo Gallina as one of several extortionists with whom he exchanged shots in his saloon at 1529 Clark avenue Friday.

Randazzo, one of eight men arrested for investigation in the shooting, has been arrested 13 times and fined once for violating the State dry law. He told police he was a merchant and denied complicity in the extortion attempt.

Gallina, who was slightly wounded in the exchange of shots, saved $5000 which he had in his pockets at the time to cash payroll checks. In the Circuit Attorney's office he said Randazzo pointed a revolver at him and ordered him to "stick 'em up."

Three of the suspects held were arrested at a Washington avenue filling station and one had a revolver. Gallina said he was unable to identify any of them but Randazzo.

16 OF CREW OF SHIP BURNED THURSDAY GIVEN UP AS LOST

Ten Men, Including Captain, Saved From Freighter in Long Island Sound.

STANFORD, Conn., April 26.—Hope for the safety of 16 members of the crew of the freighter Thames, burned in Lond Island Sound off Sound Beach, Thursday night, was abandoned today. Ten members were saved, including Capt. Robert Sherman. Several of those who lost their lives were drowned when two small boats capsized. Others are believed to have been trapped aboard the ship by the fire.

Coast guard patrol boats have given up their search in the Sound for bodies and wreckage. The ruins of the steamer on the reef off Tod's Point were still too hot this morning to permit a boarding party to search for bodies.

Capt. Sherman said he thought the fire started above the boilers.

PANTS WITH 80-INCH WAIST

Somewhere in Chicago presumably is a man who has an 80-inch waistline, which is 16 inches larger than the waistline of O. J. Hoercher, 320-pound president of an express company at Belleville.

The Belleville Pants Manufacturing Co. announced yesterday it had filled an order for four pairs of the "balloon trousers" from a Chicago firm. The trousers are 84 inches across the seat, 32 inches wide at the knee and 28 inches at the cuffs, the latter width being as wide as many girls' skirts.

BECKER DEFENDS STOCKARD'S ACTS IN YOUNG CASE

Says by Ordering Brokers to Buy Back Bad Stock He Saved Investors $500,000.

EXPLAINS FAILURE TO STOP SALES, THUS

Replying to Governor Declares He Used Form Letter in Thanking W. H. Young for Aid in Campaign.

From the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., April 26.—Secretary of State Chas U. Becker made public a long letter of defense today in reply to Gov. Caulfield's demand of last Wednesday for a full official report of all transactions had by Becker and his subordinates with the defunct brokerage firm of W. H. Young & Bros., Inc., of St. Louis. He promised to file the report.

Becker's letter, which he had been preparing for two days, is his first official statement on the criticism of his department, and his appointee, State Securities Commissioner, F. T. Stockard, for not acting against Young Bros., after the St. Louis Better Business Bureau had repeatedly urged an investigation, and after the department had learned the firm was selling its unregistered preferred stocks.

The firm collapsed last March 24, with 8 cents in the till, $26,000 in overdrafts, and a loss to customers estimated at $2,000,000.

The letter, aside from a paragraph or two promising to comply with the Governor's direction for a report, devoted 2500 words to a defense of Becker's political record, his department, the rural press, and residents of the Missouri Ozarks, and an attack on the St. Louis Post-Dispatch and the St. Louis Star. The Better Business Bureau, and the Associated Industries of Missouri, whose plans for consolidating state departments and improving the state's business methods have been fought by Becker, were included in the denunciation.

How He Figures Saving.

Becker declared his confidence in Securities Commissioner Stockard, who has charge of the State Securities Department and acts under the direction of Becker, remains unshaken. "I am confident that you will find that he handled the Young episode in the only way it could have been handled," Becker said.

The Secretary of State said just as soon as Commissioner Stockard discovered the Youngs were selling unregistered and unauthorized stock, he ordered the firm to buy it back, on demand, which the firm agreed to do, and did so until "their financial resources were exhausted."

"If he had peremptorily stopped the company from doing business in the State," Becker said, "the investing public would have lost $500,000 more than was lost, that being the amount of unregistered stock bought back by the Young concern before it was forced into the hands of receivers."

Sale of unregistered stock is a violation of the Missouri "Blue Sky" law.

Becker declared the Missouri Securities Department enjoyed the reputation of being one of the most careful in the country and that until the recent "Wall street crash, which destroyed the value of many good stocks," the State had the reputation of having fewer worthless securities in circulation than any other State. He said the Legislature never had provided sufficient appropriations for Stockard to make adequate investigations.

Gov. Caulfield left the capital today for Topeka, Kan., where he will make addresses Sunday and Monday before students of Washburn college.

Text of Becker's Letter.

Following is the text of the letter to the Governor:

"April 26, 1930.

"Honorable Henry S. Caulfield, Governor of Missouri, Jefferson City, Mo.

"Dear Sir."

"In response to your letter of April 23, which was issued and immediately broadcast over WOS after I had left town on an important mission and which brought me back to Jefferson City as soon as I heard about it, I beg to inform you that I shall be delighted to furnish you with all available data in the office of the Secretary of State on the Young failure.

"You know, and the St. Louis newspapers know, that all of the records in my office are open to inspection, at all times, to the humblest citizen and to the Governor alike, and that it requires no newspaper request to obtain any information you desire.

"St. Louis newspapers have had free access to our records and have published everything in connection with the Young Bros. case, which they deemed of interest to the reading investing public.

Stands by Stockard.

"Before preparing and handing to you the files, which have been published many times in the newspapers, I desire to communicate some of the information which has not been published in the case, but which should prove of interest and value.

"First, I want to say again that my confidence in the integrity of Fenton T. Stockard, Commissioner of Securities under me, remains unshaken. I am confident that you will find that he handled the Young episode in the only way it could have been handled. Just as soon as he discovered that the Youngs were selling unregistered and unauthorized stock, he ordered them to buy it back, which they agreed to do, and which they did do until their financial resources were exhausted. If he had peremptorily stopped the company from doing business in the State, the investing public would have lost $500,000 more than was lost, that being the amount of unregistered stock bought back by the Young concern before it was forced into the hands of receivers.

That Wall Street Crash.

"You may not be aware of the fact that the Securities Department of Missouri enjoys the reputation of being one of the most careful in the country, and is held up as a model throughout all of the midwestern states. Until the recent Wall street crash, which destroyed the status of many good stocks and bonds held by our citizens, Missouri enjoyed the reputation of having in circulation less worthless securities than any other state in the Union. Mr. George M. Husser, a high-class gentleman, who is manager of the Better Business Bureau of Kansas City, has given an interview bearing out my claim, and he says that the only trouble with the department has been that the Legislature never made sufficient appropriation for help for Mr. Stockard to make adequate investigations. If you did not see Mr. Husser's fearless statement it might interest you to know that he also spoke highly of the Youngs, saying that he never detected them selling any worthless securities in Kansas City.

Which Is Better Business Bureau?

"And right here you have a peculiar problem that ought not be allowed to slip by uninvestigated. The Better Business Bureau of St. Louis says the Youngs were no account and refused to allow them to come into the temple with the other stock bond boys. The Better Business Bureau of Kansas City says the Youngs were all right and let them come in out of the rain. Now which is the better business bureau? The Kansas Bureau has been of great help to the Missouri Securities Department.

"Under your own supervision, and subject to your own appointment, is the Finance Commissioner of Missouri. He has a vastly larger appropriation, a force of 22 trained inspectors, and infinitely greater power than has the Securities Commissioner.

"Yet, sir, while the enemy press is parading the failure of one concern during the last five years under the Securities Commissioner, how many banks have failed and how many millions have the failures cost, not only the investing public, but widows and orphans and poor people with small deposits?

Contrasts Departments.

"I am not criticising your Finance Commissioner. Far from it. He is an able man and is doing the very best that he can, but you will readily see how unfair is the criticism of a Securities Commissioner who, with less power, scantier funds and little help, has held the failures in this State to such a remarkably small percentage and has built up such a fine reputation for the department.

"Then why all this whoop about the Young failure and because the Securities Commissioner will not tell a lie and say I issued orders to him?"

Attacks Post-Dispatch.

"Well, because there is published in the city of St. Louis, but owned by Wall street, and politically directed by Tammany Hall, a newspaper which hates the people of rural Missouri, is worth $20,000,000 and pays taxes on about 2 per cent of its valuation. The name of this tax-dodging exponent of destruction is the Post-Dispatch. It has referred to my countrymen in the Ozarks as 'yaps' and has declared that 'the whole State is held back by the poverty and unproductiveness of the Ozark counties,' and that the people of this section should have a Mussolini over them to compel them to work. Because it is my good fortune to hail from that section of the State I have been a target for its relentless abuse, lo, these many years. It has persistently and vehemently fought the rural newspapers of Missouri and has sought to deprive them of honestly earned revenues, so that the small papers might be the more easily destroyed and their functions usurped by it.

"This paper's lust for lucre is second only to its craving for power. It has criticised the Securities Commissioner for the failure of Young Brothers, but up until the fateful hour when that company crashed, this newspaper took Young money in large quantities, and in published advertisements the investing public was urged to place its money in securities held by Young Brothers. And so did its running mate—the St. Louis Star.

"Who was in a better position than the Post-Dispatch and the Star to find out the true condition of the Youngs? Both were equipped with a pack of keen-scented reporters who chased hither and yon in quest of what they call news. A rumor would have a hard time eluding them. Anyway, you would be led to believe that the business managers of these papers would make inquiries about the soundness of advertisements going into their papers, since there is a law against a newspaper taking advertisements for a swindling proposition.

Raps Better Business Bureau.

"You would think, if the Better Business Bureau of St. Louis is what it claims it is, that it would utter a fierce outcry against the papers printing the Young advertisements. You see, its officials knew at the time the advertisements were appearing that the securities offered were no good. Yes, they knew, for they filed a protest with Mr. Stockard, the Securities Commissioner, but they made no effort to stop the advertisements from appearing in the Post-Dispatch and the Star. I venture to suggest that the people of Missouri are not going to pay much attention to newspapers who take money for advertisements for worthless securities and then turn around and try to discredit the State Securities Commissioner because he did not issue a cease and desist order against the practice of the advertisers.

"The Post-Dispatch, because of its persistent attacks upon the ral interests of Missouri on whic our great cities depend for sup port, has been a serious detr

Colonel and Mrs. Lindbergh's Thrilling New Record was made with PENNZOIL

"THE BEST MOTOR OIL IN THE WORLD"

Colonel Lindbergh, Chairman of the Technical Committee of T.A.T. Maddux Lines—Pennsylvania Railroad Train and Plane 48-hour Route from Coast to Coast, used PENNZOIL as the lubricant throughout his record-breaking flight.

Up into the dawn at Glendale, California; down from the skies before midnight at the other side of the continent! Only one stop from coast to coast—in the fastest time ever recorded.

This is the thrilling new record created by Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh in their Lockheed Sirius ship, powered with a Pratt & Whitney Wasp Motor, on April 20. As technical advisor to the T.A.T. Maddux Lines, Colonel Lindbergh made this flight to test the possibilities of higher altitudes for air transport.

In the freezing atmosphere from two to nearly three miles above the earth the motor of their ship droned sweetly hour after hour. The stop for fuel at Wichita was brief—then into the air again.

Such a test demanded perfect motor performance—perfect lubrication—and PENNZOIL, "the best motor oil in the world," was used throughout the flight. Resistance to the cold of high altitudes, resistance to the heat of uninterrupted motor performance—these are the qualities which PENNZOIL contributed to the success of this history-making flight.

Your motor car may never meet the test that Colonel Lindbergh's plane met so successfully, but the oil you put in your crankcase is the life blood of your motor. PENNZOIL, made from only the heart of pure Pennsylvania crude, penetrates to every working part of the motor and provides that film of protection which is essential to good motor performance.

ment to St. Louis, driving much of the Ozark trade to Kansas City, Chicago and Southern seaports.

"The Post-Dispatch and the Star are ardent barkers for two St. Louis organizations—one styling itself the Better Business Bureau of St. Louis, but which seems to be created for the express purpose of keeping new blood and new industries out of the city, and the other, the Associated Industries of Missouri, an organization for the purpose of changing our government so that all taxation can be shifted to land and to the defenseless poor.

Assails Associated Industries.

"This Associated Industries group, sir, has poured anointment ll on its own head and has set tself up as the dictator of governmental policy in Missouri. At times, it has become my official and patriotic duty to oppose and help to defeat their schemes. Other men, like Dr. Stratton Brooks, president of the University of Missouri, viewed the menace as I did and publicly opposed the association's plans. The relentlessness of its hatred never was better illustrated than when it took the trail of that eminent citizen, and never left it until they deemed him properly punished, even though it required the laying of foul hands upon the most cherished institution in the state.

"The public may not know, sir, but you and I know that the chief source of opposition to Dr. Brooks was not that which appeared in the newspapers, but was the fact that he had the temerity publicly to denounce the legislative schemes of this St. Louis group and to place the university back upon a basis of old fashioned decency and to drive from its vicinity those who fattened on temptations to vice.

Feels Himself Vindicated.

"This newspaper and this group declared war upon me several years ago. In my feeble way I have replied to their attacks upon my official conduct until last November, when the people of Missouri spoke in thunderous tones on the issues between them and me, and the last Legislature added a voice of unqualified approval by burying their pet scheme of bureaucratic government under an avalanche of legislative opposition.

"And I wish to say that the people of Missouri have been electing me to office since 1916, with ever-increasing majorities, showing their confidence in me, and when the people no longer want me as their servant, I shall bow in humble submission to their dictates and depart. And right now I serve notice that I will get out of politics, either by my own choice or by will of the people speaking at the polls and never at the dictates of any newspaper or group of newspapers controlled by Wall street, the Associated Industries of Missouri or the Better Business Bureau of St. Louis.

Still Harping on the Press.

"The intense fury of the Post-Dispatch attack upon me is due to the fact that its editors suspect that I recently broadcast an editorial from the Carrollton Republican Record to the effect that their paper was a flagrant tax dodger, paying taxes in 1929 on one automobile and on about 2 per cent of the true valuation of the paper. This year this representative of predatory wealth is going to pay taxes on two Fords, a glittering indication that its conscience is improving and that eventually, if the world does not end too soon, it will arrive at true valuation. Last year it paid on a physical valuation of $364,180 and its 1930 assessment is $454,563, an increase of $90,383 over 1929. This paper is conservatively estimated to be worth in the neighborhood of $20,-[illegible]0,000.

"And so it is with its Aunt Sarah, who is its running companion, the St. Louis Star. That 'truthful' paper in 1929 paid taxes on a total assessed valuation of $60,280, of which $44,500 was on the physical value of its plant. Its total 1930 assessment is $60,370, $90 more than in 1929. In 1929 it was holding $14,500 in notes and this year it has $14,300 worth. In 1929 it paid taxes on $1276 in money deposited according to Assessor Gehner 'in bank or other safe place.' Then something terrible happened, for this year it is going to pay taxes on only $573.56 in money.

"Among many other valuable things this paper owns four big presses, any one of which is worth more than its total assessment. You could not buy the St. Louis [illegible] for a cent less than $8,000,-[illegible].

Back-Firing.

"Now, Governor, I am in a position to furnish you a true appraisement, not assessment, of all the valuable properties of the Post-Dispatch and the St. Louis Star, and I humbly suggest that the State Board Board of Equalization, of which you are chairman, should at the earliest date possible direct the Assessor of the City of St. Louis to revalue these newspapers for taxation purposes. While we are searching, at the request of Wall street owned and controlled newspapers, for neglect of duty, let me suggest that the investigation be carried a step forward to include tax-dodging newspapers. Why should these directors of investigations and the destiny of our Government be allowed to escape taxation while the farmer and the small home owner are soaked to the limit of their ability to pay?

Young's Campaign Contribution.

"No effort was made by me to conceal my contributions. Right after the last general election I made a sworn statement, as the law requires, a copy of which is on file in the office of Secretary of State, and has been on file since November, 1928, showing just who contributed for my campaign and showing that what I received was

Young's Campaign Contribution.

"No effort was made by me to conceal my contributions. Right after the last general election I made a sworn statement, as the law requires, a copy of which is on file in the office of Secretary of State, and has been on file since November, 1928, showing just who contributed for my campaign and showing that what I received was turned over as part of my contribution to the State Committee for the benefit of all of the candidates on the Republican ticket. In fact, all of my contributions went to the State Committee for use in the campaign for all the candidates. I am not a pussy-footer and have never resorted to the subterfuge of timid politicians who organize elaborate finance committees for the purpose of concealing who is backing them in their campaign.

"Some Republican committees, the Democratic State Committee and the finance committees of some State candidates perhaps would not have accepted Young contributions if they had ever dreamed that the Youngs were going to fail and that the Better Business Bureau of St. Louis was going to act as receiver and broadcast the publication of only such canceled checks as would enable it to carry out its plans of defaming the character of public officials it cannot control.

Just a Form Letter.

"As to the letter written by me Nov. 19, 1928, thanking William H. Young for the campaign work done by him in my behalf, I wish to state that that letter was a form letter. I had three form letters for my stenographer to use in replying to my supporters after the campaign was over. One of the form letters was in answer to people who wanted me to pay them for work they had done; one was in answer to men and women who thought they ought to have jobs for what they had done for me, and one—which the Youngs received—was a general answer to everybody who wrote to my office pledging support to me. My stenographer worked about five weeks after the general election writing the form letter of which Young received a copy.

"She estimates that she prepared about 10,000 of these letters and signed my name to nearly all of them.

Defends His Course.

"I did not know, until the Better Business Bureau of St. Louis got to broadcasting the affairs of the Young Brothers, that a man in politics was not allowed to write a letter of thanks to his supporters without first asking the tax-dodging metropolitan press for permission to do so.

"I am confident that you will receive a wild outburst of applause from the tax-dodging metropolitan press if you will recommend to the next Legislature that the blue sky department be placed where the Associated Industries and the Better Business Bureau of St. Louis can control and direct its destinies.

"The Globe-Democrat, in its issue of April 25, carried a full page advertisement in which Rollo Ogden, editor of the New York Times, is quoted as saying, 'A government without newspapers would be intolerable; a government with newspapers is endurable, and a government by newspapers is the worst conceivable.'

"We are within the shadow of the calamity predicted by Mr. Ogden. Out in the State the impression is widespread that the Post-Dispatch, which is a tax dodger, accepts advertisements from concerns it knows are going to fail, hates government by the people, and is the mouthpiece of the group seeking to shift all taxation to land, is attempting to run our Government.

"My office force is now actively engaged in preparing the information you called for in your letter, and it will be forwarded to you at the earliest date possible.

"Very truly, yours,
"CHARLES U. BECKER,
"Secretary of State."

ROTHSTEIN MURDER WITNESS ARRESTED FOR LARCENY

"Nigger Nate" Raymond Accused When He Offers Worthless Stock as Collateral.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 26.—Nathan ("Nigger Nate") Raymond, gambler and friend of the late Arnold Rothstein, surrendered to the District Attorney today on two indictments charging grand larceny. Raymond, who was the big paper winner in the card game that preceded the murder of Rothstein, is alleged to have placed two worthless stock certificates as collateral for a bank loan.

One of them is alleged to have been forged and the other of a canceled issue, having been stolen from a messenger in Wall street.

At the trial last fall of George McManus, exonerated in the Rothstein killing, Raymond testified that he was a speculator on the outcome of racing and other sporting events.

He said that he won more than $200,000 from Rothstein in the card game, which figured so prominently in the McManus trial, but that Rothstein was killed before he could collect the money.

Francisco .... Lawrence Johns
Bernardo .... Arthur Sircom
Horatio .... Arnold Walsh
Marcellus .... Walter Geer
Ghost .... Stanford Holme
King .... Kynaston Reeves
Queen Laertes .... Alison Pickard
Hamlet .... Russell Thorndike
Leartes .... Bruno Barnabe
Corambis (Polonius) .... Ben Greet
Ambassador .... Edith Mayor
Ophelia .... Thea Holme
Montano .... George Hare
Rossencraft .... Arthur Sircom
Gilderstone .... Peter Dearing
Players: Stanford Holme, Ruth Vivian, Cecil Musk, George Hare, Edith Mayor.
Fortenbrasse .... Cecil Musk
Clowns (First and Second Grave Diggers): Ben Greet, George Hare.
A Braggart Gentleman .... Peter Dearing
Priest .... Henry Willis

FOR untold years Ben Greet, lately Sir Philip Ben Greet, and his players have been holding aloft the Shakspearean torch in town and hamlet, in high school auditorium and grand opera house, as well as in more favored centers of sweetness and light. They returned to St. Louis yesterday for a one-day stand at the Shubert-Rialto Theater, giving "Twelfth Night" in the afternoon and, of course, "Hamlet" in the evening.

Of the various itinerant purveyors of Shakspeare, Greet maintains perhaps the highest average of excellence. Presenting the various comedies and tragedies, each with its peculiar exactions, is not easy. To do the thing at all well is extraordinary; to do it as Greet does it is phenomenal in the field of modern entertainment.

Greet clings to the Shakspearean tradition. His players strut their brief bit upon the stage without benefit of scenery—a simple hanging at the back, with openings for entrances and exits and windows, a few stools, a sort of dais, and that is all.

Indeed, the play IS the thing. With Greet, Shakspeare is no mere vehicle for a star's aspirations, but a well-balanced, well-rounded and complete whole, and his company is able. There are no stars, no outstanding performances other than the text requires.

Characteristically, for "Hamlet" Greet chooses to offer the First Quarto version of 1603, a ruder, more robust and forthright text than the one usually presented. It moves with no ambiguity through Hamlet's discovery of his father's murder to his deliberate plot to trap his uncle, the murderer, and the melodramatic finale with everyone dead on the stage. The source of the text is explained in a footnote for the sake of any in the audience who might think to detect some minute misquotation in many of the familiar lines.

Greet encased his heavy figure in the robes of Corambis (Polonius, then doubled as the First Gravedigger. The Hamlet was Russell Thorndike, physically a bit lumpy and mature for the conventional notion of the Melancholy Dane, but equipped not only with thorough understanding of his role but also the ability to carry over his implications to the audience. The quaintly beautiful Thea Holmes made an appealing Ophelia and the foxy redness of Kynaston Reeves gave picturesque effect to his distinguished performance as the King.

Shakspeare drew two good houses in St. Louis yesterday. It may be noted in passing, however, that the punning wit of "Twelfth Night" hardly drew a giggle and that Hamlet's assassination of the King did.

23-HOUR RAIL SERVICE TO NEW YORK STARTS TODAY

Pennsylvania, Big Four and B. & O. to Shorten Time East; Better Air Line Connections.

Faster train service between St. Louis and the Atlantic Coast will be introduced today, when the Pennsylvania and the Big Four (New York Central) lines will install 23-hour service to New York, and the Baltimore & Ohio will shorten its time to Washington.

Improved connections between the Pennsylvania and the T. A. T.-Maddux air lines, at Port Columbus, the flying field near Columbus, O., will result from the new schedules. The Airway Limited, leaving New York at 6:05 p. m., will deliver passengers at Port Columbus the next morning to take westbound planes, and eastbound passengers will leave the planes at Port Columbus in the evening, to take the American, which leaves St. Louis at 9:05 a. m. The American and Spirit of St. Louis trains will go on 23-hour schedules between St. Louis and New York.

Today will be observed by the New York Central as the fifth anniversary of the Southwestern Limited, and tea and cake will be served to passengers on the train this afternoon. The schedules of this train and the Knickerbocker are reduced to 23 hours today.

R. F. Nicholson Dies.

R. F. Nicholson, division freight agent of the Burlington Railroad at Galesburg, Ill., and a former resident of St. Louis, died Friday at Galesburg, according to word received here yesterday. After leaving St. Louis he was in the Burlington offices in Kansas City, being transferred to Galesburg three years ago. Full arrangements for funeral services, which will be held from the Cullinane Undertaking Chapel, 1170 North Grand boulevard, Tuesday afternoon, have not been made.

TO ENFORCE NEW TRAFFIC CODE IN ABOUT 10 DAYS

Police Giving Public Time to Become Familiar with Ordinance.

Enforcement of the new uniform traffic code, which became effective on Friday, will begin in about 10 days. The delay, Chief of Police Gerk explained, is to give the public the customary opportunity to become acquainted with the new law. Sixteen-page pamphlets quoting the code may be obtained free at the City Register's office, 203 City Hall.

Automobiles and other street vehicles, motor cycles and bicycles, street cars, busses, trains, pedestrians and even children playing with wheeled toys are affected by various clauses of the code. Probably the provision that has attracted the most attention is one requiring a vehicle overtaking a street car that has stopped or is about to stop for passengers to be halted to the rear of the nearest running board or door of the trolley until the passengers have boarded or reached a place of safety. Where there is a marked safety zone, however, vehicles may proceed cautiously.

Receivership Modified.

By the Associated Press.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Ok., April 26.—An order modifying the temporary receivership ordered yesterday for the Oklahoma Cotton Growers' Association, was issued today by District Judge Tom G. Chambers. Under the modification, the temporary receiver, R. H. Wilson, will exercise no control over the management of the association, but will have access to the books and records.

VETERAN GETS DERBY HOPE TO WIRE FIRST BY 4 LENGTHS

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 26.—Displaying the same brilliant riding ability that ranked him as America's foremost jockey for 10 years, Earl Sande today rode the Belair Stud's Gallant Fox home to victory in the $10,000 Wood Memorial over the Jamaica turf.

The triumph of the 3-year-old trained by Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons was a popular one as Gallant Fox has been made the future book favorite for the Preakness and the Kentucky Derby. For Sande, who is endeavoring to stage a comeback, it meant that he had regained the riding form that gave ground to none a few years ago. Sande has been engaged to ride Gallant Fox in both of the big May stakes.

Four lengths back of the flying hoofs of the offspring of Sir Gallahad III trailed T. M. Cassidy's Crack Brigade while another two lengths to the rear came Mrs. Graham Fair Vanderbilt's highly regarded Desert Light. Both Crack Brigade and Desert Light have been named for the Derby along with Spinach and Gold Brook which completed the field.

In winning, Sande gave a great exhibition of riding. He broke Gallant Fox from the post fast, but the others crowded over to the rail and soon they had Sande in a pocket. Rounding the first turn Gold was forced back. It was a wise move, however, as Sande took his mount to the outside and then rated the colt along to the top of the stretch. In a short, sharp struggle the Belair colt made Crack Brigade stop and then the rest was easy. Gallant Fox was timed in 1:43 3-5 for the mile and 70 yards.

The Rainbow's End.

MAXIE SCHMELING, the "German Jack Dempsey," is on his way to America and that pot of gold at the rainbow's end—if any. At this writing, the rainbow is there; so is the gold—locked up in John Cash Customer's sock.

It's the job of Maxie and Jack Sharkey to tease it forth into the bright lights on June 26 at New York. At last reports J. C. Customer, a veteran of many previous attempts to commit larceny on his private stock, had a double Nelson on his pocketbook.

The probabilities appear good that while Maxie and Jack may achieve a sizeable auriferous pot, as a result of their encounter, the promoters will hold a bag of about the same dimensions as the late Tex Rickard held after his last big promotion.

The late start of the ballyhoo and the utter lack of anything to brag about puts a mute in all the loud horns which, in the past have blatted their theme song to the customers.

Sharkey to Blame.

AND if any person can be held more responsible than another for the situation, it will have to be Sharkey himself. First by hand-picking his opponent at Miami and then by failing to whip him in a convincing manner, America's leading candidate weakened the rather feeble esteem in which he had been held.

UNIVERSITY CITY FIRST IN BOTH DIVISIONS OF COUNTY MEET

University City High School track and field athletes won both senior and junior divisions of the twelfth annual county meet held at Francis Field yesterday afternoon, outscoring their nearest rival by 24 points in the junior division and by 22 points in the senior. University City took six firsts in each division and a large number of other places, to clinch their victory in both divisions.

Maplewood finished second in both divisions, with 30½ points in the seniors and 35½ points in the juniors.

Kirkwood finished third in the seniors and St. Charles in the juniors.

Two Thrilling Races.

Two thrilling races were staged by Taft of University City and Lawver of Clayton in the senior 100 and 220 yard dashes, Taft nosing out Lawver in both events. In the senior high jump, Pickering of St. Charles set a new record by clearing the bar at 5 feet 10 inches, thereby bettering the old record by two inches. In the senior 880-yard relay, which was won by University City, the team came within one-tenth of a second of the old mark, being clocked in 1:36.6.

Eichman of Normandy created an upset when he defeated L. Austin of U. City in the 880-yard run, beating last year's winner by two yards. Miller of U. City set a new record in the 220 low hurdles

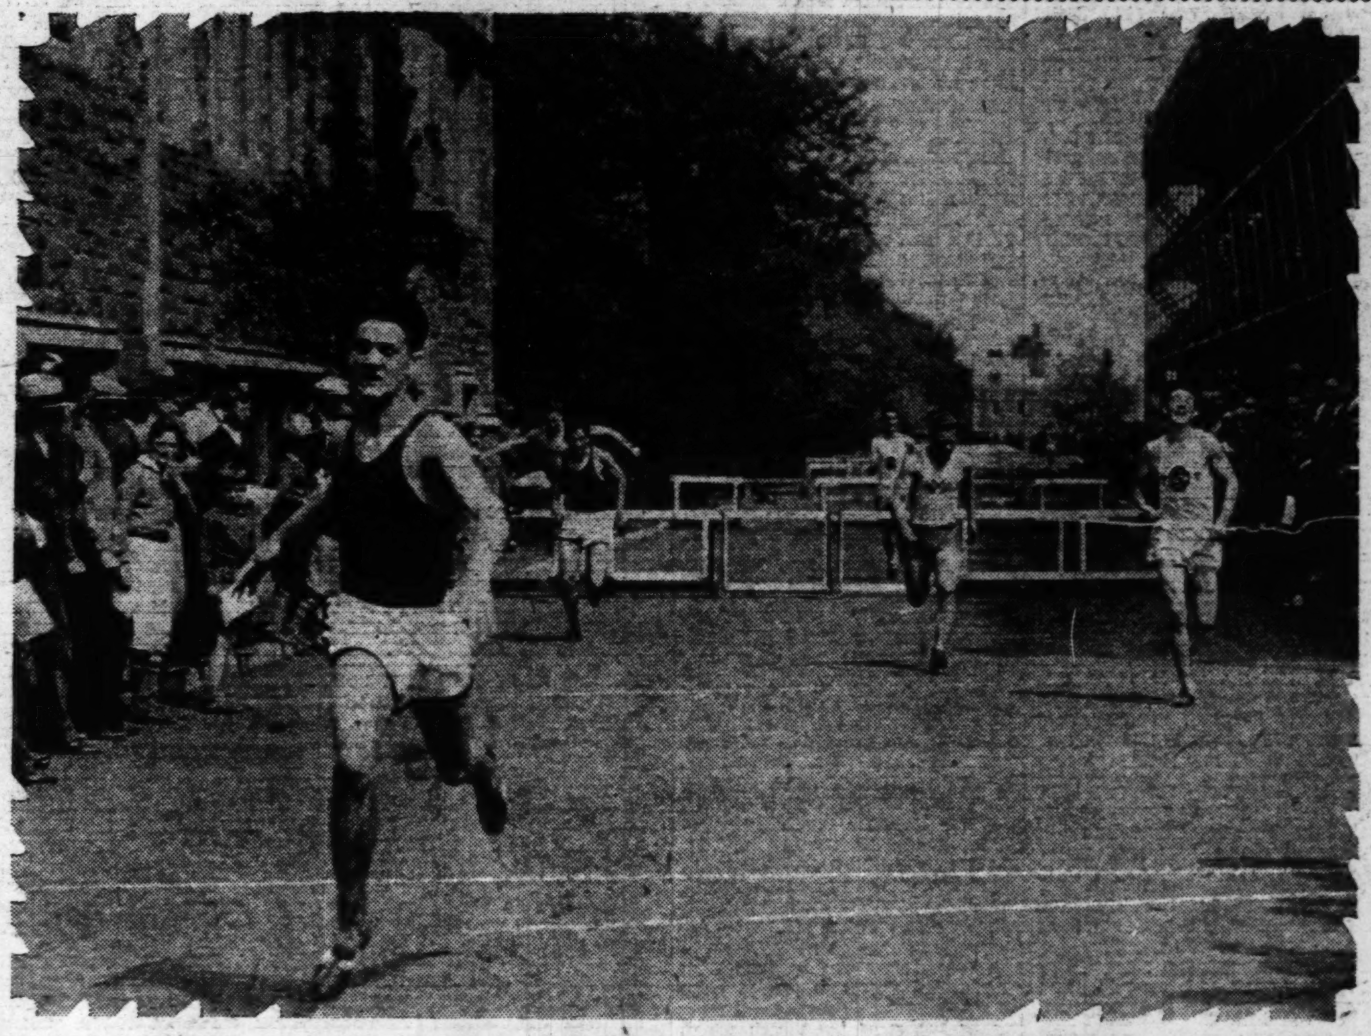
Miller Setting New Record in the County High Track Championships



In the foreground is Webb Miller, of University City, who set a new record of 26 seconds flat for the 220 yard low hurdles. The three closest contenders are Schoole, of St. Charles, at extreme right, who finished second; Beeley of Maplewood, second from right, who finished third; Dorfmont of University City, behind Miller, who finished fourth.

The Rainbow's End.

MAXIE SCHMELING, the "German Jack Dempsey," is on his way to America and that pot of gold at the rainbow's end—if any. At this writing, the rainbow is there; so is the gold—locked up in John Cash Customer's sock.

It's the job of Maxie and Jack Sharkey to tease it forth into the bright lights on June 26 at New York. At last reports J. C. Customer, a veteran of many previous attempts to commit larceny on his private stock, had a double Nelson on his pocketbook.

The probabilities appear good that while Maxie and Jack may achieve a sizeable auriferous pot, as a result of their encounter, the promoters will hold a bag of about the same dimensions as the late Tex Rickard held after his last big promotion.

The late start of the ballyhoo and the utter lack of anything to brag about puts a mute in all the loud horns which, in the past have blatted their theme song to the customers.

Sharkey to Blame.

AND if any person can be held more responsible than another for the situation, it will have to be Sharkey himself. First by hand-picking his opponent at Miami and then by failing to whip him in a convincing manner, America's leading candidate weakened the rather feeble esteem in which he had been held.

There is at this writing no reason to believe that Maxie will share in another of those rare situations, a "million dollar gate."

Carnera's Case.

PRIMO CARNERA, having socked a long line of stiffs for a dollar sign and six figures, is now taking them on the chin himself. Rather, he is taking them on the pocketbook, which, believe it or not, is far more sensitive than either the beezer or the solar plexus.

Commission after commission is wheeling into line and giving Primo an official discharge at point-blank range. It reminds one of the chorus in the Messiah: "All we, like sheep"—commissions are that way. And some of the weigh is very light.

These commissions may be putting themselves in line for personal damage suits, for depriving Carnera of his means of livelihood. Not one thing has been proved against Carnera himself. There is not the slightest doubt that he himself has given his best efforts in every bout he has fought. There seems no doubt that he could repeat every victory he has won!

But commissions are now busy suspending him and forcing promoters to cancel match after match. The latest cancellation was his Derby eve engagement at Louisville.

In each instance the commis-

ARSENAL TEAM WINS BRITISH SOCCER TITLE; 100,000 ATTEND

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, April 26.—Before a huge throng and in the presence of King George, London's association football team triumphed over Yorkshire in the cup final at the Wembley Stadium today, the score being Arsenal 2, Huddersfield 0.

A vast crowd estimated at nearly 100,000 attended the game and got an unexpected thrill when King George arrived and joined the spectators. It had previously been announced he would not attend because of doubtful weather prospects but the threatened rain held off and he finally decided to come.

His appearance, as he walked across the field, accompanied by his second son, the Duke of York, was greeted with cheers, the band playing and the crowd singing the national anthem. The King, who was looking extremely fit, wore a bowler hat and a long black overcoat. He shook hands with the members of the teams before proceeding to the royal box.

The football match itself was fiercely contested from the start with a slight advantage for the Londoners, the score at half time being, Arsenal 1 and Huddersfield 0.

*New carnival record.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, April 26.—For the second straight year, Ohio State's greyhound of the cinder paths, George Simpson, today brought the Pennsylvania relay carnival to a smashing climax with a world's record performance in the 100-yard dash.

Last spring the famous Buckeye Bullet shot from his new and much-disputed starting blocks to race the century in 9 3-5 seconds, equaling the listed world's record with the fastest "100" ever witnessed on historic Franklin Field. Today, with a crowd of 30,000 cheering him on, Simpson disdained the blocks, went back to the old fashioned holes and repeated his time of 9 3-5 seconds, thereby satisfying any and all skeptics.

This was the fourth sprint of the afternoon for Simpson, but it was also his best as he sped down the straightaway to beat his nearest rival, De Armond Hutson, of Denison, (Ohio) College by a half dozen yards and leave in the ruck such Eastern aces as Pete Bowen of Pittsburg and John Harwood of Syracuse. The expected clash between Simpson and Karl Wilson Wildermuth of Georgetown, the Eastern intercollegiate champion, failed to materialize when Wildermuth pulled a tendon and withdrew in the semifinals.

Anchor on Winning Team.

Previously, Simpson had won his two 100-yard trial heats handily in 10 seconds flat and then anchored the Ohio State half mile relay team that successfully defended its title in this event and shattered its own carnival record. In this race, the Buckeyes gained revenge on their conquerors of the day before, Chicago, and were clocked in 1 minute 26 8-10 seconds. The time displaced their last year's mark of 1m 27s.

Altogether there were a half dozen record performances today, including a world's record interscholastic two-mile by the Lakewood (Ohio) quartet in 8 minutes 16 2-10 seconds and a carnival broad jump mark of 25 feet 4¼ inches by Ed Hamm of Georgia Tech, the world's champion, who thereby displaced the 21-year-old record made by the late Myer Prinstein of Syracuse.

Ohio State's half-mile relay victory, plus two major victories yesterday by the University of Chicago enabled the Middlewest to take three of the eight principal relay championships, but the East came back strong today and, as had been expected, furnished the most spectacular racing of the afternoon in the classic one-mile event.

Harvard Wins Mile Relay.

Six fast teams toed the marks for the one-mile race and Harvard, the favorite, won, but it was a ding-dong battle from start to finish, punctuated by spills as well as thrills and not decided until the last few strides.

Record, running for Harvard, put the Crimson back in the running in the third quarter after a poor start and Munroe, running anchor, triumphed with a great drive down the last stretch to overhaul Steel of Pennsylvania. Munroe won by a scant yard from his Penn rival

BRITONS WIN FIRST ROUND OF DAVIS CUP PLAY FROM GERMANS

LONDON, April 26.—Great Britain's Davis Cup players came from behind with a pair of smashing victories in the closing singles today to win their first round contest with Germany by a count of three matches to two.

After losing the first two singles matches and needing to win all three of the remaining matches, the British began their sensational rally yesterday by winning the doubles and today they achieved their goal through the brilliant playing of Henry Austin and H. G. N. Lee.

The youthful Briton, former Cambridge captain, fully atoned for his disappointing play of the opening day by trouncing the German ace, Daniel Prenn, 6—3, 6—4, 7—5. With the count at two matches apiece, the issue now lay entirely in the hands of H. G. N. Lee of Britain and Dr. Heinz Landmann, German veteran, and Lee came through at 5—7, 6—3, 6—2, 6—3.

Britons now are confident that their singles players have found themselves and with the aid of J. C. Gregory and I. G. Collins in doubles will go a long way in the European zone play. Lee made a fine record in recent play on the Riviera while Austin, despite his youth, is an experienced international campaigner.

Austin never played better than in his match with Prenn and the German never had a chance.

8-POUND SHOT PUT RECORD MADE BY RALPH ROSE BEATEN

BOULDER, Colo., April 26.—Big Dan Beattie, Colorado Agricultural College weight man, established a new world record in the University of Colorado relay games today when he tossed the eight-pound shot put 68 feet flat. The old record was 67 feet 7½ inches, made in 1907 by Ralph Rose.

By Herman Wecke.

Those surprising Browns are in second place today, ahead of the World Champion Athletics. This sensational feat was accomplished when the men of Killefer annihilated the White Sox, 12 to 0, for their fifth straight victory, while the surprising Senators were again downing Connie Mack's men yesterday. The record crowd for an American League game in St. Louis this season—announced at 5500—attended.

Killefer's men exhibited a devastating punch in driving Ted Lyons, one of the best pitchers in the American League, off the hill. In addition the St. Louis club had sensational hurling from Alvin Crowder, who incidentally put across his first victory of the 1930 season against two defeats. The Browns' conquest was the twentieth for the club in the last 25 games played with the entry of Charley Comiskey.

Crowder Yields Six Hits.

Crowder was at his best. Until the sixth, he was a three-hit pitcher, the White Sox connecting for a safety in each of the first three rounds. They punched him for two wallops in the seventh and one in the eighth. There were no Sox hits in the ninth, so it was the fourth successive six-hit effort turned in by the Browns' hurlers. In the ninth it appeared that Crowder was weakening, when he walked Clancy and Moore, but McNeely in left field made a one-handed catch in picking Kamm's drive off the wall, while Crowder himself started a double play on Klinger's bounder.

There was plenty of Brownie clubbing against the three Windy City pitchers, the locals amassing a total of 15 wallops, which included two doubles and a pair of triples.

O'Rourke Supplies Punch.

Although there were other raps, the big punch was supplied by Frank O'Rourke, who drove out a triple with three men on the bases in the fourth, sent Lyons to an early shower. Melillo was a big gun. He started two rallies and made four swats in a row before he was stopped by Caraway in the eighth. While the Brown's batting and pitching was all that could be expected, the defense again sparkled, greatly in contrast to that of the White Sox. Bush's men were charged with six errors during the pastime and all of them proved costly.

Lyons' defense crumpled in the second, when the Browns put over three runs. Melillo started the fun with a single and Gullic followed suit. Manion put down a little tap, which Lyons fielded, but the bases were filled when Kamm dropped the throw at third. Crowder hit to Cissell, who fell down and then threw into left field and all three runners scored, Crowder reaching second. Here Lyons decided to take matters in his own hands. He caught Blue's pop bunt and doubled Crowder off second and followed by tossing out O'Rourke.

The Big Inning.

It was the power of the Browns' bats, which netted seven runs and sent Lyons to the showers in the fourth. Melillo doubled and Gullic sacrificed. Manion singled to score Melillo. Crowder beat out an infield rap and Blue hit to fill the bases. O'Rourke unpacked them with a triple and Lyons was on his way, Southpaw Weiland coming in.

McNeely, batted for Badgro and

SEVEN RECORDS FALL IN DRAKE MEET; ILLINOIS WINS THREE RELAYS

TOM WARNE BEATS POLE VAULT MARK; MARTIN SETS A NEW STANDARD FOR 2-MILE RUN

By the Associated Press.

DES MOINES, Ia., April 26.—Climaxing an afternoon of glittering performances, in which seven meet records fell by the wayside, black-haired Tommy Warne of Northwestern University provided the thrill in the finals of the Drake relay carnival today when he missed by a hair's breadth establishing a new world's record for the pole vault.

The hearts of 15,000 spectators nearly skipped a beat as Warne, a slightly built youngster, attempted to clear the bar at 14 feet 2 inches, a height never before reached by a vaulter.

Warne hurled his body over the bar, with inches to spare, but he knocked the cross bar from its moorings with one arm in his descent and the spectators, waiting breathlessly to cheer, gave way to a groan as the cross bar came tumbling to the ground, ruining Warne's record breaking attempt.

Beats Meet Mark 6 Inches.

Previous to making this attempt to crack the record, Warne had cleared 13 feet, 11 inches, bettering by nearly 6 inches the former Drake relay record made by Otterness of Minnesota a year ago.

In addition to the record in the vault, new marks for the Drake carnival were established in the 440-yard university relay, the 480-yard shuttle relay, college sprint medley relay, the two-mile run, shotput and the 440-yard relay for letter men from championship football teams.

The crack University of Illinois relay quartet winning three relays, established records in two of them. The great Illini sprint team with Useman, Sentman, Cave and Paterson handling the baton in faultless fashion won the 440-yard university event in 41 7-10, clipping a tenth of a second from the meet record held jointly by Kansas and Iowa.

Illinois came back with another record breaking performance to the 480-yard shuttle relay with Etnyre, Cave, Rogers, and Sentman skimming over the timbers in 1 minute, 1 9-10 seconds. The Illini finished their afternoon's work by bagging their third race in winning the 880-yard relay in 1 minute, 27 6-10 seconds. Useman, Dickinson, Cave and Paterson composed the Illinois team for this event.

Notre Dame Wins 2-Mile.

Notre Dame, credited with possessing one of the greatest two-mile teams in America, won a smashing victory from Washington State in this event with Wilson, Quigley, Abbott and Littel covering the distance in 7 minutes, 54 8-10 seconds. Washington finished about 15 yards behind the Hoosiers. Missouri's mighty one-mile relay team ran away from the field in this event, with Welch, Dills, Ulfers and Hursley running in order the Missourians covered the mile in the remarkably fast time of 3:17, failing by two-tenths of a second to shatter the record set in 1923 by Iowa.

The four-mile event which Marquette University won, brought out a spectacular duel between two Olympic stars, Jack Walter, who was a member of the Canadian Olympic team, and Joe Sivak of Butler College, a member of the American 1928 Olympic team. Sivak, however, could not out-run Walter and as a result Marquette won with a lead of 25 yards in 18:6.6.

In the 100-yard dash Cy Leland, the thundering sprinter from Texas Christian University, defeated his Texas rival, Claude Bracey of Rice Institute, for the fifth time this season. Leland broke the tape a foot ahead of Bracey in 9 6-10, with Eddie Tolan of Michigan running third. Leland and Bracey ran neck and neck half way down the course, but Leland gained inch by inch through - superior driving power.

Orval Martin, Purdue's one-man track team, scored a spectacular victory in the two-mile run when he finished in front of the fastest field of two milers that ever competed in the Drake meet. Martin ran the race in 9:26.2, more than 5 seconds under the Drake record established by Shimek of Marquette. It was the first time the Purdue star ever ran the two-mile in competition.

WYKOFF EQUALS MARK FOR 100 YARDS IN NIGHT TRACK MEET

FRESNO, Cal., April 26.—Under electric lights, the Far West's track and field athletes made their bids for national and world's records here tonight in the fourth annual West Coast relays. It was one of the few times in the history of track and field competition that a meet was held outdoors at night. More than 250 athletes competed.

Frank Wykoff, University of Southern California speedster and joint holder of the 9 6-10 second world record for the 100-yard dash, equaled that time in winning his heat.

WHEN working on affairs of

In case of doubt, investigate.
There's nothing in our glorious

That cannot stand investigation.

We sink the probe down to the

—RALPH T. OLLEY.

We can't see how either a carpenter or a farmer could get very far doing farm work on a bridge. The matter is too involved for us and is respectfully referred to the Farm Board.

Even if the leader of an orchestra is opposed to applause it doesn't follow that the musicians who really make the music are averse to having their efforts appreciated.

Which brings us around to the talking pictures, where the audience seemingly by tactic agreement refrain from applauding with the hands but do not restrain their laughter at anything funny. Especially when it isn't intended to be funny.

NEBRASKA GETS 1931 THANKSGIVING DATE WITH PITT

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURG, April 26. — The University of Nebraska and the University of Pittsburg have signed a two-year home-and-home football agreement, the Cornhuskers to play here on Thanksgiving day, 1931, and Pitt to appear at Nebraska in 1932, at a date to be decided.

Penn State has been the Panther grid opponent on Thanksgiving since 1893, but will not be dropped from the 1931 schedule, it was made known at the same time the Nebraska agreement was announced today. A date for the Penn State game will be determined later.

Pittsburg is scheduled to play at Nebraska next fall in fulfillment of a previous contract. The two elevens have been opponents each year since 1927, and first met in 1921 when the Cornhuskers came here to defeat a Panther squad coached by "Pop" Warner.

NEW DAVIS CUP TEAM HAS GOOD CHANCE TO BEAT FRENCH RIVALS

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, Va., April 26.—Prospects for the recovery of the Davis Cup, which has resided in France for some time and which seemed destined to remain there for at least two years more, brightened today with the naming of the four players on whom the United States will rely for its American zone defense.

The four players, all young, will be the most youthful squad that ever battled for the international honor. They are John Doeg from California, John Van Ryn, Princeton University product, George Lott of Chicago and Wilmer Allison whom Texas gave to the world. This quartet will play in the American zone defense and also will be the quartet to bear the torch abroad. Their recent play indicates considerable improvement.

Doubles Combination Sure.

The Allison-Van Ryn combination in the double which gained a victory in the Davis Cup play of last year, will doubtless again be to the forefront this year. The singles of course are problematical depending on how the preliminary play develops the individuals.

It was the prevailing belief among authorities here that America stands an excellent chance of retrieving the bowl from France, even though Big Bill Tilden and Francis Hunter have decreed they will not play for the cup this year.

It has developed that Lacoste is definitely out of the running and there is a possibility that Cochet will be barred—in fact, it is considered a probability. If he is, that will leave Jean Borotra as the only singles star to be conquered and with no effective doubles pair.

New Davis Cup Doubles Partners Win Dixie Title

By the Associated Press.

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., April 26.—John Van Ryn of South Orange, N. J., and Wilmer Allison Jr., of Austin, Tex., justified the selection of the Davis Cup Committee which yesterday named them to represent the United States as the doubles team in the 1930 competition by vanquishing the national doubles champions, George M. Lott Jr., of Chicago and John Doeg of Santa Monica, Cal., in the finals of the Mason and Dixon doubles championship this afternoon. The defeated pair were named by the Davis Cup Committee to represent the United States in singles competition.

The scores of the match which was fought on the courts of the Greenbrier Golf and Tennis Club were 3—6, 12—10, 7—5, 6—3.

The same remarkable ability to volley at the net which has characterized their play in other matches was the reason for the success of the youthful Davis Cup doubles pair in their match today. Following the match Joseph W. Wear, chairman of the Davis Cup Committee, made a short address congratulating the four youngsters on their selection and expressing the opinion that they would bring the Davis Cup back to the United States.

Wear pointed out that the combination of Van Ryn, Allison, Doeg and Lott is the youngest quartet ever to represent the United States in the Davis Cup matches.

The match concluded the tenth annual Mason and Dixon tennis championship.

after the Quakers had alternated with Holy Cross in setting the early pace. Yale, Holy Cross and Georgetown finished third, fourth, and fifth, all pretty well bunched.

Syracuse was last, its bright chances being destroyed at the end of the second lap when Graham, Negro runner, fell in the baton-passing jumble.

Conger Defeats Lermond.

The ballyhooed one-mile duel between Ray Conger of the Illinois and Leo Lermond of the Boston A. A., two of the country's premier performers at this distance, fell far short of expectation. In addition to Hamm's record broad jump, the carnival javelin record was broken by Friedman of Geneva (Pa.) College with a throw of 197 feet ¼ inch. Other winners of individual events were: Flanagan of Holy Cross in the hammer throw, 158 feet 2⅞ inches; O'Connor of Columbia in the high jump, 6 feet 1⅝ inches; Levy of Cornell in the shotput, 47 feet 1⅜ inches; Cone of Yale in the pole vault, 13 feet.

STANFORD SWEEPS FIVE EVENTS AND DEFEATS WASHINGTON IN MEET

By the Associated Press.

PALO ALTO, Cal., April 26.—Making clean sweeps in five events, Stanford's powerful track and field squad overwhelmed Washington's huskies, 96 to 35, here today in their annual dual meet.

Starting with the opening event, the mile run, Coach "Dink" Templeton's athletes drew away from their rivals in decisive fashion. Stanford men showed the way in all places in the 100-yard dash, the pole vault, javelin throw, broad jump and low hurdles. Washington had its inning, however, with a "white wash" in the half-mile run.

Double winners included "Hec" Dyer, Stanford sprint ace and his hurdling teammate, Roger Smith, and Rufus Kiser, Washington distance star. Dyer picked off top place in the 100 in 9 9-10 and in the 220-yard dash with 21 7-10 seconds. Smith raced over the high hurdles in 15 3-10 seconds and annexed the 220-yard low barrier event in 25 1-10 seconds. Kiser's achievement was the most impressive of the day as he ran to easy victory in the mile and returned half an hour later to romp home ahead of the field in the half-mile.

SULLIVAN ABANDONS FIGHT PROMOTING; NOW SWIMMING COACH

BROOKLYN TOMMY SULLIVAN, matchmaker for the Fred W. Stockham Legion Post, will not use his last date at the Coliseum, April 29, and is through promoting fights for the season and perhaps for good, it was announced today.

Sullivan, backed by Benny McGovern and other associates, put on half a dozen shows during the season and only one of them, the Bass-Abad fight, produced a profit. His last event, the Von Porat-De Mave headliner, was knocked for a complete loop when De Mave ran out of the match because of scanty attendance.

Sullivan has been engaged as swimming coach of the Bridlespur Club, according to an announcement made by one of his associates.

BEAUMONT AND ROOSEVELT WIN IN HIGH SCHOOL DOUBLEHEADER

By Harold Tuthill

The situation in the City High School League baseball race remained tied as the two leaders won yesterday afternoon in the double-header at the public schools stadium. Beaumont walloped Central, 22 to 6, in the first game, and Roosevelt subdued Cleveland, 8 to 1. The attendance was again small, the estimate being 250.

Beaumont went on a hitting spree and fattened its averages at the expense of Cliff Brengard, Elmer Boeding and Lawrence Biondo, the three Central pitchers. The North Siders made 22 hits, including home runs by Dan Meyers and Tom Methany. Earl Fay and Bob Kalbitz led the hitting attack with four safeties in six trips to the plate. With the exception of Lou Fear and Harry Hannagan, the other six batters evenly divided the 12 hits. Fehr and Hannagan each got one safe blow.

Seven runs in the fourth and six in the sixth were the two big innings for Beaumont. These 13 runs came as a result of 13 hits and a base on balls, but the lead was not enough for Bob Kalbitz, because he was relieved in the sixth by Harry Hannagan. Hannagan allowed Central one hit and three runs during the rest of the game.

Central Out of Race.

The defeat virtually eliminated Central from the champions, as all the other schools have won at least one game.

The twirling of Merril Baumgartner was too much for the Cleveland team. Baumgartner permitted six scattered blows and was only scored on by Earl Hahn's home run in the second inning. The blow temporarily put Cleveland ahead.

Roosevelt erased the lead in the third inning, when it scored twice after two were out. Bob Murdock and Bill Kerchanske walked and Paul Shy tripled to send both runners across the plate.

Four Cleveland pitchers were used. Alois Wessling, who moved in from left field to become pitcher No. 4, led the Rough Riders down with one hit and no runs in the last two innings.

Hallahan's collapse was sudden and of course, unexpected. He was in trouble in the first and second innings, but he breezed through the fourth and fifth, turning back three men in a row in each inning, and appeared to have struck his best stride.

Two Passes Start Trouble.

Hemsley, the first batter in the fifth, drew a pass and when Bill continued to throw high fast ones, far out of the strike zone, the Cardinal bullpen galvanized into action, Herman Bell, Flint Rhem and Harold Haid warming up. Hallahan walked Clarke and then Bottomley grabbed Brame's hot grounder for the first out, the runners advancing to scoring position.

Ira Flagstead, the veteran outfielder, who is filling in for Lloyd Waner, lined a single to left and two-fifths of the Cardinal lead faded as Hemsley and Clarke scored. Engle punched a single to center, Flagstead stopping at second, and when Paul Waner singled to left, scoring Flagstead and putting Engle on third, Manager Street ran from the dugout and conferred with Wilson and Hallahan.

Bill was permitted to stay in there and it appeared that he might pull out of trouble when Fisher raced back for a fine catch of Comorosky's powerful drive. This brought Suhr to the plate and since he is a lefthanded batter not supposed to be effective against southpaws, it looked like a soft spot for Sir William.

But Suhr connected with a powerful swing and the ball sailed to right center for a triple and Engle and Paul Waner dashed home with runs that tied the count.

The Shooting Goes On and On.

There was no doubt about it now. Something had happened to Hallahan's stuff. If he had walked half a dozen men, Gabby probably would have kept him in there. But a triple by Suhr was too much and Bell was summoned from the bullpen to pitch to the right-handed Bartell. The little shortstop punched a single to right and Suhr scored a run that broke the tie. Singles by Hemsley and Clarke followed and when Brame finally forced Clarke for the third out, the Pirates were two runs ahead.

Suhr's double, Bartell's bunt and a wide throw to first by Jim Wilson, Hemsley's sacrifice and Clarke's triple produced the two runs off Rhem in the seventh. Two were out in the third when the Pirates started the Cardinals on their way to five unearned runs.

Douthit was safe on Bartell's high throw and High walked. Frisch sent an easy fly to Comorosky, but the ball squirted out of the left fielder's hands and Douthit and High scored and Frisch reached second. Bottomley singled to center, scoring Frisch, and Hafey singled, sending Bottomley to third and taking second on the throw for Jim. Fisher's single drove Bottomley and Hafey home, and Fisher then died stealing to end the inning.

The victory was the seventh in eight starts for the Pirates.

PITTSBURG, April 26.—Pirate errors gave Bill Hallahan and the Cardinals five runs in the third inning this afternoon, but the bad Buccaneers knocked Bill out of the box in the fifth and continued the bombardment against Herman Bell to make the inning good for seven runs.

Jewel Ens' men added two more runs at the expense of Flint Rhem in the seventh and scored their fourth straight victory over the Redbirds, 9 to 7.

George Watkins raised the hopes of the Cardinal followers in the ninth when he hit a home run into the right field seats after Earl Smith had drawn a pass, but after Frisch singled, Bottomley ended the game with a long fly to Flagstead.

Hallahan's collapse was sudden and of course, unexpected. He was in trouble in the first and second innings, but he breezed through the fourth and fifth, turning back three men in a row in each inning, and appeared to have struck his best stride.

Hallahan walked Clarke and then Bottomley grabbed Brame's hot grounder for the first out, the runners advancing to scoring position.

PITTSBURG, April 26.—Jess Haines will pitch gainst Dan Howley's Reds in the Sunday game opening a series of four in Cincinnati, according to Gabby Street's present plans. After the series with the Redlegs, the Cards will return to Sportsman's Park for a long stand at home.

Sparky Adams' throwing hand was bruised in one of the collisions with Cuyler in the game with the Cubs and when it bothered him in fielding practice, Manager Street ordered him to the bench and rearranged his first line of defense. Frisch shifted to second, High played third and Farrell continued at short in place of Gelbert, who still is nursing a sore hand.

Hallahan should develop into a great drawing card for the Cardinals. It's a thrill every inning in most of his games. He got the first two batters in the first frame and then Paul Waner beat out a grounder to Farrell. Paul stole second and after Comorosky walked, the elder Waner pilfered third. On an attempted double steal, Wilson's bluff throw to second fooled Waner and he was trapped off third.

Another Pirate Threat.

The Pirates threatened again in the second. With one out Bartell walked and was forced by Hemsley. Bottomley reached Clarke's foul but was in an awkward position and dropped the ball. Clarke then singled to right, sending Hemsley to third, but Brame obligingly popped to High.

Five runs for the Cards had a soothing effect on Wild Bill of the thrills and he retired the Pirates in about one minute and 12 seconds in the third. Flagstead flied to Hafey, Farrell threw out Engle and P. Waner flied to Douthit.

Douthit Registers Kick.

Engle missed Douthit's grounder in the seventh inning, but Bartell backed him up, made a fine stop and threw out Douthit. It was a close play and when Douthit and Coach Ray Blades protested too vigorously, Umpire Quigley ordered them to the showers.

Engle was credited with an assist on the Douthit play, though all he did was to touch the ball. That's a wrinkle in the scoring rules they failed to iron out.

Bottomley, reaching for a low throw from Wilson on Bartell's bunt in the seventh, was knocked down by the runner and time was taken out while Jim regained his wind and counted his fingers.

sion barring him would seem to have decided in advance that the show was to be crooked. As we get it, a crime must be committed before it can be proved up.

Better still than taking a legal shot at the commission, Carnera's managers might send him against some good man and prove that the big fellow doesn't need to have straw men set up before him.

This writer believes the Italian could do right well against some pretty good men and bases the belief not only on Carnera's showing here, but on the two fights he put up against Young Stribling. It was nip and tuck between this pair in their two fights abroad.

And, as an afterthought, we might suggest to state commissions that they put the ban on Stribling, too; for he likewise beat a trail through the country pushing over eggs—not once, but annually!

This Promotion Game!

ARENA officials appear to believe that the arrangement of satisfactory fights is just as easy as hiring a jazz band.

Edward W. Foristel, representing the Arena, attended the hearing of the Kaiser-Terry fight case with a view to protecting Arena's interests and good name. "If we decide that a promoter winks at bad bouts, we will not let that promoter put on another show there," he was quoted as saying.

Gad zooks and oddsbodikins! Wink at bad bouts! Edward surely didn't lamp Promoter Malloy that night as he paced up and down gritting his teeth and pulling his hair—or the place where the hair should have been—as round after round of the Kaiser fight unfolded.

Winked! If looks were bullets, the ambulance would have backed up to the Arena ring after the third round.

Malloy fairly bled as he watched—he bled at the pocketbook which, as previously noted, is extremely painful to a promoter.

It Can't Be Done.

THE fact is that no promoter is able to guarantee in advance what will happen to his best-prized card. Fights that figure to be "naturals" do a fade out, sometimes.

Malloy was entirely justified in believing that Kaiser and Terry would put on a whale of a fight—for they had done just that thing only a few weeks before. With the conditions the same, the purse much greater and the city title at stake, any promoter in the vicinity would have been delighted to put on this show.

In the absence of any proved crooked development or any reason for shirking, it seems reasonable to believe that Terry weakened himself making weight as claimed and that Kaiser was off his feed.

Neither men nor animals can maintain the same peak whenever called upon for a contest.

A Real American Champion.

ONCE again we have an American champion and there is no doubt about his Americanism. He is Wilson Charles, an Oneida Indian, and his point total of 7543.396 points scored in his decathlon victory at the Kansas relays was 83 points better than that of Barney Berlinger, who won the same event at the Penn relay games one week later.

The decathlon is decided purely on points determined by the relative closeness of the athlete to the world record, in each event. Contestants do not have to actually compete against one another to establish an accurate comparison. So there will be no dispute about Charles' supremacy this season, unless it comes in the National A. A. U. championships some months later.

The Redman's "Meat."

THE all-around event has peculiar lure for the redman, who seems unusually adapted to this form of competition. First, there was the mighty Fox and Sac Indian, Jim Thorpe, probably the greatest of them all. He won the Olympic decathlon of 1912 with a total that has been beaten since, under improved conditions, but only by a narrow margin. Then there was Fait Elkins another famous all-around champion—he, too, was of Indian blood. John Levi, Haskell Indian star, was a great all-around star—and now its Wilson Charles.

Both Berlinger and Charles are young, which assures America of two wonderful athletes for the Olympic decathlon of 1932 at Los Angeles.

If Berlinger can improve his wretched showing in the 1500-meter run, he might defeat Charles. Their comparative records show that it took Berlinger 6.02 minutes to run this distance, which Charles performed in the creditable time of 4:45.3.

As a matter of comparative records had the men actually met in competition, Charles would have beaten his rival in the 100-meter dash, broad jump, the high jump, the 400-meter run, the high hurdle, the discus and the 1500-meter run. Berlinger would have won only the shotput, the javelin throw and pole vault.

That makes the score 7 to 3, and ought to prove the redman's superiority conclusively.

Dempsey's "Angel."

TWO news items last week indicate that the tide of promotion luck may have turned for Jack Dempsey. One was the balance sheet of the Bud Taylor-Fidel La Barba fight, which showed a $6000 profit for Promoter Dempsey.

The other was the announcement of a new combination "Big Three"—William Carey of Madison Square Garden, George Getz of Chicago and Dempsey himself, soon to be associated in promoting a huge enterprise involving the erection of a 20-story building and arena in Chicago.

The move appears to be a concession on the part of New York promoters that Chicago is on an equality with the Metropolis as a fight center.

The name of Getz associated with Dempsey in this connection, reminds us again of the story that Dempsey's promotion venture in Chicago was being underwritten by Getz.

Browns in Second Place After Blanking Chicago, 12-0

greeted the newcomer with a double to score O'Rourke. Kress went out but Schulte singled to tally McNeely. Melillo crashed out his second single of the round and when Jolley tried a drop-kick, Schulte scored from first.

Two runs, entirely unnecessary, were added to the Browns' total while Southpaw Caraway was on the hill in the eighth. Kress was safe on Smith's fumble and Schulte tripled to center to count the shortstop. When Cissell threw wild, the sixth Chicago error, after taking Reynolds' relay, Schulte completed the circuit.

Brownie Notes.

THERE will be another battle of right handers in the final of the series between the Browns and White Sox, this afternoon. It will be Sam Gray, trying for his first 1930 victory for the Browns, and Alphonse "Tommy" Thomas for Bush's men.

Earl McNeely works out at first base every day during the Browns' fielding drills. He will likely be used as a substitute at the position should anything happen to Lu Blue.

"Maybe George is not telling everything," said L. C. McEvoy, vice president of the club, when shown a telegram stating that Blaeholder would accept a position with an oil company. He hinted that there might be some causes Blaeholder objected to more than the salary offered. "But he can accept that job with the oil company. He need not wait any longer, inasmuch as he was placed on the ineligible list by Commissioner Landis as soon as we notified Landis that he has failed to sign a contract in the 10 days allowed under baseball rules," commented McEvoy.

Fans were entertained during the pasttime by the band from Central College of Fayette, Mo., and how?

If there is one thing Dick Nallin would rather do than umpire it is to talk about his dogs.

Fielding thrills came early. In the first with Smith on second as a result of a double, Blue knocked down Jolley's hard smash, recovered and tossed to Blue in time to retire the former coast slugger.

Moore, the young outfielder, retaliated with a sparkling play, when he went to the wall in left for a leaping catch of Badgro's hard liner.

Evidently Donie Bush is not a believer in the sacrifice. The first men up in each the first and second rounds reached base but no effort was made to push him along.

Smead Jolley looked like anything but a major league outfielder in chasing McNeely's drive in the fourth. When he kicked Melillo's hit around he did not improve one bit. He'll have to do an awful lot of hitting to offset his poor defensive work.

Wonders will never cease. Umpire Dineen was seen running during the Browns' big fourth inning rally.

BATTING STARS—Oscar Melillo had four, one a double, and Frank O'Rourke three, including a triple with three on.

When Bush started to trot out pinch hitters in the seventh, the crowd yelled for "Whattaman" Shires, but Bush would not heed the pleas.

Wright's Error Helps Braves Win Over Robins, 2-1

BOSTON, April 26.—A pair of bases on balls, an error by Glenn Wright and Maguire's single gave the Braves a 2-to-1 victory over the Brooklyn Robins today. The combination came in the third inning, and with a double steal by Clark and Berger produced both of Boston's runs.

The game was a pitchers' battle between Harry Seibold of the Braves and Jim Elliott of Brooklyn from start to finish. Seibold gave nine hits to seven off Elliott, but he pitched himself out of several holes with men on bases. Wright's double and Elliott's single in the seventh scored the Brooklyn run.

JEWISH C. C. TRACK TEAMS SCHEDULE THREE MORE EVENTS

The Jewish Community Center track team is rounding out its track schedule. Coach Grossman has scheduled three more meets for his team. On May 4 the annual David Kreigshaber J. C. C. field day will be held at Beaumont High. Every club at the Center has entered a team in this meet. On May 11 the varsity track team meets Holy Cross in a dual meet at Beaumont High School field. GIANTS RUN STREAK TO SIX, WINNING TWICE FROM PHILLIES

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, April 26.—The undefeated New York Giants scored their fifth and sixth victories of the National League season at the expense of the Phillies in a doubleheader today. They pounded out a 13-to-2 victory in the first game and then won the second, 7 to 5.

The Giants had no trouble hitting the offerings of seven Philadelphia pitchers in the two games for a total of 32 hits. Koupal, Smythe, Elliott and Speece yielded 16 blows in the first game, and Sweetland, Collins and Alexander gave up the same number in the second. Freddy Lindstrom led the hitters by getting five successive hits in the first game and two out of four in the second. Travis Jackson and Bill Terry each hit two homers, putting Jackson at the head of the list with a total of four.

Hub Pruett pitched a fine game in the opener until he was removed to give Larry Benton a workout. Carl Hubbell hurled most of the second game, yielding to Joe Genewich just before the end.

BALTIMORE, Md., April 26.—The Canadian owned Seagram stable today showed a strong hand for the $50,000 preakness when Sweet Sentiment romped away with the Chesapeake stakes as the spring meeting at Havre de Grace ended. Sweet Sentiment was not named for the Kentucky Derby.

Ridden by Paul McGinnis, stable contract jockey, the Maryland bred filly, covered the mile and one-sixteenth in 1:45 4-5 to pass to judges' stand a length and a half out in front. Michigan Boy, winner of the Louisiana Derby and eligible for the Derby, finished second but was disqualified for pinning Crazy Coot and Nedo over to the rail, when entering the home stretch.

The action of the stewards moved W. J. Salmon's Swinfield into second place while Full Dress of Glen Riddle's stable, was placed third with Skirl getting fourth money. Little considered in the wagering the Seagram Miss paid $23.40 for the usual investment of two dollars in addition to earning $10,150 for her owners.

M'GURK TAKES OPENING STAKE AT DOG TRACK

Dog racing returned last night with the opening of the spring meeting of the Madison Kennel Club at its track near Collinsville. McGurk, a 4-year-old black racer owned by J. P. Larkin of Butte, Mont., won the Inaugural Purse at five-sixteenths of a mile.

A big crowd was on hand, filling the grandstand and bleachers, as well as the standing space, and after a slow start, betting was brisk. The track officials estimated the attendance at 10,000. It appeared that a big part of the crowd went in on complimentary tickets.

Under a new rule against the admittance of children, the minimum age was set at 18 years, signs at the entrance gate indicating that all under that age would not be admitted. This rule eliminates the practice of parents attending with babes in arms.

McGurk, in winning the feature, beat Dick Free, the favorite in the betting, by a length, and paid $16.40 for $2. McGurk has raced at Madison at previous meetings.

Model Oak, winner of the second event, paid $29.60 for a $2 certificate.

PIPGRAS HURLS IN FORM, YANKS WIN ANOTHER

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 26.—The effective pitching of George Pipgras and some timely hits by Tony Lazzeri enabled the Yankees to beat the Boston Red Sox for the second time in succession today. The score was 8 to 3.

Pipgras held the Red Sox to 10 hits, four of them coming in the ninth inning and bringing two runs. The Yankees drove Horace Lisenbee from the mound, scoring four times in the third inning, but could do little against his successor, Bayne.

Lazzeri's first single drove in the first New York run and his second sent two more across the plate.

Lou Gehrig hit his third home run of the season off Bayne in the seventh inning.

Toki, going smartly, improved and breaking fast, set a rapid pace, saved ground all the way and holding on more gamely than usual just lasted to withstand Beau Wrack. Latter rated close to the leaders, lost ground when entering the home stretch and finished in the middle of the track. Algol, a keen contender all the way, held on resolutely in the final drive. Equation was steered wide until settling down for the stretch run where he went to the inside.

Solace, outrunning his field to the first turn, was steadied in front until entering the home stretch, was put to pressure and had enough in reserve to hold Star o' Morn safe. Latter going in good form and well placed, responded to punishment and finished with good courage. Fairy Maiden, reserved off the pace, made a determined effort through the last three furlongs but was steered wide in the final stages to finish stoutly. SENATORS RALLY TO WIN, 8-4, AND DROP MACKS TO FOURTH PLACE

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—Washington won from Philadelphia, 8 to 4, today, bombarding four of the visiting pitchers in rapid succession in the sixth, seventh and eighth innings to pile up a total of 15 hits, including two triples and a home run.

Grove, who started the game for Philadelphia, held the locals without a run until the sixth inning, when one run was scored. Liebhardt, who replaced him, was pounded for three runs before an out was made and was replaced by Mahaffey, who was found for two runs in one-third of an inning, when Mahon relieved him only to be replaced by Rommel after an inning and a third in which two more runs were scored.

Myer hit a home run in the seventh and Judge and Goslin three-base hits.

The defeat dropped the world champions to fourth place.

TED GULLIC OF BROWNS, FISHER OF CARDS ARE MAKING GOOD

By Herman Wecke

Although the baseball seasons in the major leagues are only a little more than a week old, two of the outstanding recruits among a rather large crop are with the St. Louis clubs. The Cardinals boast George Fisher, outfielder, who was thrown in as "extra baggage" in a trade which brought Eddie Farrell here, while the Browns have Ted Gullic, another meadowman.

These two have gone a long way to make themselves favorites with the St. Louis followers by their fine hitting and fielding in early battles. Fisher was given a chance when Ernie Orsatti and Homer Peel were injured. He made good with a bang and for the first week of the campaign was hitting over the .500 mark. Of course no one expects him to continue at this pace, but for "extra baggage" he has proved a mighty valuable man for the men of Gabby Street.

Gullic a Sensation.

Then there is this young man Ted Gullic with the Browns. When the club went South for spring training he was not even on the roster. But he soon won a place as the regular right fielder and as long as he continues to play as in the early games, he'll be in there. A right-handed hitter, he packs a mean wallop at the plate and in the field he knows what it is all about. He owns a fine throwing arm, as Charlie Gehringer, a fast man with the Tigers, found in a recent game, when he was doubled off first on a fly to right field.

However, the St. Louis clubs are not the only ones which have been fortunate in picking up newcomers. American Leaguers have had more success than the National Leaguers, inasmuch as 13 newcomers are playing daily with the clubs in the Barnard circuit and only eight in the National.

The Yankees are showing Chapman at third base, while Cooke, another from St. Paul, has been alternating in the outfield with Sam Byrd, in the position vacated when Bob Meusel was sent hence. Cooke has not started to hit up to his Association standard, and for that reason was benched with Byrd, another who served an apprenticeship in the Association, getting the place.

Four Tiger Cubs.

Bucky Harris, with the Tigers, is showing four new prospects. They are Elias Funk and John Stone, who have been alternating in the outfield; Bill Rogell at shortstop, and Ray Hayworth behind the plate. All look good, at least at this early date. The Indians are going along with Jonah Goldman at short, while the White Sox are showing Smead Jolley, former Coast League slugger, in the outfield, and Smith at the shortstop position. The Red Sox, in need of plenty of new strength, have three in the line-up. Bill Sweeney has replaced Phil Todt at first; Otis Miller, one time Brownie, is at third base, and Oliver, a young man, in the Southern Association a year ago, is one of the club's outfield finds.

Probably the outstanding recruit in the National League, excepting Fisher, is Gus Suhr, the new first sacker with the Pirates. Suhr has lived up to advance notices sent out as a result of his playing in the Pacific Coast League, and promises to strengthen a position at which the Pittsburg club has had a lot of tough luck in recent years. Engle is playing third base, but only because Pie Traynor, the greatest in the business, is suffering from bad eyes.

Marshall No World Beater.

John McGraw is still standing pat on Eddie Marshall at second base, although Marshall has given no indication that he is a world beater. Tony Cuccinello has outstripped Stripp, Dressen and Riconda for the third base berth with the Reds, while Bill McKechnie at Boston is showing Moore at third base; Berger in the outfield and Neun at first in place of George Sisler, former St. Louis hero.

In this list pitchers are not taken into consideration, as few have worked more than one game. However, among the early stars among the new hurlers is Hubert Pruett, former Brown, who, pitching for the Giants, stopped the slugging Phillies with two hits. Clint Brown of the Indians and Whit Wyatt of the Tigers are others who have come through with fine efforts.

"Reindeer Bill," Veteran St. Louis Runner, Has It All Over Clarence De Mar

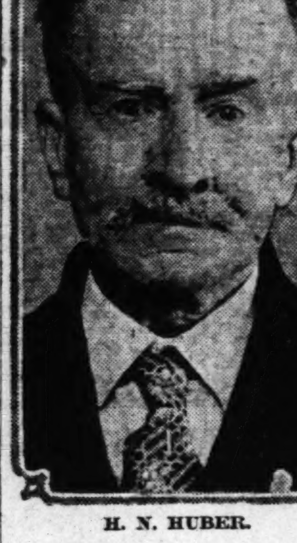
By Damon Kerby.



H. N. HUBER.

Just how long Clarence De Mar, the marathon runner, can continue in distance running races has furnished an interesting question since the 41-year-old veteran won his seventh Boston marathon the other day. He is considered a freak to be able to continue running at his age.

Yet De Mar will have to continue running for more than six years to surpass the record of H. N. Huber, now a St. Louisan, who won three important 50-mile races at the age of 46, and who finished sixth in a brilliant marathon field when he was 49 years old. Huber's record came to light following De Mar's performance at Boston.

The 50-mile races which Huber won, of which he has data to substantiate his story, were held at Nome, Alaska, 30 years ago, and the race in which he finished sixth was a feature of the Seattle-Yukon Exposition, in 1909. The latter race was promoted by Robert Guggenheim, the Copper King's son, and Tim McGrath, and the winner was Henry St. Yves, then the world's champion marathon runner, John Marsh, Canadian champion, was second, and Johnny Hayes, U. S. Olympic champion was third.

Fifty-Mile Race in Dance Hall.

The 50-mile races at Nome are recalled with greatest interest by the veteran runner, now 70 years old. They were held during the dead of winter in the Eagle's dance hall at Nome, which had been surveyed so that 32 laps around the ball room equaled a mile. Let Huber describe the races:

"The bitter weather halted business activity and Nome had to have some kind of excitement while waiting for spring to open up. A marathon race was suggested. Well, up there we didn't do things by halves, and when the boys got down to business they fixed the distance at 50 miles, and called in surveyors to figure the exact distance in the largest dance hall.

Entry Fee Was $25.

"Each entrant had to put up $25 in the pot that went to the winner. The night of the first race, the running track on the edge of the floor was roped off. Seats were sold inside the ropes at $5 each. Balcony seats brought $1. The house was full and so were most of the spectators. The betting was heavy. Pools were made in all the saloons on the probable winners.

"About 20 entrants lined up for the start. I was among that number and believed I had a good chance to win, for a reason I will explain later. Most of the younger fellows dropped out after a few miles and finally the number dwindled down to three or four. But still we plugged along. Well, to shorten the story, I won the race, which was so successful that two more such races were held before Spring, both of which I won. I won about $500 on each race. My best time was in the first race. I covered the 50 miles in seven hours and 40 minutes.

"Why did I think I could win? "The previous summer I had been a musher, delivering papers from Nome to Council City, 90 miles to the north. I made the trip every two weeks, or every time the boat arrived from the States. Thirty miles of my bi-monthly trip was made on a small schooner, to the settlement of Solomon, but the remaining distance of more than 50 miles I covered on foot, in all kinds of weahter. I was as hard as nails."

Huber, a native of Pennsylvania, had gone to Alaska during the Yukon gold rush. He returned after four years in the far North.

It was on the strength of his record in winning the Nome distance races that he was prevailed upon to enter the Seattle-Yukon Exposition marathon. He was entered as "Reindeer Bill" and newspaper clippings, which he now has, gave him prominent mention as one of the contestants.

Did he admit that it was his age (49) that kept him from winning over the official marathon distance of 26 miles 385 yards? He did not.

"My distance was 50 miles. I didn't take the 26-mile race seriously. I didn't train down for that sprint."

Righthanded Batters Are At Premium in Big Leagues This Season, Mack Writes

Manager World Champion Athletics.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—Not in many years has there been such an urge from major league managers for right-handed hitting outfielders as this spring. A good right-handed hitter is worth a king's ransom today and his value has been accentuated since the opening of the present season by the deadly flinging of southpaw pitchers.

Teams with a batting order loaded with left-hand hitters have come to grief facing southpaws, even if they were not pitchers of the highest order. Heavy-hitting right-handed batters are as hard to find as an isthmus in Iowa. When the managers get word a hard hitter in the minor leagues or colleges, nine times out of 10 on investigation he will find that he is a left-handed hitter.

Connie Gives Some Reasons.

Why is it so difficult for a left-handed hitter to have success against a side-winder? You have to go back some years for the primary reason. Decades ago, when a left-handed hitter started as a semi-pro it was rare when he encountered a southpaw pitcher. It was the same way in the minor leagues and colleges. Often such teams never had a pitcher with a sinistral delivery.

It was an exception then that a left-handed hitter ever faced a side-wheeler and he was always placed at a disadvantage when he faced one. I suppose the idea soaked in that a left-handed hitter was not supposed to hit a left-handed pitcher.

I think it is a mental state as much as anything that keeps a left-handed batter from hitting a left-handed pitcher. The condition shouldn't exist and, of course, there are many notable exceptions.

I firmly believe that 90 per cent of the effectiveness of southpaw pitchers over the left-handed hitters can be traced to a mental complex and the scarcity of southpaws.

I think this situation is going to change and in time there will not be this difference for the reason that southpaws are on the increase, and they are becoming more plentiful on the sand lots and in the minors and colleges, giving the left-handed slugger the practice and confidence he needs.

Wins Golf Tourney.

By the Associated Press.

DES MOINES, Iowa, April 26.—Obe Wenig, basketball coach at Morningside college, Sioux City, Iowa, today won the golf tournament for coaches attending the Drake relays, shooting 41-39—80. Harry Gill, veteran Illinois track coach, was second with a 91.

ST. LOUIS U. HIGH AND C. B. C. WIN IN EXTRA INNINGS

In extra inning contests yesterday, St. Louis University High School defeated Country Day, 5—4, and Christian Brothers College won, 2—1 over Western Military Academy to go into a triple tie for first place with McBride in the Preparatory League. The St. Louis U. High-Country Day game went nine innings, while 11 innings were played in the C. B. C.-Western Military Academy contest. The regulation game in the league is seven innings.

The Cadets scored their only run in the opening frame. Katz was caught at the plate by Bob Fuchs' throw from right field in the same inning. The run was counted by Young, who singled, stole second and crossed the plate on Thompson's safety.

The Brothers scored in the third inning. John Duvic, pitcher and individual star of the victory, hit the first ball pitched to deep right for a triple. Foley bunted the next pitch for a squeeze play, Duvic crossing the plate with the tying run. In the eleventh, Duvic won his own game by singling, stealing second and third, and scoring when Lindale held McHenry's pop fly too long.

Duvic struck out 13 batters in 11 innings. Thompson fanned eight.

The St. Louis-Codasco encounter was close, the winners getting to Lieber, Red and White hurler, after two extra innings for their needed run. Schultehenrick of St. Louis U. hit a home run off Lieber in the first inning. Singles in the fourth by Charles, Swift and B. Morgan gave Country Day two runs. The winners knotted the count in the following frame when Powers singled and completed the circuit on errors by Payne and B. Morgan.

St. Louis got a pair of runs in the sixth on three walks and two singles, but Codasco came back in the seventh with a pair also to tie score.

The Red and White were set down in order in the next two frames, however, by Hummel, who had relieved Flanigan, while St. Louis pushed across the winning run in the ninth on Minette's safety with Schultehenrick on second.

Lieber, a rookie, going the full route for Codasco, kept the Billikens from scoring regularly despite mediocre support. Flanigan did nicely for St. Louis in his first start, but gave way to the veteran Hummel in the seventh. Schultehenrick, diminutive St. Louis shortstop, was the batting star, with three hits, one of these a home run, in four trips to the plate.

TOWER A. C. TO HOLD BOXING SHOW MAY 8

Barney McCarthy, matchmaker for the Tower Athletic Club, last night announced that he has three Mississippi Valley Athletic Association ring champions signed to box on his opening amateur boxing program, Thursday night, May 8, at Rosenberg hall, 6200 North Broadway.

The three title-holders are Steve Marre, Sherman Park, middleweight; Farrell Moore, Tower A. C., welterweight, and Werner Kranz, Sherman Park, lightweight. Matchmaker McCarthy is seeking worthy opponents for the three champions.

Bill Finnegan, clever South Broadway A. C. glove thrower, who defeated Moore in an extra-round bout at the recent Overland A. C. show, is the fighter McCarthy is trying to sign for a return engagement with the welter weight champion.

McCarthy states he has received 18 entries from clubs in this district. It is McCarthy's intention to arrange eight interesting matches, featuring fighters of various weight divisions.

Handicaps of Women Golfers Revised by District Association

By W. J. McGoogan.

For the first time in several years handicaps of women golfers of the St. Louis Women's District Golf Association have been revised. The new figures have been adopted from the five best scores made by the various women at their own clubs last year or in District competition.

Mrs. Ignatius S. Hynes, Normandie, women's district champion, and Mrs. Mahlon B. Wallace Jr., St. Louis Country Club, former champion and runner-up to Mrs. Hynes last year, play from scratch this season, while Miss Virginia Pep, Midland Valley, also a former champion, has been awarded four strokes, whereas she formerly played from scratch.

In inter-club team play the women will receive three-fourths of their handicaps but in medal play tournaments they will play to their full handicaps.

The District Association holds individual tournaments for the women each Friday, virtually throughout the season, beginning Friday next and continuing until Friday, Oct. 17. In addition there is inter-club team competition each Monday, between teams representing the clubs in the association.

The district tournament is scheduled to be held at the St. Louis Country Club, June 23 to 28, while the three-day medal play event is set for Sunset Hill Country Club, Oct. 1 to 3.

Many of the women players of the district are going to play in the Trans-Mississippi Tournament at Tulsa, Ok., June 7, and while in Tulsa will make an effort to bring the 1931 tournament to St. Louis. In this move, the Women's District Association has the backing of civic organizations of this city and of the men's district golf organization.

It is likely that 15 or 20 women will make the trip to Tulsa. Among them are Mrs. Hynes, Mrs. H. T. Ashton, Miss Flora Hilger, Mrs. Gilbert Goldman, Mrs. R. J. Kohn, Mrs. C. B. Abney, Mrs. C. C. Crossman, Mrs. Harold H. Scott and probably Miss Pep.

Mrs. Haynes should put up a real battle for the T.-M. championship for she spent some time in indoor courses through the winter practicing and since the active season opened has shown splendid form. She doesn't hit a ball so far off the tee but they are all straight down the middle of the fairway and her short game is all anyone could ask.

Mayor Ruth Will Toss First Ball To Open League

All the ceremonies of a big league opening will mark the opening of the University City Baseball League this afternoon. Mayor Ruth of University City will be in attendance, together with the Park Board and Board of Aldermen. Mayor Ruth has been in training for his duties in throwing out the first ball.

The University City Baseball League will be under the supervision of the Athletic Association, of which Rev. W. Riske is chairman. Ted Uelk, Charles Weber and Carl Trumbull are the other members of the Athletic Association.

One new diamond has been constructed in Heman Park, and the six teams that comprise the league will play each Sunday—a double-header on one diamond, and a single game on the other.

Heman Park is located on the Olive Street road, east of the Garden Theater. Ample parking space and bleacher seats have been provided for the opening day attendance.

The first game between last year's champion—the Heilrung & Grimm team, and a new-comer, the "St. Louis County Chamber of Commerce Team," is called for 1:30.

The umpires will be Willie Foley and Jimmy Dunn.

Tenpin Meeting Monday

A meeting of the Major City Bowling League will be held Monday night at the Statler Hotel for the purpose of organizing the league for next season. While the league consisted of 12 clubs this season, four more than has made up the league for many years, there is a possibility of making a 16-club circuit next season as there are four new teams which have made applications to join. The alleys to be used by the league during next seasons play will also be decided upon at the meeting.

GOLF
W.J. McGOOGAN

HORTON SMITH, Missouri's golf sensation, uses a 15-ounce driver, which helps him get his long distance from the tee.

Horton found time in his brief visit to St. Louis recently to talk a little golf, from the playing standpoint as well as from the business view. Of course, the 21-year-old star didn't have much of a chance to say anything while he was sitting at the breakfast table between Sid Le Gear and Lou Rosen. He was too busy defending himself from their spirited attack on his "appearance money" stand.

When Smith sat down between the two he probably would have saved himself a great deal of time by signing his entry card for the St. Louis Open in the first place, for he had no chance to get away without doing so.

But after Le Gear and Rosen had his signature on an entry blank and had persuaded him to accept the position of honorary chairman of the Entry Committee, filled his pockets full of blanks and sent him on his way to New York determined to persuade many of the other outstanding professionals to enter the $10,000 Open here in July, he had time before his departure to talk of playing golf.

Lost to Wolff Here.

JUST a few years ago Smith played in the Missouri amateur tournament at Midland Valley Country Club and was beaten by Clarence Wolff. He played just as well between tee and green then as he does now, he said, but his putting had not been perfected. As soon as he became proficient on the greens he became a great player.

He hits a long ball off the tee and his approaches are good, but there are many players who can do those things but are unable to get into the low score circle. It is the putting which makes or breaks a score, according to Smith and most of the other outstanding players.

Of course a driver weighing 15 ounces is unusual. Most players use clubs weighing under 14 ounces. Clarence Coff, Westborough professional, regarded as one of the longest, if not the longest driver in the St. Louis district, uses a club weighing 14 ounces. So does Elliott Whitbread, for the past two years Missouri amateur champion and terrific driver.

Has Ambitious Schedule.

SMITH, who was recently appointed professional of the Cragston Yacht and Country Club, Club Cragston, N. Y., has an ambitious tournament schedule before him this summer. He sailed for England Friday to play in the British open tournament and while there will go to Southmore for the thousand guineas invitation tournament. He will defend his French open title and will play in the German open before returning to this country to play in the National open at Minneapolis in July. Smith will likely play in the Charlevoix (Mich.) invitation event before coming to St. Louis for the St. Louis open, July 18-20.

Whitbread is hitting some very long tee shots for this early in the season. No. 4 hole at Normandie is 449 yards long, a decided dog leg to the left with a lake about 300 yards from the green. Recently a player standing some 50 yards from the lake was startled to see a tee shot whiz over his head and barely escape rolling into the water. It was Cotton Whitbread who had just connected with one from the tee.

Hole-in-One.

Jim Palrman, North Shore professional, made a hole in one on the par 3, 190-yard fifth hole, Sunday. His tee shot hit the edge of the green and rolled into the cup. It was the second time in his career that Jim had made a hole in one. Sunday he stroked the course in 69.

Four women tied for first prize in the 18-hole blind bogey tournament held at Osage County Club Wednesday. They were Mrs. M. C. Hensley, Mrs. Estaque, Mrs. D. T. Tevis, Mrs. H. Breckenridge. In the nine-hole events Mrs. D. C. Ernst and Mrs. H. D. Owsley tied for first place. Jim Fogerty, Osage professional, announced that he would begin his weekly group instruction for women next Wednesday at 1:30 p. m.

YALE TAKES FIRST RUGBY GAME WITH HARVARD SINCE 70'S

NEW HAVEN, Conn., April 26.—The first Yale-Harvard Rugby game since the early 70s was played in the Yale Bowl today with the Elis winning, 11 to 0. A crowd of 1000 saw the contest. Wade, Clegg and Dickinson each scored a try and Capt. Harold Corser converted one of them into a goal.

Harvard, playing its first Rugby game of the season, was completely outclassed.

Five Yale varsity football men—Wilson, Hall, Stewart, Godman and Miller—were on the Blue 15.

WASHINGTON NET TEAM BATTLES DRAKE TO A TIE

DES MOINES, Ia., April 26.—The Washington University and Drake University tennis teams battled three hours here today and when the final ball had been missed, the score was 3-all. It was a Missouri Valley conference encounter. Each school copped two singles and one double match. Every battle went to three sets except one.

Harold Weis, proved the star for the Bears. His brilliant rally nipped Frank Brody, holder of the Iowa State singles and double titles, 3—6, 7—5, 6—3. The Washington star seemed headed for sure defeat when Brody led 5—4 on his own service. Weis managed to get back the Bulldog's cannon-ball deliveries and finally came through to victory over his badly tired Drake rival, 3—6, 7—5, 6—3.

Nn the No. 2 match Vernon Tietjen could not quite cope with the superb net game of Max Everett and the Bears' player went downe, 5—7, 6—2, 6—4. The Washington man outdrove his Drake rival consistently from back court but Everett's volleying was too accurate.

Hitting hard off both forehand and backhand Wilbur Lindauer, had little trouble defeating Leighton Housh, 6-1, 6-1.

The two No. 4 men had a hard fight Erling Jensen of Drake nosing out Hadley Grimm of Washington, 6—3, 5—7, 9—7. Jensen's fast shots overcame Grimm's steadiness.

The two doubles matches were both hard fought. Four badly tired players participated in the No. 1 encounter. Weise and Tietjen nosed out the Drake stars, Brody and Everett, 6—4, 3—6, 12—10. Washington had easy sailing in the first set but the two Bulldogs put on steam in the second canto and coasted in. The Bears seemed head for an easy victory in the last set holding a 4—1 lead but Brody pulled himself out of a bad slump and his powerful drives and smashes pulled the Drake team even. The match went to 10-all on service and Washington led 11-10. Here the Drake team had a 40-0 advantage but frittered away its chance of deucing the encounter again.

The two blasters of the Drake team victor, Modeer and Jensen crashed through the steady playing of Lindauer and Grimm. The Washington team kept in the running by sensational returning of the balls and accurate lobbing.

The summary:

GROVES' 2-HIT GAME FEATURES MUNICIPAL BASEBALL OPENING

RED GOOSE TEAM BEATS NOOTERS IN FAST TIME; SCHAPP STARS

Pitchers were severely bombarded and errors were numerous as 64 teams opened play in the Municipal Baseball Association in the public parks yesterday. Thirty-two games were played in 10 leagues.

Today, the Sunday groups will go into action, the Public Service League and the Y. M. H. A. teams making their bow in the forenoon and 16 groups taking over the diamonds in the afternoon.

"Lefty" Groves' two-hit game against the Western Electrics was the highlight of the McQuay-Norris team's 7 to 4 victory and one of the best efforts of yesterday's program. Groves struck out 10 opposing batters. C. Williams hurled good ball for the Western Electrics but received ragged support.

Probably the tightest game of the day was that in which the Red Goose club defeated the Nooter Boilers, 2 to 1. So effective were the opposing hurlers, Weiss of the Nooters and Schapp of the Red Goose that the nine innings play required only 1 hour and 45 minutes.

LEHMAN UNABLE TO TRY OUT FOR SOCCER TRIP TO SOUTH AMERICA

By Dent McSkimming.

Bill Lehman, center halfback of the Hellrung team, one of two St. Louis players invited to try out for the United States soccer team which will play in South America, will be unable to accept the invitation, it was learned last night. The business house with which Lehman is associated advised him that it could not spare him for the three months required for the tour.

"Our St. Louis office had given me tentative permission to go," said Lehman, "and that is why I originally signified my willingness to accept the appointment, but a few days ago the head of our Western division, whose headquarters are in, Cleveland, advised me that the time required for the trip was too great. I am very sorry that I have to withdraw after having been selected for the trial and I hope that some other St. Louis player will be given the opportunity that I am forced to pass up."

Frank Vaughn, Ben Miller fullback, will depart Tuesday evening for New York, where he will compete in the tryout game against the Hahoah All-Stars on Thursday.

Apparently, the Selections Committee has not accepted Lehman's withdrawal as final. Following is a message received by the Post-Dispatch from Thomas W. Cahill, secretary of the United States Football Association:

"No other player selected to replace Lehman in trials. We have surplus forwards but need a good center halfback. Cannot Lehman's employers as a matter of civic pride be prevailed upon to let him go? Lehman has an opportunity give St. Louis some valuable publicity in South America."

Arsenal Must Fulfill Contract.

The United States Football Association has not abandoned its plans for entertaining the Arsenal Cup championship, which yesterday defeated Huddersfield Town for the English Cup championship before 100,000 persons. It is understood that since Arsenal reached the Cup final the team management endeavored to get a better financial arrangement out of the U. S. F. A. for its tour of American cities, but the U. S. F. A. feels that it has carried out its every promise as contained in its contract and will expect the same of Arsenal.

Secretary Cahill indicates that the U. S. F. A. will even carry its contract into court if Arsenal fails to come to this country as scheduled. If the English champions come to the United States they will play one game in St. Louis.

Twilight League Works Today.

All players of the four teams composing the Twilight Amateur Soccer League will meet at Sherman Park at 9 o'clock this morning to receive instruction from Coach Oscar Mossmann and to work out. Mossmann will endeavor to explain some tactical formation in addition to coaching the youngsters in ball control.

The opening game of the Twilight League schedule will be played Tuesday evening at Sherman Park, starting at 6:15 p. m. The competing clubs will be the Dolans and the German Sports club. Thirty-minute halves will be played, with Jimmy Dunn refereeing. George Corrigan and Jimmy Brannigan will be the linesmen. On Thursday evening, May 8, the Cook A. C. will oppose the Academy A. C. with George Corrigan in the referee's role. The schedule calls for nine weeks of play, ending June 26.

Italy's Chances in Davis Cup Competition Depend Upon Play Of Morpurgo, Tilden Declares

By William T. Tilden 2d.

PARIS, April 26.—The second team for consideration in this series of articles on Davis Cup competitors deals with Italy, the nation which reached the Inter-Zone final round in 1928, only to go down to defeat at the hands of Frank Hunter, George Lott and John Hennessey of the United States. When one begins to analyze Italy's chances in tennis, one finds that it is around one man that the whole question revolves. This man is Baron Hubert de Morpurgo, the great veteran who, single-handed, has developed the Italian team and carried it to its present position of power.

Tilden.

Baron de Morpurgo has been for years Italy's leading star. Until about 1923 he was a good second-string player, but, at an age when many men start down, he suddenly blossomed out as a player of the absolute first flight. He has several times beaten Cochet, has forced La Coste to the limit and during 1927, 1928 and 1929 scored many notable victories in the Davis Cup. Not only has he personally hung up a most enviable record, but his tremendous will to win, his driving energy and enormous vitality, swept with him a group of young Italian stars, who have steadily advanced until today George Stefani is practically Morpurgo's equal with Gaslini and Del Boon not far behind. It is a notable achievement for a man in his late thirties, as Morpurgo is. Morpurgo is an all-court player who allows himself to become practically a base liner. At his best he is one of the most dangerous men in the game. He has a very high bounding service that is most effective and accurate and a sound volley and overhead.

Steady When Confident.

When Morpurgo has confidence in his game, and that is most of the time, he is remarkably steady. If his confidence breaks, he grows very erratic. So far, this year, Morpurgo has had a very bad season on the Riviera. His confidence has been shaken. If Morpurgo does not recover his form, then Italy is out of consideration as a possible challenger, for good as the rest of his team is, it must have Morpurgo at his best to have a chance.

George Stefani, the second Italian singles player, is a most dangerous player. He is the only ambidextrous player of class in the game. Many people claim Stefani is equally strong with either right or left hand. I have played him three times on the Riviera, and do not agree with this, but certainly there is no real weakness on either wing. He is an all-court player with a finely rounded game. His ground strokes off both hands are flat, fast drives; in each case more effective cross court that straight. He volleys well, smashes adequately and his service is good but not severe. He covers court remarkably well, while his ability to change his racquet to either hand allows him to reach shots you believe are quite out of his reach. There is no question but what Stefani is decidedly stronger with his right hand than with his left. Stefani is good enough to possibly spill anyone in singles. I would not say he was a sure point winner for Italy, but he may well pick up a singles match at any time. He is a most valuable man to support Morpurgo.

Doubles Team Problem.

Neither Gaslini nor Del Bono, the third and fourth men of the Italian team, are to be considered in singles, but each of them has partnered Morpurgo in doubles with success. The doubles problem is not an easy one to solve. Gaslini has only recently recovered from a long illness, but seems to be playing better tennis than ever before. Del Bono is in military service that keeps him out of the game a good deal. Morpurgo leans rather toward Gaslini and himself, a good but not a great team.

Italy is very fortunate in her Davis Cup draw this year. If she meets England, Australia or Japan, I understand the matches are to be played in Italy. This is due to the fact that the last time Italy played England, it was in England, so now it is reversed, while with Australia and Japan, since they are playing out of their zone, they must meet the European team at home. In view of the fact that Italy has both her important matches at home, it would not surprise me to see her come into the inter-zone final against the United States and if so give our young team a terrific struggle before yielding.

Brilliant Easter Week Events in New York

NEW YORK, April 26.

A WHIRL of festivity, gayer than any since Christmas, marked the celebration of Easter week. Dinners, parties and balls — and even a visit to Madison Square Garden for a circus—kept the fashionables going early and late.

The week's gayeties were ushered in Tuesday night by the butterfly ball, given at the Ritz Carlton in aid of the House of Rest. Members of the debutante committee circulated among the dancers with trays of sparkling toy butterflies for sale. When supper-time came, the guests, who gathered around the small tables, were entertained by exhibitions of the maxixie, the tango and the waltz by specialty dancers.

The Toc H ball, a shipboard party given for the benefit of the Toc H boys' shipbuilding fund, attracted many fashionables to the Berengaria early in the week. The festivities opened with a dinner served in the dining salon with incidental music by the ship's orchestra. Then came dancing in the ballroom, followed by a bridge tournament, and at 11 o'clock a treasure hunt began.

All over the ship, from the engine room to the topmost decks, the fashionables raced on the hunt and when they had finished that, they met for a buffet supper in the lounge. They climaxed the evening with a cabaret entertainment in the ballroom and journeyed homeward just a short while before dawn.

The organization for which the affair was given takes its name "Toc H" from a codified form used in the army and standing for Talbot House in Poperinghe. Talbot House was opened in 1915 as an everyman's club and over the door it bears the inscription, "All rank abandon ye who enter here."

Monday night the fashionable flocked to the Hotel Plaza for the Almoners' revue, a supper dance entertainment, given after theater hours in aid of the New York Foundling Hospital.

While the guests watched from the supper tables, the Almoners' society presented nine elaborate revue numbers, among them "Havana," presenting scenes of the Cuban resort; "On the Beach," displaying the colorful pajamas that mark this season's vogue; "Golfing Time," with the entertainers in sports costumes, and "Pink Lady."

The annual circus benefit for the Society of St. Johnland found the fashionables thronging the boxes and galleries at Madison Square Garden yesterday afternoon.

Society loves an excuse to go to the circus and this time it found it by having as its guests of honor several waifs cared for by the Society of St. Johnland, many of whom had never seen a circus before.

Tonight the fashionables were back at the Plaza again for the Carnival of Imagination, given for the benefit of the Halton Endowment, for Girls. This affair took the form of a court of arts, at which various characters of fact and fiction were portrayed. Among those who represented personages were Edna St. Vincent Millay, Deems Taylor, Will Irwin, Queen Mario and Tony Sarg.

One of the most interesting weddings of the week, so crowded with nuptials, was that of Miss Caroline Storrs, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Vance Storrs, and Daniel Sickles, late yesterday afternoon in the chapel of the Church of the Heavenly Rest.

Numerous small dinners and private parties display interesting notes on the spring vogue.

Mrs. George Atwell Jr. is among the women who are sponsoring the Grecian mode. She appeared at a recent dinner in a gown of sheer white chiffon, high of waist and designed with flowing panels falling from the shoulder. With the frock she wore a ruby necklace, which belonged to her mother, Princess Hohenlohe-Schillingsfurst, for many years.

Official Washington Goes to the Opera

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 26.

THOUGH somewhat dispirited by the continued indisposition of Mrs. Hoover, Washington society passed a week filled with literature, music, horse show talk and an event which climaxed the social calendar—the season's opening performance of the Metropolitan Opera Co.

Society greeted the opera with enthusiasm. Official Washington indulged an occasion seldom presented in the capital and attended the opera—Premiere en masse. The resultant spectacle was painted in deep, rich colors—and extravaganza to the newsboy who watched the pageant as the operagoers emerged from doors of automobiles and crossed the sidewalk to the entrance of the theater.

Vice President Curtis and his sister, Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, were the opera guests of Mrs. Thomas F. Walsh. It was noted that the famous Walsh diamonds had been left at home. Jewelry was not the thing. The oft-envied jewels—the hope diamond, the resplendent tiara, the maze of corsage ornaments — so frequently worn by Mrs. Walsh, had been retired for a modest rope of pearls.

A review of one of the most imposing audiences that ever filled a Washington theater disclosd not a single tiara, not a coronet or bandeau of diamonds. Those funsters, whose sota voce observations would have the jewelry pawned after the Wall Street break, were discredited by wiser friends who spoke of democracy and good taste.

President Hoover's Cabinet wives have set the fashion for a jewelless administration. Mrs. Hoover herself wears but few ornaments—one of her favored being a fine old cameo brooch worn with a lace fichu, a pin which she wore last month at the Congressional luncheon in her honor.

Pearls seemed the popular ornament at the opera. Mrs. Tracy Dows of New York and Washington, who was hostess to Speaker Longworth, wore long ear-rings of pearl, and two ropes of pearls. Mrs. Sumner Welles, formerly Mathilde Townsend, also wore pearls.

The annual National Capital Horse Show, to be held at old Bradley farms, May 14 to 17, is demanding daily exercise in the ring and over the bridle paths of Washington. A box has been set aside for the President. The Secretary of Commerce has taken a box, as has the Minister of Hungary and Countess Szechenyi, and Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick, whose children will ride horses from her farm in Illinois. Other boxholders include Clarence H. Osborne of Cleveland, Mrs. Bernard Gimbel of New York, Col. Robert M. Thompson and Representative Ruth Baker Pratt of New York. Both Mrs. Gimbel and Mrs. Pratt have horses entered in almost every class.

The open door of the Persian Legation, which has always existed when the anniversary of the coronation of his Imperial Majesty Reza Shah Pahlavi, is celebrated, was closed to the public during this week's observance.

Following the custom of other foreign hosts, carefully worded invitations were sent to guests for a supper dance by the Charge d'Affaires, Hashem Mokarram Nourzad. The Chilean Ambassador and the Turkish Ambassador were invited, as were Senator and Mrs. John M. Robsion, Senator and Mrs. David I. Walsh, Senator and Mrs. Royal S. Copeland, Senator and Mrs. Tasker L. Oddie and Representative and Mrs. David H. Kincheloe of Kentucky.

BOSTON FINE ARTS SCHOOL TO CONDUCT EASTER SALE

Paintings, Sculpture and Tapestry to Be Disposed of to Help Pay Debt on Building.

Former students of the School of the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston have been notified of an Easter sale of paintings, sculpture and tapestry to be conducted by the school at the Copley Plaza Hotel, in Boston, throughout this week.

The sale, which is organized and sponsored by a committee of former students, is expected to raise $100,000, which will be applied on the remaining debt on the new school building. The building cost $500,000 of which $150,000 already has been paid.

Former students have been asked to assist by interesting a group, an individual or a museum in the purchase of a painting; by collecting and forwarding funds with which to buy works of living foreign artists and by engaging the interest of other graduates and former students in the sale.

McKesson SERVICE

THE STANDARD OF QUALITY

LOOK FOR THIS SYMBOL ON THE DRUG STORE WINDOW

ILLNESS knows no holidays. That is why your independent community druggist is open Sundays to serve you.

Like others, he would like to do his week's business in six days of eight hours each. But pharmacy is a profession and carries with it the professional man's obligations.

As the doctor is subject to your emergency call any hour of any day, so too is the druggist.

Open on Sundays, holidays, and evenings, primarily to meet the health needs of the neighborhood, the independent drug store is many times the only refuge of the hurried hostess when guests come unexpectedly; is the oasis in the desert of locked doors when the household suddenly discovers some needed article is missing.

For convenience shopping, try the independent druggist first, Sunday and every day. See how courteously your wants are cared for by the neighborly man who owns the store.

Whether it's a prescription to be compounded quickly and accurately, or high quality merchandise at reasonable prices; you insure satisfaction, high quality, and personal service, by finding the drug store which displays the McKesson Symbol.

WEBSTER SCOUTS PLAN OVERNIGHT EXPEDITION

First Camp of Season to Be Saturday at Hillsboro, Mo.

Scouts of Webster Groves will conduct the first large overnight camp of the year in the St. Louis Boy Scout Council area, when the first annual encampment of Webster Groves troops opens a two-day stay at Hillsboro, Mo., next Saturday. Although several individual troops have held overnight hikes, and a group of leaders are at Camp Irondale this week-end, the first large camp for city scouts will not take place until May 9, 10 and 11, when the annual noncommissioned officers' camp will be held at Irondale.

Every troop in Webster and all fathers of scouts have been invited to attend the initial camp, which will be made on a 1500-acre farm belonging to Fred Holekamp of Webster Groves. The entire farm will be turned over to the scouts, including a 200-foot barn full of hay where any father not caring to use the ground for a bed may sleep.

The campers will assemble at the Bristol School, Lockwood and Gore avenues, Webster, at 8:30 o'clock Saturday morning. The automobiles that will transport the scouts to the camp, and enough trucks to carry food and supplies, will meet at Lockwood and Elm avenues, the scouts marching over in a body at 9 o'clock. The caravan will be headed by a truck driven by Chairman C. A. Reichardt, who will set the pace, no other machine being permitted to pass the leader.

Upon arrival at the farm, Scoutmaster Blackford of Webster Groves 7 will take charge of pitching camp. After the tents are up an inspection will be held, followed by the preparation and eating of dinner. The afternoon will be devoted to games and scout activities, under the supervision of Activities Director Scoutmaster Nicholson of Webster Groves 3. A council fire, with songs and stunts, will be held in the evening.

After scout service Sunday morning the day will be given over to general scouting, with camp being broken at 3:30 o'clock. The return home will start at 4 o'clock.

Other leaders who will be in charge of different activities will be M. E. Coggeshall, sanitation; Scoutmaster Dr. Colgate, Webster Groves 8, first aid; L. C. Martin, church services; Scoutmaster K. M. Coggeshall, Webster Groves 14, camp stew; Scoutmaster Charles Thurston, Webster Groves 4, transportation. Scoutmasters Fieldson, Cook, Cahill, Bush, Wherry and Paradise will act as assistants to the different camp officers.

The general committee in charge of the camp consists of Chairman Reichardt, P. O. Viall, L. C. Martin and M. E. Coggeshall.

INTERSCHOLASTIC BAND CONTEST TO BE JUNE 7

An interscholastic band contest of St. Louis and St. Louis County schools for prizes for cups and plaques in four classes, June 7 has been announced by Mayor Miller, and Nathan Frank, donor of a band stand in Forest Park.

The contest is to be an annual affair for the development of general interest in school music as well as the bringing out of champion bands. A State contest is to be held by Missouri University at Columbia, May 2. St. Louis schools will be unable to enter this year, but expect to compete in other years and eventually to get into the national contest.

Separate classes, with first and second prizes in each, are provided for colleges, high schools, junior high schools and grade schools. The concert will begin at 9 a. m. in the Nathan Frank band stand. Each band may select its own music and play seven minutes. Members are to unite in one huge band for a concert in the evening.

Karl Wilhelm Kern, 511 North Taylor avenue, is chairman of the committee of music teachers and bandmasters in charge. Entry blanks may be obtained from him until next Thursday.

NEW GIRL SCOUT QUARTERS

Mrs. Frederick Edey, New York City, vice president of the National Girl Scouts, will be the guest of the Girl Scouts of St. Louis tomorrow evening at the Girl Scout Little House, 4253 Magnolia avenue.

Council members, leaders and members of troop committees will meet Mrs. Edey, who is stopping in St. Louis on her way to the Regional Conference of the Cactus Region in Houston, Tex. This will be the first meeting of the Girl Scout leaders in their new headquarters, the Girl Scout Little House.

Wise Owners Keep Home Property Up-to-Date

NEW AWNINGS HAVE DECORATIVE VALUE

Modern Idea Is That Awnings Should Harmonize With the House.

During the hot days of summer the use of awnings over the windows on the sunny side of the house enable the occupants of the house to keep more comfortable. Windows may be kept open to allow the cooling breezes to enter the rooms.

Shades do not have to be lowered as the burning rays of the sun are prevented from fading the rugs, upholstery, wall paper or window draperies.

Utility has long been the prime consideration when awnings are discussed.

Of late, however, the use of awnings as a distinct method of exterior decoration is growing in favor.

Newer types of awnings have been devised that add a touch of the unique to the appearance of the house.

Because of their decorative values, the awnings selected must be chosen with the general design and color scheme of the building in mind.

The awning becomes an integral part of the building like the roof or the window trim. It must blend to aid in carrying out the general decorative design.

Awnings come in a wide variety of designs and a color combination suitable for your home may be easily secured.

BASEMENT DESERVES THOUGHT

Convenience and Efficiency Should Be Chief Interests.

The basement is still another unit of the house where convenience is paramount. The heating plant and coal bins (if coal be the fuel) must be located with relation to the stairs from the main floor overhead and to the drive on which the coal truck will stand when unloading.

The laundry and drying room are important to the housewife and must be laid out with labor saving in mind.

The basement can be made into a habitable group of well-lighted, cheerful rooms if thought and care are used.

Loan Institutions Favor Home Modernization

ARTHUR A. BLUMEYER.

The cost of modernizing a home is low compared with the many advantages it brings.

Improvements add value to the property in excess of the amount spent in making them. Not only is there this increased value, but there are the esthetic values, pride of possession, more beautiful surroundings and more comfort and utility.

In general (according to Mr. Blumeyer, president of the Industrial Loan Co.) home owners have become well educated in the methods of financing real estate and home modernization improvements. Considerable literature on the subject has appeared during the last few years which provides excellent information concerning the practical aspects of this subject.

It may be well to present a brief summary of the various methods employed, since real estate financing means not merely the acquisition of a lot or the construction of the house built upon it, but the making of various improvements and conveniences essential to the modernization of a home.

Mr. Blumeyer states that experience has established the custom of making first mortgages up to about half of the appraised value of ground and improvements. Second mortgage loans bridge part of the gap between the quick sale value of the property and the first mortgage—or both mortgages may be combined in a loan from a building and loan association, which will lend about 60 per cent of the value of the ground and improvements thereon. This type of loan is repayable monthly.

In remodeling or making improvements to homes, an advantageous method of securing the needed funds is provided by industrial loans.

Institutions specializing in loans of this sort request as security the signature of the borrower and those of two relatives or friends. Marketable securities are also acceptable collateral.

With periodical payments, these loans made at attractive rates, may be made to run as long as a year. This method of financing is considerably cheaper than the cost of abstracts and other expenses which are necessary when mortgaging the home and it also does away with the necessity of encumbering the property.

To completely remodel a home or to add rooms, make walks, install heating plants, plumbing equipment, new flooring, plastering, roofing, to erect garages, to decorate, to pay taxes or special paving bills or to partially or completely furnish the home are some of the purposes to which this type of loan service is particularly adaptable.

It is well for home owners to make a careful study of their requirements in order that they may secure improvements in the most economical manner possible.

Mortgage loans and industrial loans are each fitted to particular conditions and the wise borrower usually familiarizes himself with them.

REMODELING HOUSES OFTEN EASY TO DO

Increased Attractiveness of Modernized Home Brought Offers to Buy.

Every old time residence contains possibilities for improvement that are unsuspected by the average house owner.

The before and after pictures on this page illustrate this thought most aptly. No one would suspect that the clean, trim story and a half home grew from the ginger bread trimmed house depicted below. Yet a study of the two pictures reveals how easy it was for the builder to accomplish these improvements.

Old Porches Torn Away.

The old time porch across the front was abruptly torn away, being replaced by a small stoop with a sharply pitched shingle covered shelter overhead. The side porch leading to the dining room at the side was also removed, the floor space being enclosed. Four windows were placed across its front and two were built into the side walls, allowing a flood of sunlight and fresh air to invade the interior.

The front room is now well lighted by two windows which take the place of the large fixed window which overlooked the street.

Above on the second floor the single window has been replaced by a large opening filled with two windows.

When remodeling the upper floors of the building, the roof over the dining room was raised, allowing another chamber to be included in the upstairs arrangement.

Both the dining room and kitchen have assured more natural daylight by increasing the number of windows.

The exterior of the dwelling does not reveal the modernization of the interior. The floor plan was rearranged to use to the utmost the available space. New floors, modern plumbing and an abundance of electrical outlets now make the inside of the house more comfortable and homelike. The treatment of the walls, too, was in keeping with modern tendencies.

AIM FOR COLOR HARMONY

Rooms Should Carry a General Color Scheme.

Color is a subtle thing and should be handled with respect.

A room which opens into another should have a color scheme which more or less harmonizes with it. Curtains, hangings, rugs and chairs should all form part of the ensemble.

How can a person building a house for the first time have sufficient knowledge to make all of these various units chime so that the whole is pleasing?

Home owners who take advantage of a decorator's taste when doing over the interiors of their homes will probably find that the result will be more pleasing and the cost no more expensive.

THREE-TROOP RALLY TODAY AT MAPLEWOOD HIGH FIELD

Scouts to Pitch Camp, Prepare Dinners and Compete in Various Contests.

A rally, in which Boy Scouts from Troops Kirkwood 3, Maplewood 5 and Webster Groves 15 will compete, will be held at Maplewood High School Field today, starting about 10:30 o'clock. The event is open to the public.

The Scouts will parade to the field, assembling at Argonne drive and Clay avenue at 10 o'clock, and marching down Kirkwood road to the field. The column will be preceded by massed flags and a drum and bugle corps. A flag ceremony will be held on arrival at the field, and, after photographs are taken, camp will be pitched.

The rally proper will start with inspection of all scouts, and the camp. Fourteen patrols, each under a patrol leader, will then prepare their dinners, at the conclusion of which the contests will start. These latter will include events in signaling, knot-tying, compass reading, first aid, handicraft, water-boiling, fire-building and axmanship. A council fire, with scouts singing and performing stunts, will close the program.

Those in charge are: Scoutmaster E. Kelly, Maplewood 5, ceremonies; Scoutmaster R. Cahill, Webster Groves 15, games; Scoutmaster A. F. Williams, Kirkwood 3, events; R. I. Lott, Kirkwood 3. scorer; the Rev. A. Westhoff, Kirkwood 3, awards; Assistant Scoutmaster Gregg Puster, Webster Groves 15, council fire activities; and Sydney Puster, Webster Groves 15, final scorer.

Troop Notes

was a visitor at the meeting. He gave a short talk.

Plans to start the summer season with a Fathers' and Sons' banquet are being made by Troop 19, of the Blair Howard School Patrons' Association. The banquet will be held at the school next Friday evening, as part of the regular troop meeting. The scouts will conduct demonstrations of different scouting activities, and several handicraft models will be on exhibition. Two speakers have been selected so far: Field Executive Max Nusser of the North District, and Chairman P. H. Deffendall of the troop committee.

The Unknown patrol won first place and the Flaming Arrows second in an interpatrol contest in first aid conducted at the meeting of Troop 205 of the Bates School last week. Scoutmaster Hunt gave the troop a five-year veteran badge for the troop flag in celebration of the troop's fifth charter.

WEST DISTRICT.

As an institutional good turn, Troop 21 of the Ethical Society, cooked hunter's stew, hot biscuits and coffee for 50 group leaders and parents of children belonging to the Society Sunday School last week More than 175 biscuits were baked, but this amount barely filled the demand. The Campfire Girls prepared a salad and a dessert for the dinner, which was given to impress the boys, girls and parents with a recognition of their mutual interest in the society. Parents of the scouts have been invited to attend the next meeting of the troop, which will be held in Forest Park next Friday evening.

A council fire and stunts will be started at 7:30 o'clock. The troop will hold its first Troop Court of Honor May 9.

Members of the patrol which will represent Troop 26 of the Delmar Baptist Church in the Camparall next month, were announced at the meeting of the troop last week. The patrol will be composed of Scout B. D. Moss Jr., leader; Scout Tom McConnell, assistant leader, and Scouts Thayer Damon, Harry Svatek, George Tooley, Donald Weir, Bob White, Arthur Whorton, Donald Hanson and Bob Whorton. The troop held its first Troop Court of Honor last Friday evening, awarding Tenderfoot, second class, and first class badges. The troop will meet hereafter on Friday evenings.

Scribe Frank Maher has been appointed editor of Troop 46's official publication, The Hoot. The new editor is planning to introduce several new features in the paper, in addition to its news articles, jokes and editorials. A patrol leaders' and assistant patrol leaders' powwow was held at the home of Assistant Scoutmaster Sherwood Tuesday evening, to outline plans for troop activities. A hike is planned.

A scout roundup, composed of contests in signalling, knot-tying, first aid, mystery and nature study, was staged by the scout of Troop 60, Union Avenue Christian Church, at the regular meeting last week. Fifty scouts were present in uniform. The Camparall list, members who will compose the troop's representation in the Camparall next month, will close May 5, all scouts in the troop having a chance to become a member until that time.

A vivid portrayal of their experiences hunting snakes in Central America was given by Marlin Perkins, curator of reptiles at the St. Louis Zoo, and Dr. William Bartlett, to the scouts of Troop 90, of the Temple Shaare Emeth, last Tuesday evening. The scouts were guests for the evening of the Men's Club of the temple. Reginald Bonham, the English Boy Scout who returned with Scoutmaster Dr. F. H. Staley from the Jamboree last year, gave a talk on his impressions of America. Scout Harry Greditzer made a perfect score of 100 on an Old Glory test. At the last court of honor, Scouts Joe Browar, Stanley Niss and Mark Silverstone were made star scouts. Ira Nathan, Robert Weguson, Alex Grosberg and Maynard Castor have become first class, and Harvey Zucker, Robert Palan, Hugh Heidenrich and Howard Lesser have advanced to second-class rank.

SOUTH DISTRICT.

Scouts Fred Miller and Tom Baumgartner of Troop 16, Immaculate Conception Church, received life scout badges, and Scout Richard Henermann a star scout award, at the recent city court of honor. The troop is conducting a series of patrol contests. Each member of the Flying Eagle patrol received a scout staff recently.

Troop 247, Froebel, School, has a membership of 26 scouts, six recruits having been enlisted since the troop reregistered Feb. 1. The troop meets at the school on Monday evenings.

SUBURBAN DISTRICT.

The Cherokee patrol, with 627 points, won first place in an interpatrol contest concluded by Troop Kirkwood 3, of the Knights of Columbus, a week ago Thursday. The Flying Eagle patrol took second, followed by the Lions, third, and the Tigers, fourth. The troop held its first troop court of honor the next evening, several scouts receiving merit badges in music, photography, firemanship and wood carving, while others were promoted in rank. The Troop Committee served as members of the court. Twelve scouts from the troop have signed for a two-weeks' camp at Irondale this summer. The troop is participating in the three-troop rally today.

TO EXTEND AIRWAY SERVICE

Beginning tomorrow, the passenger service between St. Louis and Denver, Colo., started last week by United States Airways, Inc., will be extended to Oklahoma City, Ok., with stops at Wichita, Kan., and Tulsa and Enid, Ok. Planes leave Curtiss-Steinberg Airport, on the East Side, at 9 a. m. daily, arriving at Denver and Oklahoma City about 5 p. m. Eastbound ships arrive at the local airport at 6 p. m.

Robbers Take $1000 Payroll.

PITTSBURG, Pa., April 26.—Two robbers forced the automobile driven by J. H. Dillner, officer of the Dillner Transfer & Storage Co., to the curb, threatened Dillner with revolvers, and took a $1000 payroll from him today. They fled in an automobile which had been reported stolen.

On Nov. 6 of last year, the respective plenipotentiaries of the republics of Cuba and France signed a commercial convention designed to strengthen as much as possible the relations between the two states. It was agreed that raw or manufactured products originating in France or in the French colonies would be admitted into Cuba under a favorable tariff with exceptions to be made of the special concessions the Cuban Government grants or may grant to the United States of America.

Inversely, products, raw or manufactured, originating in Cuba would be admitted into France under the minimum tariff.

New Bonds With Cuba.

By this convention whose 12 articles were arranged with painstaking care, it is hoped, as the preamble says, that there will be obtained a further cementing of the bonds of friendship which unite France and Cuba, bonds which are very dear to us. We have had some little trouble in reconciling the function of our monopoly with certain interests relative to the cigars and tobacco of Havana, but we are glad to say that this matter has been satisfactorily settled.

Once more this problem takes up the question which is far more general of our connection with South America. I have been asked how these connections may be even further extended.

It is a subject concerning which many errors have been committed. The French press recently carried an article about the conquest of South America by the United States. In the "Mercurio" of Santiago of Jan. 5, 1930, Emilio Tagle Rodriteuez published the reflections of the Frenchman Lafond. This letter pointed out that Europe plays as important a part in the economic life of the principal southern republics as does the United States. Lafond gives the following figures on the exportations from Brazil, Chile and the Argentine:

United States $290,000,000; England $250,000,000; Germany $160,000,000; France $85,000,000; Belgium $25,000,000; Switzerland $13,000,000. Judging from his figures France does not yet play a role in keeping with her present power in Europe.

Communication Demands.

There are many Frenchmen who think, as indeed Deputy Paganon recently wrote in his excellent report on the budget of Foreign Affairs that the very progress in the means of communication demands new efforts on our part. More and more numerous are the young people who cross the Atlantic in order to follow our university courses. In far lesser numbers, alas, do our young students and professors undertake this marvelous voyage, for our educational bodies were cruelly cut down by the war. Those who go, however, return enthusiastic.

At the League of Nations a sort of spontaneous entente was established between the South American representatives and those of our country. Our scientific technique, civil and military affairs seemed to be much appreciated by our friends. Our aviators, engineers and civilians were praised with a sincerity for which the whole French nation was grateful.

Herriot Urges Europe to Ally Self With South America for New Economic Development

By EDOUARD HERRIOT,
Former Premier of France.
(Copyright, 1930.)

PARIS, April 26.

LATIN-AMERICA, long linked to France by cultural ties of common heritage, now sees itself indissolubly cemented to us in friendship by the more material bonds of mutually beneficial economic interests. Despite the inherent and long-standing moral and intellectual affinity between France and South America, our economic relationship with the southern half of the New World has assumed prime importance only in recent years. The amazing industrial and commercial growth of our South American friends has placed them in the front rank in world trade and has caused them to be solicited economically by all the nations of the earth.

On Nov. 6 of last year, the respective plenipotentiaries of the republics of Cuba and France signed a commercial convention designed to strengthen as much as possible the relations between the two states. It was agreed that raw or manufactured products originating in France or in the French colonies would be admitted into Cuba under a favorable tariff with exceptions to be made of the special concessions the Cuban Government grants or may grant to the United States of America.

We have had some little trouble in reconciling the function of our monopoly with certain interests relative to the cigars and tobacco of Havana, but we are glad to say that this matter has been satisfactorily settled.

Once more this problem takes up the question which is far more general of our connection with South America. I have been asked how these connections may be even further extended.

It is a subject concerning which many errors have been committed. The French press recently carried an article about the conquest of South America by the United States. In the "Mercurio" of Santiago of Jan. 5, 1930, Emilio Tagle Rodriteues published the reflections of the Frenchman Lafond. This letter pointed out that Europe plays as important a part in the economic life of the principal southern republics as does the United States. Communication Demands.

There are many Frenchmen who think, as indeed Deputy Paganon recently wrote in his excellent report on the budget of Foreign Affairs that the very progress in the means of communication demands new efforts on our part. More and more numerous are the young people who cross the Atlantic in order to follow our university courses. In far lesser numbers, alas, do our young students and professors undertake this marvelous voyage, for our educational bodies were cruelly cut down by the war. Those who go, however, return enthusiastic.

At the League of Nations a sort of spontaneous entente was established between the South American representatives and those of our country. Our scientific technique, civil and military affairs seemed to be much appreciated by our friends. Our aviators, engineers and civilians were praised with a sincerity for which the whole French nation was grateful.

Evidently economic relations are more difficult to establish. However, the very prosperity of France at the present time opens up to her new horizons, invites her into the interiors of Venezuela and Colombia, rich in oil lands; into the mines of Peru; and into the public works of other nations. We shall not cease to call the attention of our French youth to these countries which, by reason of their growth, have need of aid.

Eyes on Argentina.

In the front rank of the efforts already undertaken, is the work accomplished by my colleague, Paganon. The General Aeropostal Co., under his management has organized between France and South America an air route 12,000 kilometers in length. We are following with liveliest interest the trend of affairs in Argentina, directed by a remarkable statesman who reinforces from day to day the power of his country and insures a steady increase in the value of Argentine products as well as the eventual return to normal taxation, and has stabilized the gold piaster.

In 1928 the Argentine foreign trade figures were raised to 1,930,000,000 gold piasters (about $1,708,050,000) against 1,864,000,000 in 1927; exportation surpassed importation by 116,000,000 piasters (about $102,660,000) France recently could not engage to purchase wheat in Argentina in case of shortage of the French crop. But we understand the Premier requested the Minister of Commerce several days ago to come to a commercial agreement with Argentina on this matter.

We are not unaware of the danger of developing French exportation in South America, in the imposition of duties on the products of Rio de la Plata on their entry into France. We know of the campaign undertaken in Argentina under the motto "Buy from those who buy from us." As a result of this campaign our silk industries have been menaced to the advantage of English firms. Perhaps we are wrong however for not having imitated the British Government which last year sent to Argentina the happily conceived D'Abernon mission.

The needs of South America in respect to railroad materials are increasing steadily; perhaps there are interesting potentialities in this situation. We think for our part that the time is ripe for negotiating a Franco-Argentine commercial agreement which will surely improve on the already quite antiquated one of 1892.

Wool Goes to France.

With its 2,800,000 square kilometers (1,212,600 square miles) its population of more than 10,000,000 whites, its salubrious climate with its access to the sea, its rivers—the Federal Republic of the Argentine administered along the governmental principles of the United States, may well rank itself among the first nations of the earth in the matter of agricultural products. As for her vast flocks of sheep, Argentina owes much of their economic importance to France. Indeed, the French industry absorbs a substantial part of her wool. We are able to absorb even more and more and here, it seems to me, is where the constitution of the

ENGLISH JUSTICE, SWIFT AND CERTAIN

Three Notable Trials During Naval Conference Illustrate System of Criminal Procedure---They Are: The Hatry Swindle and the Fascinating Fox and Podmore Murder Cases.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, April 26.

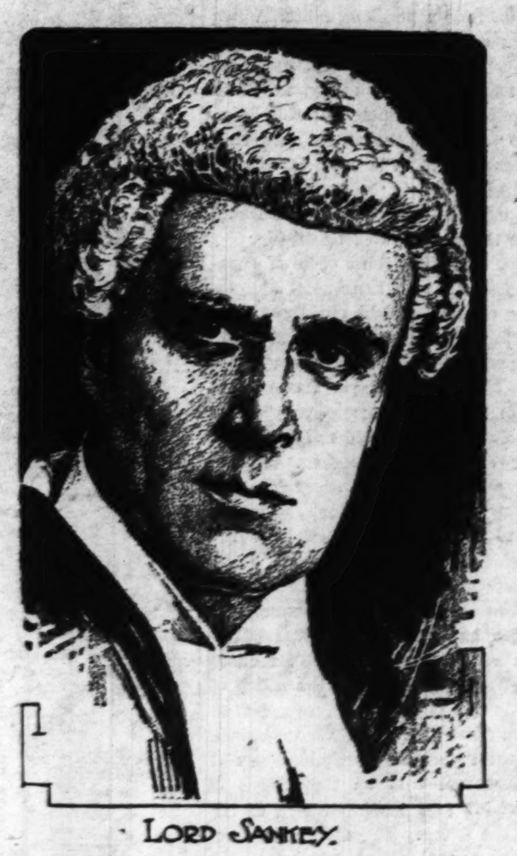
JUSTICE in England is swifter than naval conferences.

The period of the five-Power conference saw the beginning and the end of three memorable trials—the end in each instance, not merely of a phase, with demurrers, appeals, motions in arrest of judgment, and other legal maneuvers to follow, but the absolute end. Two of the trials were for murder; the third was that of Clarence Hatry and his associates for one of the most gigantic swindles in financial history.

To observers accustomed to thinking of criminal court procedure in terms of our "sporting theory of justice" (as it was called by the late Dean Lawson of the University of Missouri School of Law), the Hatry case and the fascinating Podmore and Fox murder cases have been brought to a full stop with a neatness and dispatch nothing short of amazing. Hatry and his pals, who but lately were promoting grandiose schemes involving millions of pounds, are in jail. Fox has gone to the gallows, and Podmore is under sentence of death. The cases are worth a brief review for the light they throw on the English court system.

The Hatry group of companies crashed under a weight of fraud last October, carrying with them the savings of hundreds of small investors. Total liabilities amounted to about $100,000,000 and the estimated deficiency was $65,000,000. Some $4,000,000 of the losses were borne by the general public and the rest absorbed by banks and brokerage houses. The effects of the smash extended even to New York, where the Equitable Trust Co. lost $1,000,000.

Head of British Judiciary



LORD SANKEY.

English Justice Sure and Swift.

On the charge of having raised money on bogus stock certificates in an effort to prop up their tottering enterprise, Hatry and three others went to trial at the Old Bailey, in the King's Bench (the criminal) division of the High Court of Justice, on Jan. 20, barely four months after their frauds had come to light. They pleaded not guilty. In the course of the trial, seeking mitigation of the inevitable punishment; they withdrew the plea.

On Jan. 24 all four defendants were found guilty by the jury and sentenced by Mr. Justice Avory. Hatry received 14 years' penal servitude, the maximum allowed by the law; Daniels got seven years, Dixon five and Tabor three. The whole trial, one of the most intricate imaginable, had been concluded in five days.

In pronouncing sentence against Hatry, the judge said he had been guilty of "the most appalling frauds that have ever disfigured the commercial reputation of this country." To a plea for mercy, based on the fact that a short time before the crash Hatry had gone to the Office of Public Prosecutions and confessed certain "irregularities" in his operations, Mr. Justice Avory said sternly that he saw little merit in confession when discovery in the immediate future was absolutely certain.

On March 17, less than two months after the trial in the High Court of Justice, the Hatry case was argued before the Court of Criminal Appeal and the judgment affirmed. The sentence, said the Lord Chief Justice, was "not a day too long."

Mark the time table: Discovery of the Hatry frauds in October; trial of the case during five days in January; appeal dismissed in March. Having in mind the years required to wind up the criminal cases growing out of the oil scandals of the Harding regime, one wonders how long the Hatry case would have taken at home. The case was of a kind conducive to endless delays under the American system. Moreover, Hatry was defended by some of the ablest and highest-priced counsel in England, including the famous Norman Birkett.

Execution Three Weeks After the Sentencing.

The case of Sidney Fox furnishes a good example of the swiftness of English court procedure in murder trials. All the Crown's evidence was circumstantial; Fox protested his innocence to the last, and he was defended with extraordinary skill. There were medical experts on both sides. Yet the trial consumed only eight days, on the last of which Fox was found guilty and sentenced to die in three weeks' time. On the appointed day he did die.

The Fox case was unusual in that his attorneys did not carry the case to the Court of Criminal Appeal. Realizing there was no hope in that quarter, they turned instead to the Home Secretary, who has the power of reprieve in murder cases. A plea of insanity was set up. Fox was thereupon examined by specialists, who reported to the Home Office that he was neither insane nor an epileptic subject, but "a cunning, crafty and very dangerous criminal." The Home Office therefore declined to intervene.

Known as "The Mystery of Room 66," the Fox case was followed by the English newspaper reading public with the keenest interest. Incidentally, the title given the case is a sample of the alluring nomenclature used by the English papers in reporting murder cases—a trick derived perhaps from the detective stories which have a large vogue in this country. The title was fully justified by the mysterious and sensational character of the case.

Last October, Fox, a debonair young man who lived by his wits, was staying with his mother in a hotel at Margate. They occupied rooms with a connecting door. One night a fire was discovered in Room 66, and when Mrs. Fox was brought out she was dead. The natural supposition was that she had died from suffocation, and a Coroner's jury returned a verdict of "death by misadventure."

Some time later an assessor for an insurance company, in going over Fox's claim for $10,000 on a traveler's policy on his mother's life, noticed that Fox had extended the policy a number of times, and that the last extension carried it to midnight of Oct. 23. Mrs. Fox had died only half an hour before that time. The assessor investigated further and reported "extremely muddy water in this business." Some smart police work followed. Mrs. Fox's body was exhumed and medical examiners found evidences that she had been strangled to death. Fox was arrested and at the end of February was committed for trial.

Record Comes Out Only After Verdict.

Ten days later he was on trial at the Lewes assizes. The prosecution contended that he had killed his mother in order to collect $15,000 insurance on her life and had set fire to the room to conceal the crime.

Not till after the verdict had been returned did it come out that Fox had a criminal record of forgery and theft, dating back to the time he had stolen money from a charity at the age of 13. No syllable of this record went to the jury. He was not convicted "on general principles," but solely on the evidence in the case at bar. Had any newspaper printed Fox's record during his trial it would have been adjudged guilty of contempt of court.

The case of William Henry Podmore, who figured in newspaper headlines as "The Man With the Scar," attracted almost as much attention as that of Fox. Vivian Messiter, for whom Podmore had worked, was found dead in January, 1929, in a locked garage at Southampton. His skull had been crushed with a hammer three months before. Circumstantial evidence pointed to Podmore as the assailant. Arrested December, last, as he finished a jail sentence for another crime, he was brought to trial at the Winchester Assizes on March 3, found guilty and six days later sentenced to death.

On April 7 Podmore's counsel argued for him in vain before the Court of Criminal Appeal. His only remaining hope was that the Home Secretary would commute his sentence. Pleas were addressed to this official on the ground that the balance had been tipped against Podmore by the dubious evidence of prisoners to whom he had talked while in jail.

Judge Deals With Facts in Case as Well as the Law.

To this observer the most remarkable feature of these two murder cases was the summing up by the judge. The address in each case dealt not only with the law but with the facts. The evidence on both sides was analyzed and weighed in a manner that would be utterly impossible under the restrictions imposed by law on State judges in America.

In the Podmore case, for example, the Lord Chief Justice, Lord Hewart, spoke to the jury for three and a quarter hours. Going into the evidence in minutest detail, he clearly indicated the weight that he believed should be attached to salient bits. He showed that circumstantial evidence may be completely damning evidence. Referring to the testimony of fellow prisoners against Podmore, he said that this alone was not ground for conviction, but he added the pointed observation that if evidence from none but persons of impeccable character were given credence, justice would often be defeated.

This power of the judge to comment upon and evaluate the evidence for the benefit of the jury is one of the chief distinguishing marks of English judical procedure. It is a power inherent in the system. Great distinction is conferred upon the judge, and great wisdom is expected of him. He is the master of the proceedings in his court; not, as sometimes appears to be the case at home, a mere umpire at a joust between lawyers.

Whether the English system, as one observes it in the High Court of Justice, better serves the ends of justice than the system which hedges the judge about with restrictions, this writer does not pretend to say. It may be argued that the English method vitiates trial by jury; that it is liable to grave abuses by judges of sadistic tendencies. However that may be, it is manifestly giving satisfaction to the English, and it undoubtedly makes for speed in the administration of justice.

Judges Appointed for Life Terms.

All judges in England, like our Federal judges but unlike our State judges, are appointed. The term is for life or until retirement, subject only to good behavior. This security of tenure is immensely important in safeguarding the principle of judicial independence. When a man goes on the bench for life he is supposed to go completely out of politics, and I am told by impartial observers that the practice in England squares with the theory. Selections for the bench in many instances have obviously been made on the basis not only of legal attainments but of general distinction. That the judiciary enjoys the highest respect and confidence of the public there can be no doubt. Only three times since 1701 has the conduct of a judge been called into question in the House of Commons.

Salaries of judges are better than in the United States. The Lord Chief Justice receives $40,000 a year and the High Court justices $25,000 a year each. The distinction attaching to a judgeship is such that the Lord Chancellor, (Lord Sankey is the incumbent), whenever a vacancy arises, is able to choose from a wide field of aspirants, includ-

The Role of the American Army In the World War, as Seen by Paul Painleve, French Leader

French, at First Skeptical of Aid United States Would Give, Found It a Concrete Factor With Arrival of First Troops.

By Paul Painleve,
Premier and Minister of War for France in 1917.
FIRST ARTICLE IN A SERIES OF THREE.

PARIS, April 26.

TWELVE years after peace was declared, the world is still debating, disforming, belittling or over-exaggerating the roles of the individual armies of the World War. Book makers and printing mills in the last few months have been grinding out war books which have made more fuss than cast a light on the events of the World War which still excite passions in awaiting impartial and measured history. Aspiring to glorify certain individuals and belittle others, most of these publications instead of bringing precise contributions to truth, really on the contrary, denature the facts even when they appear to be based on authentic texts. The method of procedure is an easy one and consists in effect of selecting, deforming or blowing up certain secondary details just as though they had a prime importance, whereas the essential facts are glossed over in silence. Thus cold reality is made unrecognizable.

If we hunted for an example in these recent books for several views of the ensemble or general impressions of the role of the American Army during the war and the effect of its intervention, what would we find? Bitter criticism of the jamming confusion of the American divisions after the battle due to alleged insufficient preparation on the part of its General-in-Chief, or Gen. Foch's failure to exercise his authority.

It seems from reading these literary quarrels that the whole history of the United States military co-operation and the putting into operation of the entire resources in men and materials of the vast American continent are reduced to petty quarrels over the delay in putting a young army into the lines of division of command. And why? Because it was obligatory on the part of Clemenceau to oppose the violent posthumous attack by Marshal Foch. A sad duel of two famous departed spirits.

I desire, on the contrary, to be guided only by truth, a truth which for a great part I have lived, and trace in wide lines and impartially this magnificent human drama which was America's entrance into the war and the appearance of her soldiers on the European battlefields.

It would be above human force to hope that such a great accomplishment could be done without friction and without mistakes, since they had to surmount so many obstacles judged insurmountable, and realize so many accomplishments which the competents esteemed impossible to achieve. But these conflicts and these errors lack any importance, the efforts were carried through to the conclusion, the results obtained by prodigious obstinacy and gallantry, the impossible became true, and it is on that we must base the real estimate of America's share.

Ribot Announced News.

It was on April 5, 1917, that the United States declared war on Germany. On that same day Premier Alexandro Ribot announced the glad news to the Chamber of Deputies amid the wild acclamations of that assembly. "It is the happiest day of my life," said Ribot, leaving the session so happy to receive such a great heritage from the hands of his predecessor, Briand.

To conceive the extent of the reinforcement this great event brought to the Allies, we must recall that late in 1916, based on erroneous information, we began to fear and the Germans hoped that President Wilson would place an embargo on munitions destined for the belligerents if they refused his negotiations.

The next morning, as Minister of War in the Ribot Cabinet which succeeded the Briand Cabinet March 20, 1917, I convinced the other members of the Government to send Gen. Joffre and Minister of Justice Viviani to the United States on a mission. The origin of this decision is interesting to recall. Late in March, I was informed that Mr. Hoover, who for three years had been feeding the populations of Belgium and Northern France in the name of the United States, was crossing to Paris incognito and returning to America. During unofficial conversations at the Ministry of War that afternoon, Hoover announced to me that his country's entry into the war was imminent but that it was necessary to swing into movement the entire continent from the Atlantic to the Pacific, but notably the farming Middle West where German influence was strongest. It was necessary, Hoover told me, in order to move a population already aloof from European affairs, to send over a mission composed of some eminent statesmen and democratic orators speaking English, and at the same time a famous military chief. The selection of Joffre and Viviani appeared to me to impose itself and the Council of Ministers ratified this choice. The happy consequences of this mission showed how judicious was Mr. Hoover's opinion.

A Symbolic Gesture.

During an interview with Ambassador Sharp on April 7, I informed him of the order instructing the Lafayette Escadrille to substitute the American for the French flag. The Star Spangled Banner floated for the first time over our battlefields beside the Allies' flags. But that was only a symbolic gesture.

We all asked the question, what military force would the American intervention bring the Allies? On the German side many pretended that the effect would be negligible. Did it not take Kitchener's army two years of preparation before it could engage in the battle of the Somme, they argued. Still Great Britain has possessed a great military tradition and abundant skeleton cadres such as those in her army in India. How much time would be required for America to call, instruct, train and officer her soldiers? And then how could they be transported, together with all the materials required by modern warfare, across the Atlantic to the French coasts which were severely guarded by German submarines? Many contended that the war would be finished a long time before the American army could appear on the European battlefield.

Doubtless, many agreed, the formidable resources of the United States in cereals, steel, explosives and powder, could be added to those of the Allies. But in fact, was not that situation already existing since 1914? For all these reasons, America's declaration of war failed to produce on German public and official opinion at first the crushing impression which might have been expected.

But it was not only on the other side of the Rhine that the intervention of the powerful American army on the western front appeared as chimerical. It can be admitted that it was the general opinion in France and England, and even in America, despite her enterprise.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Davis, Stephens, Kenyon.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THE real criticism of the President's appointment of Judge Parker is that it appears to be essentially political and that the Judge is comparatively unknown and somewhat mediocre. We must not, however, ignore the fact that he has the hearty indorsement of both of North Carolina's Senators, men of experience and unquestioned ability. There is no validity, in my opinion, in the opposition of organized labor and Negroes.

There are three men of outstanding merit and recognized ability. I feel confident that the nomination of any one of these men would meet with general approval. Davis of West Virginia, a former candidate for the presidency, may be ranked as a conservative. He is one of our most eminent lawyers. He is well versed in international and constitutional law. Senator Stephens of Mississippi may be classed as a conservative liberal. He has no superior in the Senate as a constitutional lawyer. Judge Kenyon of Iowa is a liberal. Conservatives recognize his worth and know that he is not a radical.

Have Nations Souls?

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

JOHN G. NEIHARDT, in his recent comments on soul hunting and "the soul of America," leaves us to guess whether or not he believes there is such a thing.

A certain distinguished American once gave a lecture before a notable gathering, entitled "Biological Analogies in History," and Daniel the Prophet and St. John of the Apocalypse treat of nations as biological entities, the like of which was never known to man, and behaving in such manner that even if we grant them souls, they are evidently very irrational, immoral souls, altogether under the spell of cosmic laws external to themselves.

And now this from the pen of Austin Hopkinson in his "Religio Militis," as hinting at another viewpoint:

> Daily the people bring their offerings to the ju ju house, where the arch-demagogue, concealed within the image of the state, causes the lifeless head to nod, the sightless eyes to roll and the voiceless tongue to seem to utter oracular sayings, whereof the burden is always that more and more offerings of votes must be brought so that the god may send plentiful rains, or may ward off plague from the cattle and blight from the crops.

Sterilization of Human Beings.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THE editor of the famous medical and surgical journal, the Lancet, writes me that the movement for "sterilization" is not at all strongly supported in England.

Nature is the best "sterilizer." Man usually bungles when he tries to improve upon nature. Some exotic plant, insect or animal is introduced into a country for the purpose of overcoming some other plant, insect or animal, and the life that is introduced becomes a worse menace than the life it was intended to destroy.

Eugenists would "sterilize" feeble-minded and hopelessly insane persons. But who knows who is hopelessly insane, and what would be the use of "sterilizing" those strictly confined in asylums? "Sterilization" would not cure their insanity, and when they are released as cured surely not even eugenists would advocate "sterilizing" them.

Growing River Traffic.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

WATERWAYS today are not in the least obsolete. As a matter of fact, they are an ever-increasing eyesore to the railroads who are employing all the tactics of a chained tiger to throttle them. Fortunately for the river interests, the Government today is again putting revenue not into the hands of pork-barrel politicians but into the hands of capable engineers, such as Gen. Ashburn and others. Few people realize the ever-increasing importance of the rivers as carriers of ore, lumber, steel, coal and other commodities in which time is not an element.

Today there are numberless sand and gravel companies along with common carriers such as the Union Barge Line, the American Barge Line, the new St. Louis Mississippi Valley Barge Line, the Standard Oil Tows, the Carnegie Steel Tows and numerous packet lines, offering on-time arrivals. New terminals are being built all along the rivers today, and the demand for them is a far cry. Here at St. Louis we have the Federal Barge Line and small shipping companies. Last year the tonnage carried on the Mississippi system aggregated over 62,000,000 tons, a healthy figure, indeed! There is more water-borne traffic today than in the flush times of steamboating in Mark Twain's day on the rivers, and within 10 years, when the Mississippi system is completed, river traffic will be as formidable a being as are the railroads.

HOW LONG?

When the new census figures are in, the excess of urban over suburban population it will render the reapportionment issue even more acute than it is now. This shift of population, which reached a balance in the 1920 census, is the chief characteristic of the new census.

What is to be done about it?

Congress, after delaying nine years, has provided with the census bill for reapportionment, but the tail is still wagging the dog in many of the states. The case of Missouri is particularly grievous. The Democrats control the State Senate, and they are afraid to risk reapportionment in the senatorial districts. The law says that if the Legislature fails to pass a reapportionment bill within the required time following each decennial census, the Governor, the Secretary of State and the Attorney-General shall reapportion the State. An attempt at this alternative some years ago resulted in a weird decision by the Missouri Supreme Court that since the passage of the initiative and referendum laws redress lies in the hands of the people. The Democratic State Senate could not have beaten that decision had it ruled on the matter itself. The matter must be carried back to the court in the hope that it will reverse itself. It is impossible for the people to reapportion the State by so cumbersome a process as the initiative.

Precisely what will happen with regard to the representation of the states by reapportionment depends upon the census of this year and the final action of Congress. Congress will still have the power to change the apportionment and the number of representatives, though that is not likely to happen. The law passed authorizes the President to reapportion seats in the House of Representatives on the basis of the 1930 census and the existing membership of the House, which is 435. On the basis of the 1920 census Missouri's representation would have been reduced from 16 to 14. It is estimated that on the basis of the 1930 census this State will lose three members, reducing her quota to 13. If, therefore, the Legislature fails to redistrict the State in accordance with the number of Representatives, we will be faced by the interesting necessity of electing 13 or 14 Congressmen-at-large. That might result in the election of all the candidates of one party to the House and would result in a political mess.

Illinois is no better off than Missouri. Gov. Emmerson wants to call a special session of the Legislature to relieve Chicago's financial distress. He has been urged to include in his call the recommendation for amendment of the revenue clause of the State Constitution. The Chicago Tribune says:

> There is much to be said for amending the taxation provisions of the Constitution, but no such step can be considered as long as the Legislature refuses to give Chicago and the other urban centers of the State an honest share of the legislative seats. Every member of the Legislature is sworn to carry out the constitutional mandate to reapportion the seats every 10 years in accordance with population changes in the State, but there has been no reapportionment since 1901. Men and women who will deliberately violate their oaths, deliberately perjure themselves, to maintain control of the Legislature, cannot be expected to treat fairly in matters of taxation those to whom they have denied representation.

How long are the suburban communities, the die-hards of the old rural regime in the states, the unconstitutional drys, and those who willfully repudiate representative government, going to keep this up?

JUDGE PARKER'S NOMINATION.

It is unfortunate that the nomination of Judge John J. Parker as an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States should be considered upon any other ground than merit.

Apparently, debate on the nomination, which the Senate has set for tomorrow, will range into fields that should not enter into such a debate. If the Southern Democrats in the Senate are going to vote for Judge Parker because his nomination has been protested by Negro organizations, and if other members of the Senate are going to vote for him because his nomination is opposed by union labor, then considerations that ought not to enter into qualifications of such a high officer of the Government as an Associate Justice will take precedence over his capacity and fitness for the place.

It would in our opinion be best for the nomination to be defeated, and there is strong likelihood that it will be. It would be nothing new in the history of the Senate, which furnishes some 20 precedents for such opposition to Supreme Court nominations. There is no evidence that Judge Parker is of Supreme Court caliber. There is no reason to believe that the appointment would tend to a better balance in that tribunal upon vital and pressing public issues. The Senate, therefore, can do more than express its resentment of political motives either in making the appointment or in opposing it. It can spare the country the consequences of an addition to the conservative element on the Supreme Bench, already stronger than it should be.

AMONG THOSE WHO WALKED.

If one took seriously the slogan of National Foot Health Week, "Be Healthy—Walk!" his break with the approved locomotion of the present put him in step with many of the literary great of the last century, a reward temporarily at least worth the cost. Keeping up with such hearty walkers as Ike Walton and Goldsmith, who tramped Europe with only a flute, will be out of the question for our nonwalking generation, but we can pay them the respect of eating their dust. In the forefront will be Wordsworth, figured by DeQuincey to have footed 175,000 miles of English highroads and bypaths.

DeQuincey himself belongs in the van, for did he not, unable to sleep for intellectual excitement after meeting Coleridge, set out and walk the 41 miles to Bristol? And Coleridge, too, who dashed off "The Ancient Mariner" to meet the cost of an autumn hike through Devonshire. Charles Lamb, Leigh Hunt, Hazlitt and Keats did their writing afoot and the stenography afterward. The Victorians were devoted walkers: Tennyson, Arnold, Carlyle, Kingsley, Fitzgerald, Emily Bronte and Meredith, the prince of country jaunters, to name but a few. Walt Whitman leads the American open road. Bryant was tramping New England hills at sunset when he saw the waterfowl. Thoreau went nowhere he could not walk. Shoe leather was a big item in O. Henry's disbursements. Today there is Vachel Lindsay, who has hit the ties of virtually every important railroad.

Widespread walking flew out of the window when the auto came in at the garage door. Abe Martin sums it up when one of his small boy characters answers an order to go to the corner grocery with: "I can't, ma, th' battery's down." Thus walking and riding have changed places.

THE OFFICE OF CURATOR.

Dr. Max F. Meyer, professor of psychology at our State university, recently made a speech at Nashville, Tenn., which caused a commotion among the curators of the institution.

With many of the facts in the controversy between the Professor and the university the public is, of course, familiar. But Dr. Meyer's own experience before the board as a witness, now told for the first time, is an illuminating contribution to the public's knowledge.

Dr. Meyer felt he could explain the whole effort in such a way as to justify himself before his craft. He was not permitted to testify. Instead of trying to get the facts and the truth, the curators, in the best melodramatic manner, conducted the inquisition. It was grotesque, bombastic, medieval stuff to Dr. Meyer, and it still is. Dr. Meyer realized at once that his case had been passed upon in advance. "A university board and president," he observes, "had already decided what to do with me."

It was a dreadful injustice they did this man. As we all know, Dr. Meyer has invested his life in Missouri University. His investment has yielded him just this—his professional reputation. That is the fortune he has accumulated in his 30 years of teaching and study. To him it is a precious estate. When the board of curators suspended him it was as if they had declared him professionally insolvent. Had the curators, sitting as judges, been versed in—shall we say—the law of professorial values; had they been properly solicitous to ascertain the truth; had they realized, as they should have, the real import of their verdict, it is impossible to believe that they could have rendered such a cruel judgment without according the witness the privilege of testifying.

It is true, of course, that competent opinion repudiated the curators' judgment as tyrannical and excessive. Officially the curators might put Dr. Meyer in stripes, as they did. Actually they revealed themselves as deplorably unqualified for their high office.

Against that sort of tyranny Dr. Meyer protests. He has had an experience to which the members of the faculty of our State University should not be liable. He is speaking for educational freedom, for the right of the college professor to be secure in his efforts to bear aloft the torch of education. His ideal appeals irresistibly to all citizens enlisted in the army of progress.

We believe Dr. Meyer has done more than confirm the high regard he has long commanded among his educational peers. He has rendered a great public service to the State of Missouri. He has focused public attention upon the importance of the office of university curator. It is, in all truth, a great office. It is an appointment which the Governor should make only after the most searching examination. It is an honor to be bestowed only on the citizen of learning, character, vision and understanding of the university's place in the destiny of youth. We have been too much disposed to make it an honorary position, and it is the bitter fruit of that neglect we are tasting now.

THE INSURANCE REFUND.

It is estimated by the State Insurance Department that some $11,000,000 is still due policy holders in Missouri from stock, fire and storm insurance companies. Possibly $1,000,000 of this sum, or that part due from 10 per cent of the business which did not enter into a stipulation with the State not to contest its jurisdiction over rates, is in doubt. It may have to return to the courts. As to the rest, it is money collected from policy holders after the reduction was made and of which they have enjoyed the use.

Having exhausted resistance in the courts to the 10 per cent reduction in rates ordered by the department in 1922, the companies say they are going to pay up. How they are going to do so has not been announced. In the approximate $3,500,000 of refunds from February 1, 1928, now being distributed, there is no supervision by the department. It does not even know how much is actually being refunded. Similarly, it would not know how much of the approximate $11,000,000 was actually returned to policy holders.

The State should step in and insist upon supervising the refund. Not to do so would be to take the companies' word for it, and the Governor has told us what their word is worth.

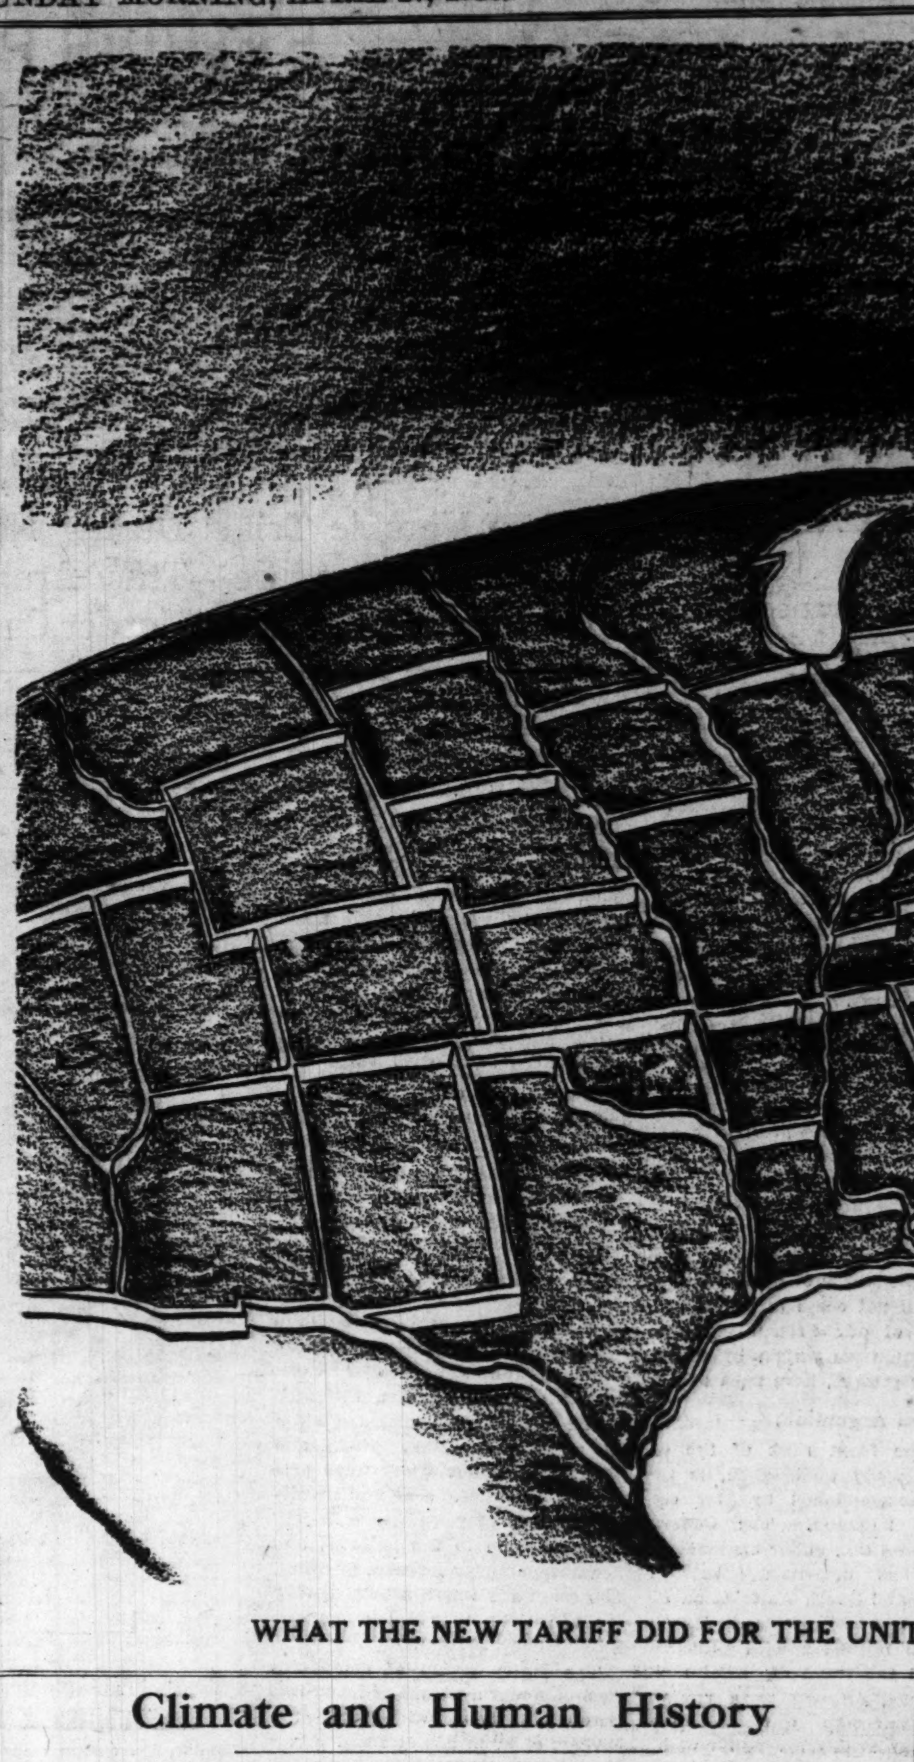
WAKE UP, MISSOURI!

That low salaries impel public officials to make money outside is axiomatic. The likeness to Caesar's wife which we hope to see in one assuming a public trust is much easier where the salary is fair.

In the year from June, 1928, to June, 1929, the Attorney-General of Missouri, Mr. Shartel, got $3000 from Young Bros., a St. Louis brokerage concern which failed in March with a loss of $2,000,000 to investors. Mr. Shartel says he did nothing for the firm. Nevertheless, it is plain that in giving him the money the firm sought to estop him as the State prosecutor from moving against it. Mr. Shartel's salary is $3000 a year. He receives in addition from the State from $1200 to $1500 annually as a member of the State Board of Equalization, the State Board of Fund Commissioners, and the State Board of Permanent Seat of Government. He therefore receives in all from the State from $4200 to $4500 a year. It is a miserable salary for the Attorney-General of a rich State like Missouri, with an assessed valuation of approximately $10,000,000,000. The consequences are not entirely upon Mr. Shartel; they are in part upon ourselves. We ask him to serve us as Attorney-General, and by underpaying him we say plainly enough that he must make at least some part of his living outside his office. That is a dangerous postulate, and right grievously has Mr. Shartel suffered from it.

All our State officials are underpaid. We have one of the best Governors in the Union. He has had a rich experience in public service. He has been counselor of the city of St. Louis, counselor of our Board of Freeholders, and a Judge in our St. Louis Court of Appeals. We reward him and his training when we make him the chief executive of the State by paying him $5000 a year plus the same $1200 to $1500 which he also gets as a member of the three boards mentioned above. If Gov. Caulfield cost us $25,000 a year it would be less than he is worth; we pay him $6200 to $6500 a year.

Wake up, Missouri!



WHAT THE NEW TARIFF DID FOR THE UNITED STATES.

Climate and Human History

Migrations and wars, rise and decay of civilizations, all dictated by climatic conditions since man has lived on earth; melting of glaciers in North made once fertile Sahara a desert; elevation of Nile Valley built up Egypt; rivers dried up, causing malaria which aided fall of Greece; floods sent Norsemen roving seas.

Julian S. Huxley in the Atlantic Monthly.

OF late years a determined attempt has been made to rewrite history in economic terms. But this does not go deep enough. Man's thought and social life are built on his economic life; but this, in its turn, rests on biological foundations. Climate and geology between them decide where the raw materials of human industry are to be found, where manufactures can be established; and climate decides where the mainsprings of human energy shall be released. Changes of climate cause migrations, and migrations bring about not only wars, but the fertilizing intermingling of ideas necessary for rapid advance in civilization.

The only zones where vegetation is abundant and man can easily flourish are the temperate and the tropical. But the temperate has another advantage. It contains the belt of cyclonic storms—in other words, of rapid and frequent changes of weather. And this type of climate, as Ellsworth Huntington has shown, is the one most stimulating to human energy and achievement.

When the ice of the glacial period was still in the early stages of its last retreat, the storm belt must have lain over North Africa, making what is now the Sahara green and fertile. It was through Africa and perhaps eventually from Southern Asia that Europe received its modern men, perhaps about 20,000 B. C.

Gradually, as the ice withdrew northward, the belts of climate followed it up. The Sahara began to come within the limits of the dry belt. Today, in certain parts of the Sahara, crocodiles and certain fresh-water fish exist in scattered oases. This drying of the Sahara must have sent wave after wave of migrating men out of it.

The glacial period did not die steadily away; it left the earth in a series of spasms or oscillations, a time of rapid retreat being followed by a standstill or even an advance of the ice, brought about, it would seem, by an elevation of the land. For a century or so about 4500 B. C., there was such an elevation. This seems to have had two interesting consequences. For one thing, the increased snowfall round the Mesopotamian basin gave rise to such violent spring floods, year after year, that some towns were abandoned, and the memory of the disastrous time has been preserved, it seems, in the story of Noah's flood and other Mesopotamian legends.

More important was its effect on Egypt. In the centuries before this time, the Nile Valley seems to have been marshy and largely uninhabitable; the elevation must have drained it. And the long ribbon of marvelously fertile land thus provided for the use of man tempted in the agriculturists of neighboring countries. This, it appears, was the real beginning of the civilization of Egypt.

Thus, largely as a result of the pressure of changing climate on early man, hunting gave place to agriculture, from Egypt to the Tigris and Euphrates. This corner of the globe was predestined to be the cradle of the modern world—by its climate, by its great rivers, by the fact of its being the original home of wheat.

Then the pressure of population, of climatic changes, of invasions in the rear, forced the grain growers out in all directions. Not till about 3000 B. C. did any settle on the continent of Europe; but well before the close of the succeeding millennium they had spread over its greater part, to Thrace, to Germany, to Belgium, to France. The push was felt by sea as well as by land. It is possible that the American continent also received its first dose of civilization during this period, by a migration over the landbridge where now is the Bering Straits.

About 1300 B. C. there was again a change. The climate became gradually moister and cooler. The belt of storm tracks again passed through the Mediterranean, giving opportunity for the rise of Babylonia and Assyria, Canaan and Phoenicia, of latter-day Crete and Egypt, of Mycenae and Troy, Greece, Carthage and Rome. North Africa was the world's granary.

But the change of climate was disastrous to the northern lands. Cold and wet descended; the peat bogs spread; the forests died off as the swampy moors extended. There was a marked falling off of culture in Ireland and Scandinavia; and the worst cold spell, in the fifth and fourth centuries B. C., has apparently left its permanent trace in the northern legend of the Twilight of the Gods, which pictures a disastrous world in the grip of snow and ice.

After this, the classical Mediterranean civilization began to fail. Jones, some 25 years ago, suggested in a remarkable book that the downfall of Greece was due to malaria imported from Africa. Now that we know that a progressive desiccation was in progress at the time, the idea gains in probability. The rivers, drying up to a series of pools in summer, would afford countless new breeding places for the larvae of the malaria-carrying mosquitoes.

The period from 500 to 1000 A. D. was definitely a dry one. This it seems to have been which in the South drove the Huns and Goths to the limits of Europe, and stimulated the expansion of Islam from drouth-stricken Arabia. But it brought new life to the swampy North. The culture of Ireland revived. In Scandinavia this was the great age of the Vikings, the Norsemen. As toward its close it grew less dry, the wet began to rob the Vikings of their livelihood; and they poured forth in a burst of migration which took them across the Atlantic, and eventually, in the guise of Normans, as far as Sicily.

Climatic belts have not shifted seriously for almost a thousand years. What will happen to civilization when they move again we can hardly foresee; but we cannot suppose that shifting climate will respect our modern balance of power, any more than it spared the civilizations of Mesopotamia. Climate is inexorable.

WASHINGTON DAY BY DAY

WASHINGTON, April 27.

THE World War pulled "Doc" Eaton from his pulpit in a large church on Madison avenue in New York City and caused him at the age of 50 to start on a path that was never to lead back to the cloth. Now at 62 he is a member of Congress — Representative Charles Aubrey Eaton of the Fourth District of New Jersey.

It is a strange story how this mild-mannered, kindly, white-haired man forsook the life of a cleric for that of a public official and politician. Although he does not seem to be miscast in his present role, one finds it easier to picture him as a minister of the Gospel than as a member of Congress.

"Doc" Eaton's change in professions was back in 1917. The United States was trying to get troops across the Atlantic to France. Germany was sinking vessels set aside for this purpose faster than shipping yards in this country could build them.

THE trouble lay in the fact that the shipping yards were not organized for such an emergency. High wages were being paid to workmen, but the output of vessels was far below what it should have been.

High officials of the Government and shipbuilders were called into conference. "Doc" Eaton, who had grown up around the shipyards in New England, had previously let it be known that he had a solution to the problem. He was invited to leave his pulpit, attend the conference and explain his ideas. When he had concluded his address at the conference, a high official of the navy arose immediately.

"In the name of the United States Navy," he said, "I commandeer the services of the Rev. Dr. Charles A. Eaton and order him to report for duty at Washington as quickly as possible."

Once in Washington he was made head of the national service section of the United States Shipping Board Emergency Fleet Corporation. From November, 1917, to January, 1919, he held this post—working night and day and traveling from one end of the continent to the other to make sure that shipyards operated to their highest degree of efficiency.

WHEN the war was over "Doc" Eaton found that he had created a new profession—that of industrial relations expert. Large corporations appealed to him to organize their plants in the same manner he had handled the emergency fleet. He did so.

In 1924 "Doc" Eaton's close friends in North Plainfield, N. J., suggested that he run for Congress. His opponent was one of his warmest friends. "Doc" was successful—was returned for a second term by a larger vote, and for a third term by an even larger margin. He says he will never return to the ministry.

"I was never a parson in the strict sense of the word," he says. "And besides, why can't a man work for the advancement of God's kingdom as well on the floor of the House of Representatives as in a pulpit?"

ST. LOUIS SYMPHONY SECOND OLDEST IN U. S.

Campaign in Progress for $750,000 to Finance It for Three Years.

With a campaign in progress to raise a $750,000 golden jubilee fund to meet the needs of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra for the next three years, its backers point out that it has been a continuous civic influence since 1880 and is the oldest symphony orchestra in the United States excepting that in New York.

Preceded for 20 years by the St. Louis Philharmonic Society, the Orchestra was formally organized on Sept. 1, 1880, as the St. Louis Choral Society, abandoning its choral feature and adopting its present form in 1907. It is considered one of the 11 great symphony orchestras in the country.

During the half century of concerts which closed with the past season, the orchestra has brought to St. Louis a long list of conductors, musicians and soloists, offering popular Sunday afternoon concerts at low prices in addition to its regular subscription series. Until three years ago the orchestra followed each season with a spring tour of cities in the St. Louis territory, a practice which the Symphony Society intends to resume if the current campaign is successful.

Plans for the 1930-31 season, contingent on the success of the financial campaign, call for the abandonment of the "pop" concerts which have become almost a traditional, and the substitution of a weekly radio hour over Station KMOX as a civic advertisement as well as a cultural influence. The tentative plan for broadcasting calls for 18 or 20 Sunday afternoon concerts with the radio facilities donated by KMOX and the cost of providing the orchestra borne by the Symphony Society.

I. A. Stevens is general chairman of the Campaign Committee; Boyle O. Rodes, vice chairman; Herbert D. Condie, second vice chairman, and David L. Grey, treasurer. An intensive campaign is planned for the next few weeks in order that the fund may be completed well in advance of the season's opening.

Herriot Urges Europe to Ally Self With South America

United States of Europe could aid such countries in the full bloom of economic development.

I do not suggest that France practice an exclusive nationalistic policy in the markets of the world; France against Germany or against England. An economically united Europe would have no difficulty in agreeing upon its relations with countries like Argentina, Brazil and Chile from whom they would request those products which they need and supply those products lacking our South American friends.

Since Russia has declared an economic war upon us, why forget today that Argentina stands at the head of the nations of the earth as a producer of flax, having devoted 2,800,000 hectares (about 6,916,000 acres) to its production; that in six years she will have sown 120,000 hectares of cotton; that her production of timber is considerable; and finally that she is beginning to exploit her oil fields.

Need we cite an illustration of the insufficiency of French exportations. Let we borrow it then from the automobile industry. France figures in the automobile importation of Argentina only to the extent of 1 per cent. This fact alone serves to denounce the mismanagement of the economic relations betweeen the two states.

Cites Bolivia Too.

I have dwelt at some length on the Argentine Republic in order to point out that the commercial policy of South America in its relation to Europe and particularly France has need of careful study and revision. I might well have chosen Bolivia as an example; there is a country endowed with vast mineral wealth, but which has a great need of European assistance in its public works.

I feel precisely the same way about Brazil for whom my country entertains a traditional feeling of friendship—a country that understands and appreciates French culture, that only recently received charmingly our doctors, that has entertained hospitably our military mission. We in France do not forget that Brazil agreed without reserve to submit her differences to the Hague Court along with our representatives in the matter of Federal titles, and that she observed scrupulously the decisions of the court.

With Columbia our relations are being bettered year by year; she has asked us for aid in facilitating her efforts toward a practical communication between Bogota and the sea; she has asked the assistance of our aviators, engineers, telephonists and surveyors.

Chileans come to work in France and we have invariably been struck by their qualities and intelligence and their ability to assimilate.

Finally, Peru, liberated from a formidable difficulty by the settlement of the Tacna-Arica affair, is now able to occupy herself actively in her national development. Visiting French engineers are now studying the possibility of investing French capital in the public works of the Government of Lima or in the anthracite regions of the northeast.

Large Brazilian Imports.

France in the summer of 1929 proposed a commercial accord with Brazil bearing particularly on the question of coffee. We may, I feel certain, count confidently on the technical authority of Sandeira de Mello to insure the mutual advantage of the two countries. We have already received more from Brazil than she has received from us. In 1928 Brazilian importation into France attained the sum of 1,167,000,000 francs, while exportations from France into Brazil totaled scarcely half this figure.

In like manner, a commercial treaty is being prepared now between France and Chile. This negotiation was undertaken following the visit to France of the Chilean Minister of Finances. Raw or manufactured products originating in his country enumerated on the list would, according to this agreement, be imported into France and favored by a minimum tariff. Inversely the balance of Franco-Chilean commerce would be favorably treated in Chile, which receives from us about three times as much as she gives. In order to protect itself against the competition of synthenic azote, the Government of Santiago and Ramínez is well aware of the situation—is beginning to take steps to augment its volume of exportations.

We have followed with great interest the highly intelligent action of Pablo Raminez in his efforts to stabilize throughout the world the nitrate industry, despite the powerful organizations of I. G. Farben industry and the Imperial Chemical Industries.

In the course of the last three years French consumption of Chilean nitrate has increased from 180,000 to 400,000 tons, and prospects of even a greater increase are evident. As the "Mercurio" observes, the accords already concluded or in the process of conclusion represent a highly gratifying advantage for a country supporting itself not merely by its sulphate magnesia, but by virtue of its important resources.

In order to augment the sale of her products in France, Chile will undoubtedly find it natural to favor French products, particularly our manufactures of luxuries and cloths; she knows the favorable reception she will receive on our frontiers.

In summing up, it is clear our relations with South America are in process of constant improvement but there is ample room for still more improvement. Those of us of France who are favorable to an international economic entente will continue to exert ourselves in the effort to promote other accords than the recently negotiated Franco-Cuban agreement.

Let me again refer to the importance, to my mind, of the necessity of Europe coming to the aid of the republics of Latin-America. We must substitute a policy of organization for a policy of competition. It should not happen that a question of railroad materials should cause, beyond the Atlantic, a cleavage of interests between France, Germany and England. I am a faithful adherent to the old school of Manchester economics with the opinion that there are many places in the world for the surplus products if man is willing to organize that world.

Let me now return to the example of the Argentine Republic. She is suspicious of the protectionist campaign of North America. She is seeking to market her agricultural products. The absence of Russia from the European market would be a great benefit to her if Europe were organized. We have colonial territories which might well utilize her hides. There are immense populations of the world that lack supplies of milk, flour and sugar. A world well organized which the League of Nations ought gradually to effect, would permit trade relationships far better regulated than many of those now in existence, which are largely empirical. New regions, wisely developed, would utilize the surplus petroleum now waiting for a market. Then, too, how many human beings are there who are still deprived of wheat.

On the other hand, the old countries of Europe would be able to furnish the agricultural countries with the creations of their industries, technical and material luxuries, perfected means of transport and machines.

In closing, let me say we will do our best for our sister republics. But their possibilities are so vast, their future so grand, that a true understanding can come only through much study, great patience and continued efforts; for this work of organization presupposes an economically united Europe.

May our South American friends aid us in understanding their problems and knowing their people in France as well as in all Europe and we will do our utmost to cooperate with them.

RULES FOR REPATRIATION OF BRITONS NOT CHANGED

Consul Here Points Out That Cases Must Be Referred to Foreign Office.

British subjects who are in distress will be repatriated at public expense only after specific reference of the case to the Foreign Office, after production of satisfactory evidence that the subject will be mantained by relatives in England and will not become a public charge, and on signature of a guarantee that the expenses of repatriation will be refunded, the British Consul's office in St. Louis announced yesterday.

The announcement was made because of the increasing number of applications by persons who are unemployed or in financial difficulties to be repatiated at the expense of public British funds. In many cases, the Consul's office states, these applications appear to have been due to an impression that some change had been made in the regulations. This impression, the office explains, is mistaken. The regulations have not been changed.

30,000 TULIPS AT SHAW'S GARDEN TODAY

Hundreds of Red and Yellow Parrot Variety, Brightest of Them All.

More than 30,000 tulips are blooming today at Shaw's Garden.

Some 20,000 Darwins line the velvety Washington bent lawn beside the lily pools. Another 5000, of the starry retroflex varieties, border the circular rose garden a few steps to the north. Just coming into bloom with these, the gift of a St. Louis seed concern, are hundreds of red and yellow Parrot tulips, named for the brightest "plumage" of them all.

And still another 5000 in 100 choice varieties of Darwins, Rembrandts and retroflexes, are blooming on to the west, in the English garden beside the floral display house. Each of these exceptional varieties, the gift of the United Dutch Bulb Growers of Holland, is labeled for the convenience of the amateur.

Blooming in a formal garden inside the display house are Martha Washington geraniums, calceolarias or "lady's purses," roses, annual chrysanthemums and fancy petunias with flowers unusually large and brilliant.

AMBASSADOR EDGE EXPLAINS HIS INDUSTRIAL INVESTIGATION

Tells French He Is Striving Earnestly to Effect Commercial Agreement.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, April 26.—The character of United States Ambassador Walter Edge's industrial investigation over France is not understood by all the people and criticisms have been carried in the French press.

In reply, Edge today summed up the results of his inquiries. He told the French people frankly he did not expect to accomplish a miracle, but was making a conscientious effort to establish something in the way of a rapprochement between the two countries in economic matters. Both countries, he remarked, are protectionist in policy and rivals in trade to some extent, but such economic competition is "healthy competition which will and should always exist." He expressed confidence he had the full support of French business men.

Empire Trade Issue Is Playing Prominent Part in West Fulham.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, April 26.—The West Fulham by-election May 6, in which the issue of empire trade is playing a prominent part, will be a straight fight between Labor and Conservative candidates.

J. W. Banfield was nominated by the Labor party today, and Sir Cyril Cobb, Conservative, who sat for West Fulham from 1918 until his defeat last year, was put forward by the Unionist party.

J. M. McLaughlin, Communist, failed to appear before nominations closed, and it was presumed he failed to obtain the £250 ($1250) which, he said, "capitalism demands as an election deposit."

The by-election was caused by the resignation of Dr. G. E. Spero, Labor.

OMAHA, Neb., April 26.—Union Pacific Railroad officials announced today that effective June 1, the running time of the Portland Limited, Chicago to Portland, would be reduced an additional hour, making the through schedule 60 hours and 45 minutes. The Portland Limited is now operating on a 63-hour schedule. A reduction of one hour 15 minutes, effective June 1, was announced about a month ago.

Painleve's View of U. S. Army in World War

first mission composed of business men and famous industrialists who came to Paris from New York after America's entrance into the war. They were positive men who had accomplished things, ardent friends of France and seeking the most efficient means of coming to her aid. I recall the toast exchanged and all the promises, whether it was a matter of food, money, raw materials, finished goods or running blockades. But when the conversations reached the ground of military help, what prudence, what reserves they made. We evoked the days of Lafayette and Rochambeau, when the help of numerically weak and feeble effectives sufficed to swing the balance in favor of the Colonists.

But their opinion, thank God, was not that of the Washington Government or the French Government. As early as April 12, France designated Andre Tardieu as High Commissioner to the United States with a wide mission, that of realizing in all fields everything possible. Simultaneously, I ordered the French general staff to study in greatest detail the problem of America's military co-operation, and with the Minister of the Navy, Admiral Lacaze in full accord, we drafted a transport plan which was eventually accepted.

General Skepticism.

May 4, 1917, was the really first occasion on which the Allies considered the possibility of American soldiers taking an extensive part in the operations. That day, before the first Inter-Allied Council meeting following the April offensive, I affirmed publicly for the first time the possibility of the arrival in France of an army of 1,000,000 Americans. The Secretary's minutes of that meeting are proof of the general skepticism and somewhat disdainful scorn which greeted such an unusual conception.

Was not even the crossing alone of 500,000 soldiers, with the material necessary for the upkeep, a Utopian dream with the submarine war doubling in fury? America's representatives had not yet taken their places around that conference table, but that same night Admiral Sims arrived in Paris and set right to work with a vigor that was most pleasant to watch. He immediately fell into complete accord with the French Admiralty.

The Government at Washington had made up its mind what it aimed to do. Disregarding pretended impossibilities, plans were drafted, the audacious undertakings multiplied sometimes slightly unorganized, but eventually they all contributed to the grandiose results.

Meanwhile at Paris, Marshal Foch became chief of staff of the French Army. He was not the kind of man to dodge such hardy conceptions. It was in these conditions that on June 13, only two months after America declared war, that the General-in-Chief of her armies arrived in Paris.

Unforgettable Spectacle.

It was a memorable event which proclaimed America's determination to enter the war with all her great strength. It was an unforgettable spectacle for those who could witness that entry.

Early in the afternoon we learned that Gen. Pershing would arrive at the Gare du Nord in Paris at 6 p. m. School children were hastily granted a holiday. Without the police turning a hand to assure order, the whole population of Paris lined the streets from the station to the Place De La Concorde. The young men had gone to the front, but the old men and cripples, women in mourning, and children pressed and massed along the sidewalks. Many carried simple flowers, all eyes were filled with tears, all throats voiced "Braves"—France's cheer of welcome—to the new ally whose arrival promised the mighty force of America to bolster up weakened France. Paris saddened but determined, Paris, which like the country at large, still trembled from the emotion of the abortion of the great hopes of April, 1917, bid a glorious welcome through Gen. Pershing to the American army.

The spontaniety and dignity of the spirit of this welcome was really heart gripping. Sitting in the carriage beside Gen. Pershing, I saw his features grow rigid, to remain impassive.

That was not a mere exterior manifestation without a morrow. That mass of people with a certain instinct understood that a new phase of the war had been started. The cruel experiences of April, 1917, had proven that the Franco-British forces, while capable of inflicting hard blows on the enemy, could not hope to crush the German line by an attack of ensemble without a new and powerful effort and armament which would have required at least a year to complete. But great anxiety, based unfortunately on what proved to be fact, swept across France—would the Russian front resist much longer? This striking gesture of Gen. Pershing's arrival, by which America pledged the fullest military co-operation, provided France with the certainty of eventually conquering the invader regardless of the vicissitudes of battle and the evolution of the Russian turmoil. Legions of Americans were to be substituted for the failing battalions of the East.

Thus the dice were thrown. America stepped forward along the path which knew no turning back. By the contrary moral effect, the impression in Germany was now disastrous. The game would be lost for the Central Powers if they permitted the welding of the American with the tired Allied forces during 1918.

Million More If Needed.

On July 14, the morning after his arrival, Gen. Pershing called on the War Ministry. His dialogue was brief and without wasting words: "I have been charged by President Wilson to ask you how many American soldiers you will need to defeat Germany thoroughly." My reply was ready on the tip of my tongue: "One million soliders moved to the front before July 1, 1918." Two days later I saw Gen. Pershing again bringing his reply: "You will have the million and another if necessary, and still more if you need them. That is what I have been charged by the President of the United States to tell you."

This pledge between the Governments was soon completed by public manifestation. Only on July 4, after the Paris garrison solemnly feted Independence day, the Americans and the French joined in a pilgrimage to the Pichus Cemetery, to Lafayette's tomb. Gen. Pershing was there with his staff. Replying to the famous "Lafayette, we are here!" I announced the importance of the American military co-operation and thanked the descendants of Washington's soldiers for the fraternal aid they brought to the French army in which the long war had made wide breaches. "They did not want that France become a glowing tinder which would light up the world in consuming," I declared that day.

There remained, however, one supreme difficulty to overcome which alone threatened to render in vain all America's efforts. America's determination to raise an army was thereafter accepted as a glorious fact, but there was the qeustion of how this army could cross the Atlantic. Was that possible?

Two schemes were advanced, each with its supporters, the first using isolated and rapid ships capable of passing by surprise through Germany's submarine line, and second, the one which Admiral Lacaze and I preferred, which called for convoys of transports with torpedo boats and destroyers ahead, behind and alongside as sheep dogs guarding the flocks. It was the second method which was adopted with the collaboration of the Britsh and French fleets.

First U. S. Troops Land.

During the last week of June, 1917, the first convoy of American troops landed at St. Nazaire without having lost a man or ship. During the first half of July other convoys landed with the same good fortune at St. Nazaire and at Brest. The proof was striking. The thing appears almost simple today but the fact remains that during the three weeks, I passed sleepless nights of constant anguish and worry over those first thousands of Americans en route for France. Everything depended on their success in eluding the submarines. From that moment the American army ceased to be a mere hope, a mere eventual possibility, and became a concrete and essential factor in the war. It was a moral and a virtual factor at first, awaiting the day when it became a force in action. It was no longer a plan of war which could not be based on the participation of this American army. Its importance developed in the same measure as the Russian army dissolved. But so that it would be in shape to fulfill the role destined for it, many technical problems remaiend to be solved and they required long months.

(M. Painleve's second article will be published in an early issue.)

Another cause contributing to expedition in English trials is the ready acceptance of jurors. The right to challenge exists but it is very rarely exercised. Both sides feel, perhaps, that the Sheriff of the County, who picks the jurors, has done as good a job as anybody could reasonably expect and that in any event the judge, in the exercise of his great powers, will insure fair play. Whatever the reason, the trial gets under way with very little or none of the sparring over jurors that is likely to consume hours or days of an American trial. In his authoritative work on the administration of criminal justice in England and Wales, G. G. Alexander comments on the extensive use of the challenge in America, "where," he says, "the greatest difficulty seems to exist to get a jury together at all." The difficulty in England, he adds, is "practically unknown."

Still another feature which distinguishes English criminal procedure from American is the absence of any officer comparable to our district attorney. No political credit can be gained from a spectacular prosecution. The essential officer here is the Director of Public Prosecutions, who acts under the Attorney-General. He has wide duties in connection with criminal work, including that of advising the police regarding their legal problems. If they are uncertain whether or not to prosecute a case they consult with him.

Prosecutors Chosen for Specific Cases.

Subject to the supervision of the Attorney-General, he can "brief" counsel—that is, bring them in to plead a case—for the Crown. The Crown, it should be explained, briefs barristers as it pleases to conduct prosecutions. There are no standing prosecutors. A barrister may appear for the defense in a criminal case one day and for the Crown the next. The most important cases are prosecuted in person by the Attorney-General, assisted by junior counsel whom he has briefed for the occasion. The Attorney-General, for example, was the leader for the Crown in both the Eatry and the F[illegible] cases.

In the background of the legal and judicial system is the Secretary of State for Home Affairs—the Home Secretary. Punishment in most cases can be mitigated by the Judge to meet extenuating circumstances, but in a murder case the Judge must accept the verdict of the jury and impose the death sentence; the Home Secretary then remains the sole hope of the convicted man. For centuries this officer has had the duty of saying whether the death sentence should be carried out or the royal prerogative of mercy exercised. He can grant either commutation of the death sentence to life imprisonment, or a pardon. It is a rule of his office that he will pay no attention to an application for mercy unless it be in the form of a reasoned recommendation.

To sum up: Proceedings on the charge of murder begin with an examination in a lower court; if the prisoner is committed for trial, he goes before the High Court on conviction he has the right of appeal to the Court of Criminal Appeal, which is summoned by the Lord Chief Justice and must consist of at least three Judges. This court can either sustain or quash the conviction; it has no power to order a new trial. Finally there is the appeal for mercy to the Home Secretary.

The machinery of justice is basically the same as in the United States. That it operates more swiftly in England is due to a number of factors. Some of these have been outlined here; some are too deep rooted in fundamental differences between the Unitd States and England to permit of analysis in an article of this scope. It is safe to say, however, that of all the causes making for smoother and speedier turning of the wheels, none is more controlling than the greater power and prestige of the English judiciary.

WARRANT CHARGES DRY AGENT WITH CURSING

M. D. Padfield Gets Out of St. Charles Before It Can Be Served, However.

Prohibition Agent Merritt D. Padfield, who likes his little joke now and then, is charged with the use of profane and insulting language on Main street, St. Charles, because he could not laugh when the joke was on him.

"The Pup," a saloon operated by Robert Fischer, was being raided Friday and about 75 men and women were watching the proceedings, including Padfield's attempts to open a large safe in the place, when the agent came to the door and asked, "Does anybody here know where I can get a sledge hammer?"

Somebody tittered and a wave of laughter swept the crowd. Padfield scowled and surveyed the street, then elbowed his way to a nearby tin shop. The tinner declared he had no sledge hammer and Padfield started back to the saloon empty-handed.

A man laughed at the angry agent and Padfield stopped in the midst of the crowd. "Who was that laughed at me?" he demanded, and Theodore C. Bruere, young lawyer, replied, "I laughed."

According to Bruere, who swore out a warrant under a city ordinance, Padfield cursed him in the hearing of several women, and then retired to the saloon to shake the safe in another vain effort to open it.

The warrant was issued by Police Judge Max J. Frey, but a policeman who hurried to the Missouri River bridge to serve it found that Padfield and his party had left for St. Louis 10 minutes before.

Padfield joined the St. Louis prohibition squad in 1928 while a paper salesman and gained notice by betraying several of his saloonkeeper customers before he quit his old job. Recently in Cape Girardeau he reported a Government automobile stolen while two of his fellow agents were using the machine. When Chief of Police Wickham found the car with the agents in it and rebuked Padfield for creating a situation which might have resulted in a pistol fight, Padfield said he thought it would be a good joke if the agents were arrested.

MAN SOUGHT IN ROBBERY HERE GETS PRISON TERM AT ST. PAUL

Walter Kelly Alias Walter Davis Jumped $10,000 Bond to Escape Trial for Holdup.

Police have been notified that Walter Kelly, alias Walter Davis, sought here since 1926 when he jumped a $10,000 bond on a robbery charge, was sentenced to three years in the Federal penitentiary last Feb. 28 at St. Paul, Minn., on a narcotic charge.

Kelly was one of several men charged with the holdup at 5356 Easton avenue in December, 1925, in which about $4000 in jewelry was taken. His arrest followed an attempted holdup of the Grand Central Theater and the confession of the man who attempted that robbery, which implicated Kelly in the jewelry holdup which had taken place a short time before. Kelly gave bond on the charge and his subsequent jumping of his bond led to a grand jury inquiry into bondsmen's assets.

Kelly's whereabouts was learned from the United States Marshal at St. Paul, who was informed by the National Bureau of Identification at Washington, that Walter Davis, convicted at St. Paul, was Walter Kelly, sought by police in St. Louis. Federal authorities have been asked to hold Kelly, at the expiration of his term, for the St. Louis authorities.

It is a fast moving performance, with few dull spots, but, what is more to the point, there are many specialties that employ the camera and the microphone for results that could not be duplicated on the stage. And it is scarcely necessary to add that there is talent galore, much of it of a high order.

The irrepressible charm of Maurice Chevalier shines out in three or four skits, despite the fact that the Hollywood directors have not done entire justice to the French star. Helen Kane sings her "Boop-a-doop" song very effectively. Leon Erroll makes his first talkie appearance in a skit in which his clowning comes through quite successfully. There is also an amusing burlesque of the mystery thrillers, with William Powell as Philo Vance, Clive Brook as Sherlock Holmes and George Bancroft as Dr. Fu Manchu. And there are as well all the familiar singing and dancing numbers.

BUT it is when the picture ventures into fantastic paths, forbidden to the stage by technical limitations, that it rises several notches above the average. There is one number in technicolor that is certainly the finest thing that has yet appeared in this medium, and, as a matter of fact, one of the loveliest things that the screen has ever done. It is a Spanish scene, crowds of people and dancers. The whole is shot with light and color and movement, the outlines all a little vague and blurred, the color brilliant and shimmering, scarlet and gold against somber tones of brown and green, creating an indescribably lovely effect, Goyaesque even it might be said. And it doesn't matter much that it is somewhat marred at the end by the introduction of some ancient burlesque and a very bad comic. For this brief sketch indicates clearly the uses of technicolor—for effects where it is not important that the outlines be sharp and clearly defined. At the point to which it has been developed at present, technicolor is scarcely suited to the ordinary picture. In fact, the effect is usually very sad.

Again by the clever use of microphone and camera Nancy Carroll steps out of a slipper on a table and Abe Lyman's band appears as if by magic from a shoe box. This distortion is not especially well managed but it is nevertheless startling and amusing.

In the concluding number, too, there is an attempt at fantasy, with Chevalier and a chorus in a song about sweeping the clouds off the sky so the rainbow can shine through—one of those songs. It is rather a crude effect in technicolor but again it indicates a direction in which the talkies might very advisably move.

With all these latest possibilities that so far have been barely hinted at, it seems a little sad that the talkies should confine themselves to the limitations of a stage set. But it must also be admitted that to date the most finished talkie productions that have come out of Hollywood have been the ones that have set themselves limitations nearly as rigid as those which prevail on the stage. "The Last of Mrs. Cheyney" occurs at once and to a certain degree "Disraeli" was a static production lifted more or less bodily from the stage.

AUDIENCES control the type of pictures shown in St. Louis to a far greater degree than the average movie-goer realizes. The temples of the cinema here, as elsewhere, represent very large investments, and they entail considerable overhead. They must do a certain fixed ratio of business every week, which is the reason why almost every picture shown must be scaled down to the lowest level of intelligence.

But occasionally there is an exceptional picture. One such picture, "The Man From Blankley's," is the occasion for these remarks. A leading first run house in St. Louis has this picture, which is John Barrymore's first and highly successful flight into light comedy in the talkies. But there is a serious question as to whether it will ever be shown at a major house. There is a vague suspicion that it is too good. Which means a number of things. That it is too subtle, perhaps, too clever, too brilliant.

"Paramount on Parade" Demonstrates Certain Technical Possibilities—The Best of the Revues and Probably the Last—How Movie Audiences Dictate the Film Offerings —A Note on "The Man From Blankley's."

By M. W. CHILDS.

WHAT is in many respects the best—and probably also the last—of the long series of pictures in revue form is out at the Missouri this week. As reported in this column last Sunday, the moviemagnates have turned thumbs down on this form of production, feeling that the public has lost interest. But if anything could make the movie audience change its collective mind, "Paramount on Parade," the picture at the Missouri, would do the trick.

It is a fast moving performance, with few dull spots, but, what is more to the point, there are many specialties that employ the camera and the microphone for results that could not be duplicated on the stage. Quadrangle Club Of Washington U. In Musical Play

THE Quadrangle Club of Washington University will present its newest musical comedy, "Si, Si, Senorita," in a series of four performances at the American Theater, beginning May 7. The work is by Ted Williams and Carleton Hadley, Washington alumni, who also wrote "Ship Ahoy!" produced last year. It will be the first time that a collegiate theatrical offering has enjoyed a run of four performances in St. Louis.

Washington University musical shows got their start in 1909 when Fanny Hurst, then a student at the university, wrote "The Official Chaperone," which was presented in a tent on the campus. In 1910, Dr. Arthur Proetz, St. Louis physician, and Hugh Ferriss, noted architect and artist, collaborated on "Quadrangle Town." "Pierrette," "Son of a Gun" and "The Love Star" followed. There was a break in the chain then until 1926 when "Tame Oats" appeared. In 1927 Williams and Hadley and a third collaborator, Milton Monroe, produced "Rosita" and in 1928, "High Hat."

Quadrangle musical plays are written, organized, directed and acted by Washington students and alumni who also design the scenery and costumes. "Si, Si, Senorit," is in two acts and six scenes and has a cast of more than 80 students, including 50 women. The musical score comprises 18 original numbers.

John Charles Thomas Signed for Next Year

JOHN CHARLES THOMAS will be heard in St. Louis next season under the auspices of the Civic Music League. Thomas is the first artist signed by the league. He was an outstanding feature of the league's program of two seasons ago and the requests for his return have been numerous. Thomas was born in Myersdale, Pa., and studied medicine in the Mount Street School of Homeopathy in Baltimore, all the while nursing an ambition to sing. While studying medicine he won a scholarship at Peabody Conservatory of Music, which finally directed him to a musical career. At the age of 18 he became the director of a choral society in Baltimore and before making his debut as a recital artist, gained diversified experience from light opera to grand opera, from summer stock companies in small towns to Broadway successes and achieved stardom at the Globe Theater under Charles Dillingham—winning popularity in such favorites as "The Love Letter," "Maytime" and "Apple Blossoms." The Civic Music League's concerts will be held in Moolah Temple next season.

On Stage and Screen This Week

Mary Hart, who plays the lead in "Let Us Be Gay" at the Orpheum. And a scene from "Across the World with Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson," their first talking picture.

Chekhov's Uncle Vanya and Lillian Gish

Jed Harris, Who Made Himself Famous With Wise-Cracking Plays of the "Front Page," Turns to Something Deeper and More Elusive With Equal Success.

By ROBERT LITTELL.

NEW YORK, April 27.

IT is hard not to write rubbish about Chekhov—as hard to write about him as it would be to write about people in the way he does himself. The secret heart of creation beats warm within his plays; the critic who tries to tear that heart out can do so anatomically only, and pour learned aesthetic adjectives of praise over it without telling anyone why it is a heart or why it beats. And so I think I shall not try any tricks with the scalpel on "Uncle Vanya," but merely repeat that of all Chekhov's plays it is the surest and deepest, that Chekhov's are the best plays of the last 30 or 40 years, and that the present production of "Uncle Vanya" by Jed Harris, the best production of Chekhov yet to be seen in this country, in its language, must on no account be missed.

I shall avoid, then, trying to tell you what I think of this play, and why, and steer clear of an analysis that only leads to ecstatic adjectives or some dry label as "artistic realism." But I shall permit myself a few elementary remarks. One is by Chekhov himself, made in a casual letter of advice to a friend who had sent him a short story.

"To make a face from marble," he said, "means to remove from the slab everything that is not face."

Such simple advice, but how many writers out of 10,000 can begin to obey it?

Another point. What is the difference between a play like "Uncle Vanya" and a merely good play? In the merely good play there are always some characters (frequently all of them) who are pieces of machinery, stepping stones useful in getting the author from one place to another, from one situation to the next. In "Uncle Vanya"—the same thing is true of Chekhov's other plays—each character has a complete life of his own, though we do not see all of it. Each character revolves in the orbit of his own important ego, an orbit pulled into strange shapes by the other characters, but always true to itself. There are some half dozen characters in "Uncle Vanya," and when it is over you feel that you are strangely intimate with each one of them. Not one of them is merely a prop or a springboard for the others. What kind of people they are, how alive, in what a strange atmosphere of despair, tenderness and humor their lives move, is something you must see for yourselves.

"UNCLE VANYA" is the first masterpiece that Jed Harris has tackled. He has never, in his short and gifted career, given us anything that was not interesting. "Spread Eagle," "Broadway," "The Front Page," "The Royal Family," they were all lively and admirable shows. They built up in us a belief that Jed Harris as a director—he was not the sole director of all of them, but certainly the final animating force—had more speed and energy and resourcefulness than any other of our directors.

"The Front Page" was a marvel of pace and volcanic, ribald vigor. But, we asked ourselves, could Jed Harris do anything else? Along came "Serena Blandish," with its slow, perfumed, poisonous, fabulous charm, and proved that he could. It was not quite proof enough, for it was a remarkable stunt rather than a good play.

But now, with "Uncle Vanya," Mr. Harris has reached a point so much higher than any of these earlier ventures that one is tempted to believe that he can do anything. Here, for the first time, he has given us a really great play, and so deep is his understanding and respect for its shadowy moods, its mixtures of comedy and tragedy, its stage full of people so many of whom are more real than the people we know in every day life, that it seems as if it could not have been the same man who did the strong arm, burlesque riot of such things as "The Front Page." For next season he promises us "Othello." It will be one of the most interesting "Othellos" ever shown.

It is always difficult to separate the share of the directors in a production from that of the actors. The better the play, the more difficult does it become. Past experience has shown that American actors—and probably American directors, too— have a tendency to underline the tender feelings of the Russians and make them soft, to exude gloom instead of tragedy, and to wear their souls on their sleeves. There is none of this in Mr. Harris' "Uncle Vanya," which remains, through the tenderest, the most hopeless moments, sane and strong and capable of sudden laughter.

BEFORE the cast of "Uncle Vanya" I am humble and without words to express what they do to the spectator. No lovelier or stranger performance has been shown us this season than that of Lillian Gish's Elena. In her first entrance, and that extraordinary exit that almost immediately follows it, one realizes that here is a very different person, and a very different kind of acting, from the usual. It is not Russian—as is Miss Roos' performance, which seems like something straight from the Moscow Art Theater—nor American, but personal. It is not round and full and brilliant, as Mme. Nazimova might be in the same part, but shy and reserved, and full of small gestures and fleeting shadows of expression that may not, perhaps carry their message beyond the first 10 rows of the audience. And only a small part of it is on the surface—the rest of that Elena, who had such powers of destruction over the men around her, is hidden, secret. In a world so full of actresses who play as if they never forget how many eyes were turned toward them, who reveal everything, give everything, even more than they have, Miss Gish's Elena is a miniature of delicate, sensitive understatement.

Walter Connolly's Uncle Vanya is the triumph of an actor whom I have seen batting around among the lesser comedies for two or three years, with a vigor, a comic energy and an ability to change from role to role which prepared me to see him, one day, in a play that was worth his salt. But I was not prepared to find him as remarkable as he turns out to be in the part of the disappointed Vanya, who has been rusting his talents on a country estate, and gradually turning, and feeling himself helplessly turning, into an oof, a queer fish.

In the case of Osgood Perkins the transformation is much greater. Mr. Perkins has had better parts, in the last few years, than Mr. Connolly, but his range has been more restricted. For a time he seemed doomed always to be a hard-boiled, wise-cracking dynamo, lean and nervous and slangy, and very much model 1930. This hard shell Mr. Perkins, as Astrov, has almost completely peeled, and what specks of "Front Page" nervousness and hardness still cling to him are probably noticeable only to a few people like myself who have seen him in practically every role he has ever played. In the second act he is superb, and in the last scarcely less so, in a very different key.

To Miss Mayhew, as the old nurse, to Mr. Powers as the professor, Mr. Ciannelli as Telegin, Miss Vernon as Mme. Vornitskaya, I can only repeat my thanks for their share in one of the most thoroughly satisfying evenings of this and several other seasons.

Mr. Milziner's share in all this is less noticeable, but no less important, with their extremely fine settings, particularly the setting for the second and third acts. And Rose Caylor (in private life Mrs. Ben Hecht), has given us a translation that is flexible and alive — so flexible that at times this "Uncle Vanya" goes beyond its original and adds to it always with happy effect.

Haydn's 'Creation' Will be Given at Odeon on April 29

The Apollo-Morning Choral Clubs announce as their concert of the present season Josef Haydn's "The Creation," which will be given with orchestral accompaniment at the Odeon on Tuesday evening, April 29, beginning at 8:30 o'clock. The training of the clubs has been under the direction of Charles Galloway, who will likewise direct the performance.

The soloists for the occasion are Katherine Cowan, soprano; Gilbert W. Morris, tenor, and Raymond Koch, baritone.

Thyrsus to Present Capek's Play "R. U. R."

"R. U. R.," Karl Capek's futuristic drama, is to be staged by the Thyrsus Dramatic Society of Washington University, on Friday evening, May 16, at the Shubert Rialto Theater. The play has never been done in St. Louis before. Thyrsus will be remembered for its presentation of "Ten Nights in a Bar Room" last November and also for its production last May of "Liliom."

Ashley L. Bickmore of Country Day School is coaching the production. The play deals with the manufacture of Robots, mechanical men, and the threatened extinction of the human race. H. Robert Shanpaine, the Liliom of last year, has the major role in the coming production. James Lucas, Anne Becker and Roy Kanter are other seasoned actors who are taking part.

Negro Little Theater To Stage Three Plays

The Aldridge Players who represent the "Little Theater Movement" among Negroes in St. Louis will present their second seasonal performance at 8 o'clock next Tuesday evening at the Vashon High School, 3100 Laclede avenue.

The Forest Park Opera

Why Appointments Affecting the Music for This Season Suggest That the Directors May Have Profited From Past Disasters—Something About Max Steindel and Giuseppe Bamboschek —Facts and Figures of Symphonic Music.

By THOMAS B. SHERMAN.

THOUGH the directors of the Municipal Opera did not follow last year's debacle with an immediate plea of confession and avoidance and a promise to do better, their plans for the present season suggests that a rather extensive stock-taking has been going on. For one thing the production of light opera at the big Forest Park Theater, will, for the first time, be ordered in accordance with the ideas of one man—and that one man, moreover, will have the assistance of several department heads so that the immense quantity of detail entailed in any production can be dispatched with something approaching a professional finish.

This will eliminate, let us hope, the possibility of an artistic feud between the musical director and the stage director—one which in the past has resulted in the dancers dancing in one rhythm and the orchestra playing in another.

Another major defeat of past seasons at the Municipal Opera lay in the fact that one set of principals was expected to carry through from the beginning to the end of the season—a plan that will be altered in favor of one that involves a constant freshening of the singing personnel by bringing in new principals from week to week.

The appointments affecting the music of this year's opera have been reassuring thus far. The formation of the orchestra was delegated to Max Steindel, first 'cellist of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, who will occupy a similar position in the Municipal Opera orchestra.

Steindel is a musician of demonstrated skill and artistic sensibilities, who also happens to be a man of wit and tact, as well as a good executive. He has been connected with the musical life of St. Louis for so long that the public may have forgotten that he had a considerable career before he came here.

He was playing the 'cello when he was just a little German boy, 5 years old. With his two brothers and his father, Albin Steindel, he participated in performances of string quartet music given before King Leopold of Belgium, King Ferdinand of Rumania and King William of Wurttemberg. The Steindel quartet also played at Buckingham Palace, and Max is probably the only 'cello player alive today who ever sat on Queen Victoria's lap for the "Widow of Windsor" liked the infant 'cellist well enough to accord him that unusual privilege.

AFTER studying at the Royal Conservatory in Stuttgart, Max, with his two brothers came to this country for a tour. Max finally became solo 'cellist with the Seattle Symphony Orchestra in 1909 under Herbert Hadley and two years later came to St. Louis.

When Steindel was appointed contractor for the orchestra he was told:

"We want the best possible orchestra. We want you to pick the best men available on no other basis than a musical standard."

According to reliable reports Steindel took the directors at their word. The orchestra, it is declared, will be composed almost entirely of men from the Symphony Orchestra.

The directors have also made a good selection in their musical director, Giuseppe Bamboschek, who for years was one of the mainstays of Gatti-Casazza's staff at the Metropolitan in New York. To patrons of the Sunday night concerts at the "Met," Bamboschek has long been a familiar figure. He also conducted operas from time to time—Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Coq d'Or" being one of his specialties.

Bamboschek has had an abundance of just the sort of experience the Municipal Opera needs.

THE announced plan for utilizing the Symphony Orchestra in a series of Municipal Broadcasts next year is a step in the direction of convincing the practical man that symphonic music has a tangible, money-in-the-bank value. Needless to say that process can be carried too far. But for those who wince at the thought of harnessing the music of Gluck and Mozart to a campaign for making St. Louis a bigger and better market place, there should be consolation in the fact that it may result in bigger and better symphony concerts.

When drives for big money are going forward facts and figures seem to be more important than more subtle arguments. Here are a few of both—submitted by the Symphony Society management—which may interest those who would like to know how the St. Louis orchestra compares with those in other cities.

"The difference in the cost of maintaining orchestras throughout the country varies greatly. It ranges from a quarter of a million a year for San Francisco and St. Louis, to nearly a million in the case of New York and Philadelphia.

N. V. A. BENEFIT SHOW

With all theaters in St. Louis co-operating, a benefit performance to aid the fund of the National Vaudeville Artists in a nation-wide drive, a special midnight show will be given at the St. Louis Theater Wednesday, April 30, starting at 11:30 p. m.

Twenty acts will appear at the gala midnight benefit show. The St. Louis will present all its stage acts, including a new and special series of tricks and illusions by the famous magician Blackstone. Ed Lowry is coming over from the Ambassador and is bringing his gang of entertainers. From the Fox Theater Bert Frohman will be in charge of the contingent appearing at that playhouse this week. The Grand Opera House will likewise send over a quintet of vaudeville attractions.

The show promises to be one of the most elaborate special performances of its kind ever staged in St. Louis. Reserved seat tickets are on sale at the Ambassador, Fox, Loew's State, Missouri, Grand Opera House and St. Louis Theater.

Casey Players In "Let Us Be Gay" by Rachel Crothers

ONLY one local playhouse, the Orpheum, is offering stage drama this week. The American Theater is presenting a program of talking pictures, and the Shubert-Rialto is dark.

"Let Us Be Gay," a sophisticated comedy, will be given by the Casey Players at the Orpheum for two weeks, beginning tonight. Incidentally, it is the next to the last production of the stock company's season. The original intention had been to close May 10, but St. Louis has shown such a liking for the company's offerings, as witnessed by box office receipts, that the players have decided to extend their stay for a fortnight with "The Command to Love," as the final play.

After a run of almost a year in New York, "Let Us Be Gay," with the original company, including Francine Larrimore, the star, is now in its thirteenth week in Chicago. Written by Rachel Crothers and produced by John Golden, it deals with the sort of people known as "smart," and, in particular, with a young divorcee and her ex-husband, who lost her by his fooling around but still loves her. Sprightly, amusing dialogue, intrigue, appealing love interest and a happy ending are listed among its attractions.

Mary Hart, as the divorcee, and Pierre Watkin as her former spouse, have the leading roles. In the supporting cast are Raymond Bramley, brought on from New York for the piece; Willard Dashiell, held over from his engagement in "An American Tragedy," and Arthur Pierson, Grace Troy, May B. Hurst, J. James Downing, Helen Blair, Alexander Campbell and Willard S. Robertson, regulars of the Casey group. Miss Lufie Simmons of St. Louis, who played in "The Little Accident," also will have a part.

Cyril Raymond, director, and several of the Casey players, recently spent several days in Chicago observing the performances and completing arrangements by which the play is released for presentation at the Orpheum.

"Across the World With Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson," the first talking picture made by these well-known travelers, is the featured attraction of the program which the American will present twice daily, afternoon and night, for a week, beginning today. The film shows wild life, human and animal, in Africa, and Johnson explains from the screen the various scenes as they are shown. Three Boy Scouts who went to Africa in 1928 also appear in the nine-reel picture. Views of man-eating savages and of the migration of animals are said to be of particular interest.

Baffling Score, But Disconcertingly Old Fashioned Allegory, Mark the Presentation of This Opus Which, Together With Stravinsky's "Sacre du Printemps" in Ballet Form, Makes a Holiday for the Modern Spirit.

By SAMUEL CHOTZINOFF.

NEW YORK, April 26.

ALL the world journeyed to the Metropolitan Opera House last Tuesday night to witness the unveiling of Schoenberg's miniature opera, "Die Gluckliche Hand," and the First American showing but one of the dancing versions of Stravinsky's "Le Sacre du Printemps." Mr. Gatti's circus was a pretty sight, indeed, with the town's best known shirt fronts and evening wraps conspicuous in boxes and orchestra chairs. The assemblage was one to thrill the society editors, the musical and dramatic critics and the plain people. I could spot, even without the aid of an opera glass, Mr. Otto Kahn and Mr. George Gershwin, Mr. Laurence Lagner and Mr. Mamoullian, John Erskine, and president of the Steinways, Miss Florence Vidor and Mrs. Jascha Heifetz, Mr. Toscanini and Mr. Paul Kochanski, Miss Sophie Braslau and Mr. Mischa Levitzki and Miss Anna Duncan and Mrs. Richard Hale and dozens of other leading figures. It was as if one of Mr. Ralph Barton's famous curtains had come to life.

The responsibility for this brilliant turnout may be placed on the shoulders of the Modern Spirit, an emanation that has stalked all artistically-minded persons from the moment that the eighteenth amendment was added to our Constitution. There may have been interest of a sort in the Schoenberg opera, but most of us, I believe, were drawn to the Metropolitan by the prospect of beholding the physical embodiment of Mr. Stravinsky's famous "Rites," a keener approximation of modernism than the more intellectual symbolism of "Die Gluckliche Hand."

This Modern Spirit, in fact, though pledged to symbolism, is more sympathetic to the kind of symbolism that deals with the basic forces of nature, the kind that is explored by Stravinsky in his famous pagan score.

I DO not mean to convey that "Die Gluckliche Hand" meant nothing to us last Tuesday night. The music of it was fascinating in a way, since it was strange and unharmonious, resembled nothing else, and must have been horribly difficult for the performers to learn. That the score held no obvious beauties, no melody, no discernible form stamped it a true enough child of the Modern Spirit. But the story was a disappointment, for its symbolism was so simple that one knew at once what it was all about. It was old fashioned. It took no account of psychology. It held no gropings, conveyed no inhibitions. When the curtain went up on a scene that resembled a fashionable perfumer's window on Fifth Avenue, one of those geometrical decors with sliding panels and many elevations, a Man was observed in the clutch of a bat-like monster and it was two to one that the bat-creature was Circumstance or Destiny or Fate or something equally old fashioned. At the approach of a lithe and acrobatic female, the Man freed himself of his animal-like burden and began making passes at the newcomer, who, it must be said, assumed attitudes of encouragement. This bit of symbolism was easy to unravel. It meant nothing less than sex.

But our hopes for something really interesting presently vanished; for an Elegant Figure emerged from nowhere onto the scene, a male personage dressed in the smart costume of the 1840s, at whose advent the Woman disengaged herself from the Man and clung to the stranger in the violent manner of a Mime.

Disillusioned, the Man entered the jewelry business, another piece of symbolism, which I was able to identify as his achievements in art. Art, however, could not take the place of sex for as soon as the Elegant Stranger discarded the Female (as we knew he eventually would) the Man sought her again, this time with less success than before, for the Woman not only repulsed him but threw a brick after him. The final tableau revealed the Man, as he was at the beginning, in the clutch of the Bat.

A PRETTY conservative allegory for these piping times! At the fall of the curtain we all filed into the lobbies in a perplexed state of mind. On the face of it, it belonged to the dark ages of 20 years ago. On the other hand, it was inconceivable that so sophisticated an artist as Schoenberg could have conceived an Allegory within anybody's comprehension. The glaring discrepancy between the tale and the music cried out for explanation. I, for one, chose to believe that the story was really not as simple as it appeared—that at bottom it was as profoundly baffling as the score, that the Man was the Bat, the Bat the Woman, the Woman the Elegant Stranger, and the Elegant Stranger Schoenberg himself.

Came the "Sacre," a score beloved and reverenced by all who look upon Spring as a phenomenon whose implications go vastly beyond the pleasing effect of carolling birds and nice weather. In the prehistoric world, the advent of Spring, so it is said, was celebrated by the uncultured inhabitants of the world frankly as a season of love. Not of love in the Tennysonian sense, of course. Rather in the Freudian. The pagan holiday mood extended to expressive dances and elemental rites which would, if attempted by New Yorkers at the present moment, incur the censure of Mr. Whalen. So esoteric an art as music can picture orgies of any description without fear of police surveillance, so Stravinsky's orchestral facsimile of the ancient adoration of sex has delighted Manhattanites these many years.

PARIS had long ago been privileged to look upon the Mimetic realization of Stravinsky's music, but it was not until last Tuesday night that New York was so favored. Small wonder, then, that all who were able to spare $10 rushed to the Metropolitan and that all hearts beat as one when the curtains went up and disclosed a primeval landscape, rugged and cheerless, yet rich with a wonderful promise by reason of a few light green blades of grass peeping through crevices between ungainly boulders. Pagans, slightly or over dressed, filled the scene, and enacted the stupendous rites we had been imagining to ourselves for years. In due course, the aboriginal females were carried off unresisting on the backs of aboriginal males.

The males returned and indulged in prehistoric games. Miss Martha Graham, singled out for the conventional sacrifice, danced vehemently and was finally escorted to her significant fate. And through it all, Mr. Stokowski lashed the Philadelphia orchestra into a Pagan fury, while excited patrons stood up in their boxes with eyes glued to opera glasses and the latter glued to the stage. When the curtain fell, we clapped our hands for Mr. Stokowski, his orchestra, the Mimes, the Miss Miss Graham and everyone else connected with the great enterprise. But our applause was really directed at the Modern Spirit which that evening, along about 9:30, had been vouchsafed its fullest expression.

FOREST PARK OPERA PLANS TO ELIMINATE PAST MAJOR DEFECTS

orchestras are it is impossible to say in every case. Detroit has a budget of $406,000, and a deficit of $235,000. Cleveland, a budget of $434,000 and a deficit of $235,000. San Francisco, $253,000 and a deficit of $156,000. The budget of Chicago runs into $383,000, that of Philadelphia is $821,000, while Boston spends $796,000 annually.

"The guarantee fund of the Minneapolis orchestra is $200,000 a year. The deficit of Cincinnati in some years ran as high as $250,000. The gross expenditures for New York in 1928-1929 were $870,000 and this year will run nearly a hundred thousand dollars higher.

"St. Louis' orchestra should not be compared with New York, Philadelphia or Boston, for each of these carries on its pay roll from 30 to 35 more men than does St. Louis. It should be compared with the orchestras of Cincinnati, Cleveland and Detroit, where population and local conditions are much the same. The deficits in Detroit, Cleveland and Cincinnati nearly equal the total expenditures of the St. Louis orchestra. Detroit has a 28-week season, Cleveland and Cincinnati a 30-week season. Their orchestras are also larger. Detroit has 87 men, Cleveland 93 and Cincinnati 94. St. Louis has a 23-week season and an orchestra of 78."

creetly chosen adjectives. The weekly and monthly magazines of supposedly highbrow tendency have taken up the praise. John Barrymore's return to light comedy has, in short, taken on the nature of a triumph. But that was on Broadway and, as one of the local theater owners was most careful to point out, St. Louis is not New York.

So you may see "The Man From Blankley's" and you may not. But if only the women's clubs and the innumerable leagues and societies that are so keen on assailing immorality and vice in the movies would mobilize for a positive attack on behalf of intelligent pictures—the occasional intelligent pictures that come along—it might conceivably have some effect. And what a pleasant change such a positive attitude on the part of our various boards of morals and what not would seem.

BEHIND THE SCREENS

HOLLYWOOD, April 26.

BILLIE DOVE and Sidney Blackmer, getting ready to eat a meal in front of the camera, asked their director, William Beaudine, what they should say since no dialog had been written for the scene.

"Just make believe you're at home and eat without talking," said Beaudine.

A few words and two signatures on a brown paper bag form one of the most momentous contracts in Hollywood.

First, it joins two friends, Al Jolson and Joe Schenck, in the business of making motion pictures; secondly, it guarantees Jolson considerably more than $2,000,000 during the next two years, and thirdly, it indirectly prevented what would have been Hollywood's biggest studio merger.

The paper sack contract will become efgfective in a few weeks, as soon as Jolson finishes the last of five pictures for Warner Bros. Jolson probably would have been working for Schenck long ago, but the Warners, pioneers in the talkie field, obtained his services when sound was in an experimental stage.

Three years ago Jolson starred in the first highly successful talking picture, "The Singing Fool" Schenck, head of United Artists, did not enter into talkie production until the Warners and others had proved it was more than a passing fancy.

More than a year ago Schenck told Jolson, his friend of many years, that he would like to have him make United Artists pictures. Jolson's Warner contract then had some time to run but he agreed to join Schenck after its expiration.

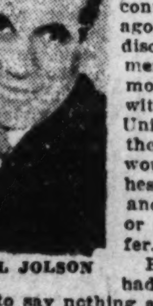
SO the contract was written on the brown bag, the only piece of paper available on the sun porch of a resort where Jolson and Schenck were vacationing.

The producer agreed to pay the actor $500,000 for each one of four pictures, to be made in two years' time.

In addition, Jolson is to get 30 per cent of the profits from each!



AL JOLSON

Had the Warners known of the existence of the Jolson - Schenck contract a year ago when they discussed the merger of their movie interests with those of United Artists, they probably would not have hesitated to add another million or so to their offer.

But Schenck had promised Jolson to say nothing about the valuable sack and the deal fell through. The United Artists interests, with Jolson the money-maker as an added attraction, would easily have been worth a million, or even more, to them.

Maurice Chevalier is always in a hurry.

John Boles first tells interviewers when and where he was born.

Conrad Nagel seems more methodical than most actors.

Despite her dizzy blonde characterizations, Alice White possesses a business mind that is almost wholly responsible for her success.

Harold Lloyd likes to tell about not being recognized when he doesn't wear his "prop" glasses.

Neil Hamilton, who once studied for the priesthood, likes religious discussions.

Laurel and Hardy always seem to be in character.

Lupe Velez doesn't swear as much as we've been led to believe.

Gary Cooper is flattered when Grinnell (Iowa) college classmates look him up.

John Barrymore's favorite story is about the time Arthur Brisbane fired him from a New York newspaper for being late with a cartoon.

Colleen Moore, like Clara Bow, is "lost" when she doesn't have to get up early to go to the studio.

George Arliss always wears a monocle.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, April 27.

SOME things I would never do again:

Fly from London to Paris.

Begin using tobacco or alcoholic liquor.

Try to make a living writing poetry.

Be a press agent for Flo Ziegfeld.

Pay a $5 cover charge.

Befriend an unscrupulous woman.

Believe a ticket speculator.

Step off a moving street car.

Sit up all night playing poker.

Bet on a sure-thing horse race.

Buy anything for investment save a Government or municipal bond.

Attend an electrocution.

Rent a house in France.

Be a spectator at a bull fight.

Answer the telephone after midnight.

Spend a week-end in a guest room of a country home.

Snap my fingers at a waiter.

Lie about my age.

Talk back to a motorcycle cop.

Eat onion soup for breakfast.

Try to get a laundry to replace a lost shirt.

Be a dramatic critic.

Trust the proprietor of a dog shop.

Gaze down from the top of the Woolworth Tower.

Visit the interior of Mexico.

Lisle Bell and Donald Ogden Stewart were schoolmates in Columbus, O. "We sang off the same song book and often off the same key," Bell observed.

Katharine Cornell again triumphs in one of those stagey and throaty roles. Miss Cornell seems annually unfortunate in her choice of plays and is continually cast to poison or shoot some faithless lover, but she does it so superbly the play doesn't matter. She is a grand artist.

A gentleman who was the victim of two unjust shakedowns in three months paid because in a spasm of foolish frenzy he wished to protect an innocent person. This was against the advice of lawyers and friends. But the fear of publicity was too great. Since then he learned the extortionist's reputation had been placed before editors and not a newspaper or press association intended to give exploitation to the injustice. The gentleman now spends spare moments sneaking up alleys to kick himself.

Short shavings: Herb Roth, the artist, prints everything he writes. . . . Katharine Cornell was born in Germany. . . . Wallace Irwin rents a room from his gardener to work in. . . . Elisabeth Cobb paid all her expenses at Reno by writing special articles about that city. . . . Ed C. Hill and Martin Greene are regarded as Park Row's two best reporters. . . . Fifteen theatrical press agents are "at liberty." . . . . Albert Payson Terhune has a useless right hand from writer's cramps. . . . Milt Gross is often taken for Charles Chaplin. . . . Tallulah Bankhead went abroad because of a Broadway snub and became London's favorite American actress. . . . Edgar Selwyn always tells critics in advance what he thinks of his new productions. . . . And when he praises them they generally click. . . . Ed Wynn's last name is Leopold. . . . Otto Kahn's favorite dessert is lemon meringue pie. . . . Anne Green, who wrote "The Selbys," is the sister of Julian Green, also a celebrated young author. . . . Miss Dimple Chinn lives in Kansas City. . . . As does Iona Ford. . . . And Salina, Kan., reports Miss Ura Crowe. . . . A swell book: "Seven Horizons," by Charles J. Finger (Doubleday-Doran). . . . Mae West has reduced 64 pounds. . . . Bluch Landorf, the famous circus clown, spends his winters in Rahway, N. J., and neighbors think he is a traveling salesman. . . . Eva La Gallienne has worn the same fur coat for 14 years. . . . She believes it is lucky. . . . Gene Buck, perhaps the most typical Broadwayite, is deeply religious.

It appears to many of us that too much exploitation of film stars who have turned from their sins and seek another chance. We all applaud their redemption, but after all they had their big opportunity and there are many who have not taken the Hollywood route who seek a place in the cinema heavens.

Network Programs Advanced

Change Caused by New York Going on Daylight Saving Time Becomes Effective Today—KSD and KFUO Readjust Their Schedules—KMOX and KWK Chain Broadcasts Also Affected.

Network programs on KSD, KWK and KMOX wil lbe advanced an hour, beginning today, due to daylight saving time going into effect in New York. The result is that schedules of all the St. Louis stations have had to be materially rearranged.

KSD and KFUO are most affected, because of the time-sharing arrangement between them. Sundays, KSD will be on the air from 12:30 noon to 2 o'clock, then from 4 to 9:15 p. m., while KFUO will use the periods from 8:30 a. m. to 12:30 noon, 2:30 to 4, and 9:15 to 10:45 p. m.

A change of importance puts KSD on the air daily, except Saturday and Sunday, from 1 to 3 p. m. instead of 1:45 to 3 o'clock, and again from 4 to 5:30 instead of 3:45 to 5:30. KSD will be able to broadcast dance music late three nights—Monday, from 10 to 11 o'clock; Friday from 9 to 11, and Saturday from 10 to 11 o'clock.

KFUO's daily daytime schedule is 7:15 to 8 a. m.; 12:15 noon to 12:40 and 3 to 3:40, except that on Thursday the afternoon period will be from 4 to 4;40. KFUO's night schedule follows: Monday, 9 to 10 o'clock; Tuesday and Wednesday, 9:30 to 10:30; Thursday and Friday, 7:30 to 8 o'clock, and Saturday, 9 to 10 o'clock. Three KFUO programs will have to be discontinued—the Students' Chapel Devotions, the Wednesday night "Near to midnight Gospel Hour," and the Children's Hour. "Mr. White and Mr. Gray," who have done a weekly dialog over KFUO, will broadcast for the last time Wednesday, at 9:30 p. m.

One result of the time change will be that there will be good KSD programs from 6 to 7 o'clock in the evening. Also, a number of chain programs on KMOX and KWK that have been broadcast between 7 to 8 o'clock will be shifted to the 6-7 o'clock period.

As WIL does not carry programs from any of the three great networks organizations, its program schedules will be little affected.

All the Mid-West stations which devote all or part time to broadcasting network programs will be affected in the same way, as there is now a two-hour difference in time between New York and St. Louis.

Radio Speech Rights Made Issue in Vote Fight in Washington

By MARTIN CODEL,

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—More than local significance attaches to the controversy in the District of Columbia over the refusal of certain stations to lend their facilities for speeches opposing suffrage for the voteless residents of the capital.

Because those stations have repeatedly permitted pro-suffrage speeches to go on the air, the opponents of the franchise for the District of Columbia—and they are a lusty lot—insist that they should be accorded equal privileges before the microphone. The "anti" group say that "it is the spirit of Clause 18 of the radio act that opposing political views shall have equal radio opportunity."

The equal opportunity clause of the radio law now reads that "if any licensee (or station owner) shall permit any person who is a legally qualified candidate for any public office to use a broadcasting station, he shall afford equal opportunity for all other such candidates for that office in the use of such broadcasting station."

Little or no trouble has heretofore been experienced over violations or alleged violations of this provision, not even when the seething maelstrom of national politics was at its hottest. The chains and the individual stations during the 1928 campaign turned over their wave length facilities—at generous fees, of course—to all candidates on an equal basis. In local and sectional political campaigns, they sometimes follow the course of declining to broadcast the speeches of any candidates, though not very often.

Network Programs Advanced

Change Caused by New York Going on Daylight Saving Time Becomes Effective Today—KSD and KFUO Readjust Their Schedules—KMOX and KWK Chain Broadcasts Also Affected.

Network programs on KSD, KWK and KMOX wil lbe advanced an hour, beginning today, due to daylight saving time going into effect in New York. The result is that schedules of all the St. Louis stations have had to be materially rearranged.

KSD and KFUO are most affected, because of the time-sharing arrangement between them. Sundays, KSD will be on the air from 12:30 noon to 2 o'clock, then from 4 to 9:15 p. m., while KFUO will use the periods from 8:30 a. m. to 12:30 noon, 2:30 to 4, and 9:15 to 10:45 p. m.

A change of importance puts KSD on the air daily, except Saturday and Sunday, from 1 to 3 p. m. instead of 1:45 to 3 o'clock, and again from 4 to 5:30 instead of 3:45 to 5:30. KSD will be able to broadcast dance music late three nights—Monday, from 10 to 11 o'clock; Friday from 9 to 11, and Saturday from 10 to 11 o'clock.

KFUO's daily daytime schedule is 7:15 to 8 a. m.; 12:15 noon to 12:40 and 3 to 3:40, except that on Thursday the afternoon period will be from 4 to 4:40. KFUO's night schedule follows: Monday, 9 to 10 o'clock; Tuesday and Wednesday, 9:30 to 10:30; Thursday and Friday, 7:30 to 8 o'clock, and Saturday, 9 to 10 o'clock. Three KFUO programs will have to be discontinued—the Students' Chapel Devotions, the Wednesday night "Near to midnight Gospel Hour," and the Children's Hour. "Mr. White and Mr. Gray," who have done a weekly dialog over KFUO, will broadcast for the last time Wednesday, at 9:30 p. m.

One result of the time change will be that there will be good KSD programs from 6 to 7 o'clock in the evening. Also, a number of chain programs on KMOX and KWK that have been broadcast between 7 to 8 o'clock will be shifted to the 6-7 o'clock period.

As WIL does not carry programs from any of the three great networks organizations, its program schedules will be little affected.

All the Mid-West stations which devote all or part time to broadcasting network programs will be affected in the same way, as there is now a two-hour difference in time between New York and St. Louis.

Radio Speech Rights Made Issue in Vote Fight in Washington

By MARTIN CODEL,
Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—More than local significance attaches to the controversy in the District of Columbia over the refusal of certain stations to lend their facilities for speeches opposing suffrage for the voteless residents of the capital.

Because those stations have repeatedly permitted pro-suffrage speeches to go on the air, the opponents of the franchise for the District of Columbia—and they are a lusty lot—insist that they should be accorded equal privileges before the microphone. The "anti" group say that "it is the spirit of Clause 18 of the radio act that opposing political views shall have equal radio opportunity."

The equal opportunity clause of the radio law now reads that "if any licensee (or station owner) shall permit any person who is a legally qualified candidate for any public office to use a broadcasting station, he shall afford equal opportunity for all other such candidates for that office in the use of such broadcasting station."

Little or no trouble has heretofore been experienced over violations or alleged violations of this provision, not even when the seething maelstrom of national politics was at its hottest. The chains and the individual stations during the 1928 campaign turned over their wave length facilities—at generous fees, of course—to all candidates on an equal basis. In local and sectional political campaigns, they sometimes follow the course of declining to broadcast the speeches of any candidates, though not very often.

The anti-suffrage group in the District of Columbia complain that persistent efforts to obtain time on the air, even for replies to speeches made in furtherance of the suffrage campaign, have been balked. M. A. Leese, owner of one of the two major radio stations in Wash-

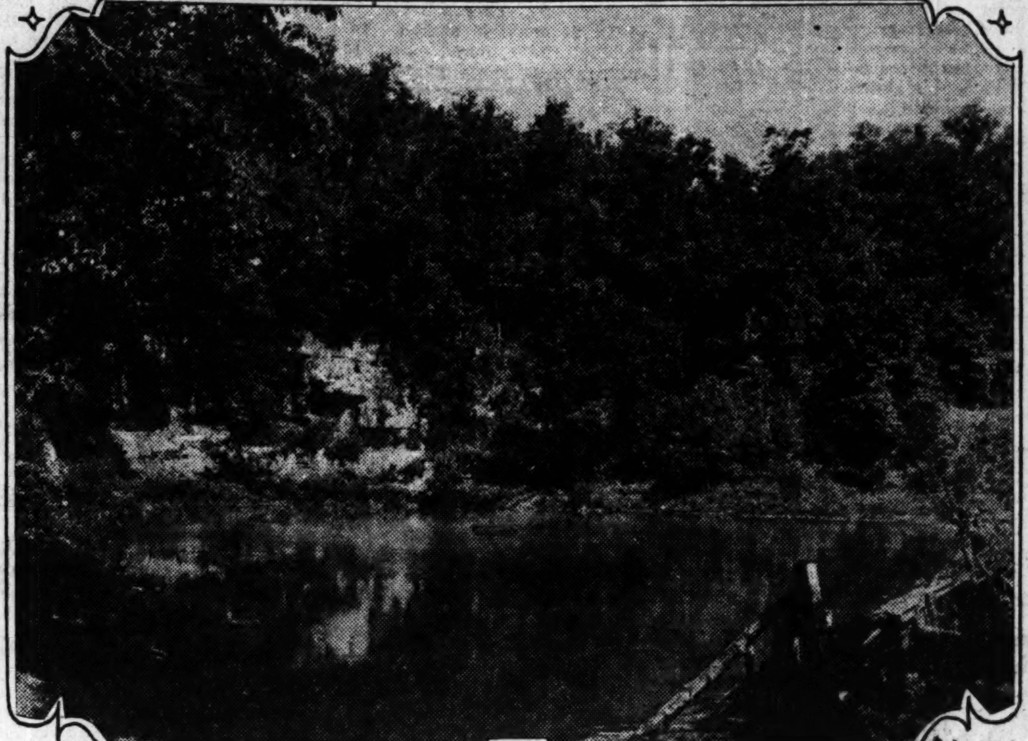
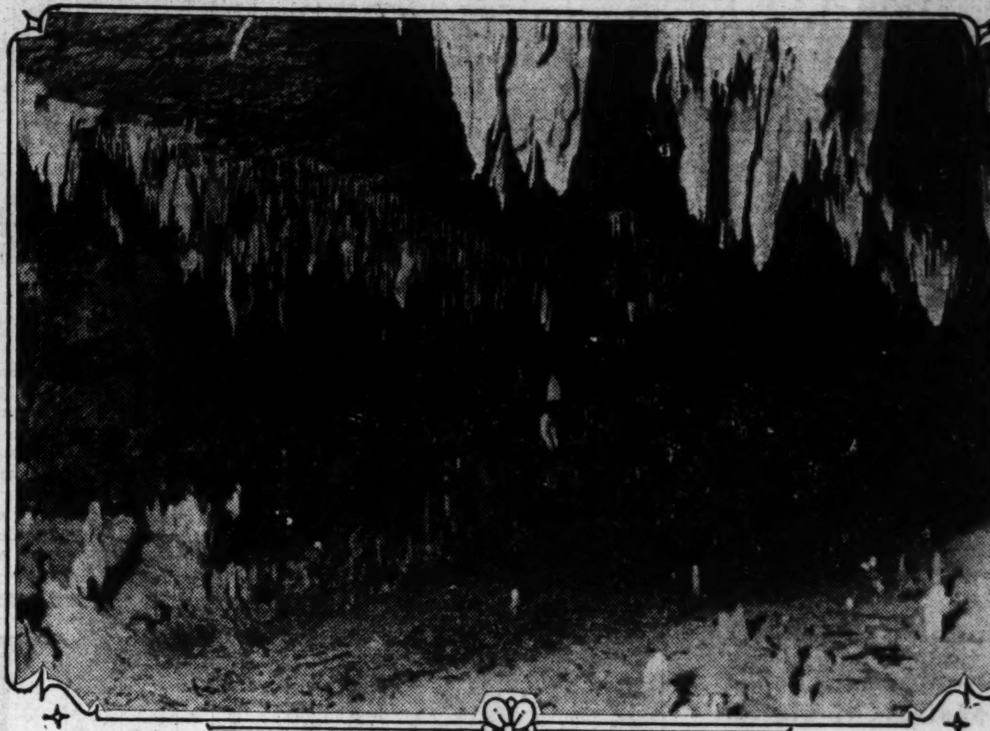
Grotesquely Beautiful Formations Greet Explorers of the Ozarks' Cavelands



TYPICAL of the region in Southern Missouri where natural caverns have been formed in the bluffs along streams and canyons, is this view of a bank of the Jack's Fork of the Current River, in Shannon County, near U. S. Highway 60. A cave entrance may be discerned.



ONE of the better known caves is Onyx Cave in Meramec State Park, near Sullivan, Mo. The Park is within a couple of hours of St. Louis by automobile, the motorist taking U. S. 66, a continuation of the Manchester Road. The stalactite formation pictured often assumes weird shapes and forms.

Kurenko and Schipa on KSD

Marilyn Miller Billed for Next Saturday Night—New Features—Voters' Service Back on Tuesdays—Hymn Sing on KSD Thursdays.

Two stars of opera and a playlet in which Verdi, the composer, will be the principal figure, will be heard over KSD this week. The singers are Marie Kurenko, the Russian soprano, who is billed for tomorrow night, and Tito Schipa, leading tenor of the Chicago Opera, who will broadcast Thursday night. Julian Oliver, Astrid Fjelde and Carolyn Andrews, "The Lark," are to have the singing roles in the Verdi program.

A new Sign of the Shell program is set for tomorrow evening on KSD, and the same station will give this part of the country its first chance to hear the Midweek Church Federation Hymn Sing program, every Thursday evening.

The Voters' Service broadcasts, which KSD carried at one time, will return on that station at 5 o'clock Tuesday evening. A new Crush Dry program is to be broadcast by KWK at 8:30 Tuesday night.

President Hoover's address before the United States Chamber of Commerce at Washington will be broadcast over KSK, KWK and KMOX and all chain stations between 8:30 and 9 o'clock next Thursday night. All other network programs are to be canceled to make way for this broadcast.

The opening night baseball game of the Western League, between the Des Moines and Wichita teams, will be broadcast from the ball park in Des Moines next Friday night over an NBC chain that will include KSD and possibly KWK. Play is to begin at 8:45 p. m, and the chain broadcast is to start at 10 o'clock. This will be the first broadcast of a ball game played after dark with artificial lighting. The field will be illuminated by lights of a total capacity of 46,000,000 candle power mounted on six towers each 96 feet high. Judge Landis, President Barnard of the American League and other baseball notables will attend the game.

Marilyn Miller and Walter Damrosch will be the particular stars Saturday night—both on KSD.

Mme. Kurenko is to sing in a General Motors concert over KSD at 7:30 tomorrow night. She is programmed for six songs, including the "Hymn of the Sun," from Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Le Coq d'Or," and the "famous "Song of India" and the "Berceuse" from the same composer's "Sadko." All the other music announced for this concert is by Rimsky-Korsakoff, orchestral numbers including the Dance of the Tumblers from "The Snow Maiden"; the Fandango from the "Capriccio Espagnole"; the Flight of the Bumble Bee from "Tsar Saltan," and the march from the "Antar" symphony.

The Sign of the Shell broadcast is slated for 8:30 over KSD, and will come from the NBC's Chicago studios. The living room in the home of a cultured music lover will be the locale, Sen Kaney playing the role of the connoisseur. Adolphe Dumont's orchestra will carry the bulk of the program. Three canaries, said to have been trained for this particular broadcast; a real Chinese valet and a Negro butler will have parts. In addition, a noted male quartet and Chauncey Parsons, tenor, will be heard in the opening program, which will be sponsored by the Shell Petroleum Corporation and Shell Eastern Petroleum Products, Inc.

Events in the life of Abraham Lincoln will be dramatized in an American School of the Air broadcast over the Columbia chain Tuesday afternoon.

The dramatization of events in Verdi's life will come in the Eveready period at 7 o'clock Tuesday evening over KSD.

The dramatization will open with a scene in the composer's room at the La Scala Opera in Milan. The audience has just heard the

Big Stations Shift Reported Deferred For 90-Day Period

KMOX Among Those That Will Not Have to Change Wave Lengths on May 1.

Decision by the Federal Radio Commission at the last minute to extend for 90 days the order shifting a number of cleared channel stations because of appeals to the courts by WHAS, KYW and WHAM, will affect KMOX, which was to have been moved on May 1 from 1080 to 1110 kilocycles. WTAM, Cleveland, is another station coming under the order.

WHAS has been particularly aggrieved because the order shifted it from the excellent wave length of 820 kilocycles, to make room for WCAU, Philadelphia, Pa., to the 1020-kc. wave. KYW, required to give up the 1020-channel and take one still lower down in the wave band, and also to take the recognized status of using a channel "borrowed" from another zone, sought an injunction order.

Virtually none of the changes could be made unless all went into effect.

Recurring threats against the present method of broadcasting on cleared channels with high power will not be resolved into action, if at all, until after Federal Radio Commission has held the conference with the radio supervisors in Washington the coming week and has digested the information gathered from them. Future commission policies are expected to be decided largely on what is recommended by the supervisors.

Since the cleared channel stations are the leaders in this country, the decision to be made by the commission will have far-reaching consequences. More wave length shifts or addition of stations on channels now used exclusively inevitably means that radio listeners must again bear with the inconvenience of finding new dial settings for their favorite stations.

As most of the radio supervisors are engineers, they are expected to favor high power and, possibly retention of most of the cleared channels.

The Auto Industry in Detroit

Some of the Facts Regarding Output and Unemployment; Process of Readjustment Under Way.

By MARC BRAUN,
A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

DETROIT, Mich., April 26.—Slowly but surely the automobile industry is being readjusted, rearranged, one might say, in line with a new policy of production and employment. The process has just commenced, but within a year it may be said that the American automobile industry will be functioning much as is the industry in Europe.

Manufacturers, while not going into much detail, want it known that they are working in unison and that the old idea of mass production during about half the year, and then steadily decreasing output and subsequent laying off of men, is going out of style. It is recognized that the only way to keep the automobile industry in a prosperous condition from now on is to operate it on stabilized principles which will permit of all-year employment of a regular force, doing away with the necessity of hiring extra workers during seasonal rush periods.

The alarming unemployment situation, rather than any decrease in profits, led to this readjustment. It is well known that thousands and thousands of automobile workers in Detroit and most other cities in Michigan where motor cars are made, have been out of work for a longer period than ever before. Some who have been "regulars" for years say they have been waiting six months, even a year, to be called back.

One employment manager of a large factory said to me the other day: "The sight of some of these men who used to be our steady and regular workers, and who have been out of work for so long they are actually 'down and out,' makes me wish for a readjustment that will prevent such long periods of enforced idleness. It would mean that fewer men would be on the payrolls during the big months, but on the other hand it would mean steady employment. I am sure such a system would aid the manufacturer, for the men would have more confidence in the company and would give better service. This probably would also mean a more stabilized scale of wages and less inducement for men to leave for some other job with the prospect of higher pay."

The other day I went to Dearborn and talked with some of the Ford employes. One said: "I am working again and thank God for it. I was out of work eight months and couldn't get anything. The only thing that kept me from starving was odd-job work. For two years I worked for Ford, and used my savings to buy a house. But you can't eat a house.

"You will find that the majority of Ford workers are accustomed to spend money freely. But they won't do it from now on."

I asked him how many days a week he worked. He said sometimes three and less often five days.

A bulletin of the Michigan Department of Labor and Industries shows a gradual gain in employment and payroll averages during March as compared with the period from Dec. 1 to Feb. 28. This is a natural result of betterment of weather conditions and expansion of retail sales.

Rights of Back Seat Driver.

According to a recent decision of the Missouri Court of Appeals, it is impossible to lay down fixed rules by which to determine just when an automobile should be driven from the rear seat. The courts all agree, however, that a passenger or guest in an automobile must use ordinary care for his own safety and when this requires that he call the attention of the driver to approaching danger, he must do it, or be open to the charge of contributory negligence.

More than 120,000 passenger and commercial vehicles crossed the new Ambassador bridge to Windsor, Canada, in March.

Few Minor Requirements Need Be Met by Tourists.

Visitors to Germany may this year enjoy the novel experience of "driving themselves" by automobile over the scenic highways of that country. Americans can rent a car at the ship's side as it docks in Bremen or Hamburg and tour on to Berlin, to the Rhine Valley, to the world-famous health and pleasure resort, Baden-Baden, or to the Passion Play at Oberammergau. Of if the party is using Paris as a starting point for Oberammergau, the most direct route is via Strasbourg, that quaint city near the Rhine, thence to Baden-Baden in the beautiful Black Forest, and on to Munich, where a music and drama festival will be held this summer.

The only requirements for obtaining a "drive yourself" car in Germany is a driver's license issued by the country in which the tourist resides; a translation of the license, legalized by the German consulate and two passport photos. Upon presentation of these documents, an international driver's license, good for most continental countries, may be issued within 24 hours. No special road test is required, but the driver must be acquainted with German traffic regulations, which are similar to American rules.

A unique feature of the service is that a car may be rented in Berlin and left at the driver's destination, such as Munich. The rates are reasonable, ranging from 25 pfennig a kilometer (9½ cents a mile) for two-passenger cars, to 45 pfennig a kilometer (17 cents a mile) for the larger machines. Chauffeurs may be hired for 20 marks a day (about $4.76). The German roads are considered among the best in Europe. There are no speed limits except in the towns and cities, where it is 25 kilometers an hour, but this is liberal enough, it seems, as it equals 40 miles an hour in America.

Thousands of Caverns Along Ozark Trails

It Is Becoming a Popular Sport With Motorists to Explore These Natural Phenomena, Described as Being of Almost as Much Interest as the Scenic Wonders of the Hills Themselves.

THE underworld of the Ozarks is almost as interesting as its miles of beautiful tree-clad hills and swift, winding streams. There are said to be 100,000 caverns in the peculiarly formed Ozark uplift which are sufficiently large and interesting to invite exploration.

It is an increasingly popular summer sport to visit these caves. The State is encouraging explorations in State parks. Private cave owners also are inviting visits.

The cave country lies along the main highways leading out from St. Louis and there is scarcely a town from Sullivan to Springfield or south from Rolla to the Arkansas line that does not have a cave or two in its vicinity as an attraction to motorists.

Scientists who have made explorations say there is evidence that many of the Ozark subterranean chambers were inhabited by aboriginal peoples. Tens of thousands of years have elapsed, but it has been only recently that investigation of their characteristics commenced on a large and scientific scale.

Conversion of the Ozarks into a summer playground has made cave exploring a popular pastime.

12 Caves in Meramec Park.

In Meramec State Park, two miles from Sullivan, on U. S. Highway 66, are 12 enormous caves. These holes in the hills are even now filled with deposits of onyx, copper, iron, lead and other minerals. In some are deposits of aluminum and highly colored clay used in pottery making. Even gold and silver in small quantities have been found, and thousands of silver dollars were believed to have been cached in the caves around Sullivan about the time of the Civil War when the Price raiders invaded that section.

To explore the caves of Meramec State Park would require several days and the services of a competent guide. Sprinkle's Bluff cave, lying beside the Meramec, can be entered only at low water period by diving under a bluff. The Dill brothers, who live in the State park, were guided there by rumbling noises. They were in the cave five hours and found three rooms with dazzling white limestone walls and a lake in which were blind fish. Fisher's cave is the largest in the park and is a succession of large passages and chambers. One of these is the ballroom where in 1868 Gov. Fletcher held his inaugural ball. This room is 150 feet long, 300 feet wide and 30 feet high and is one-half mile from the cave entrance.

Onyx Cave, under Lone Mountain, goes back 2200 feet and has rooms with walls 115 feet high lined with brown and purple onyx. Formerly a lake hid the entrance to this cave, but it was drained and the cave explored. Onyx in this cave was used for interior decoration on a large office building in St. Louis a number of years ago. Eddy Cave, about 600 feet deep, was once the home of Indian pottery makers and quantities of clay dishes, tomahawks and arrow heads have been found therein.

Small Geyser in One Cave.

There is a cave on the Meramec River near Steelville in which is a deep walled spring. The water boils up in the basin 15 feet across. It creates a small geyser. Extra heavy weights are required to sink the hook to a depth of eight or 10 feet in this cavern water hole, but as a rule fishermen who enter Fishing cave have good success in their angling. The spring is well stocked with perch.

In Camden County along the Niangua is a cave community. There are Island cave, Counterfeiters' cave, so named because it was the rendezvous of a band of spurious money-makers; Bear cave in which the last bear in that neighborhood was killed; Robbers' cave, which suggests its own christening, and Onyx cave, abounding in the beautiful dripping decorative art of the Ozarks' underworld. Here is also the Devil's fireplace, which has room for a whole pine tree, and the Red Sinks drink in the hardest floods without apparent outlet.

On Gravois Creek, in Morgan County, a district soon to be popular with tourists due to completion of new highways, and Osage Lake, is Cave Mills, which forms a complete tunnel 1500 feet through the hills, with walls, roof and floor of rock. If railroad engineers had planned it, the job would not have been more perfect. Price's cave in

L. P. Hambuechen New Distributer Of Franklin Cars

Former Ford Dealer Heads Central States Motors, 3145 Locust.

Another major change along automobile row took place last week with the formation of Central States Motors, headed by L. P. Hambuechen, veteran St. Louis automobile man, to take over the distribution of Franklin automobiles in this territory.

The new company has leased the building at 3145 Locust street, formerly occupied by the Benjamin Motor Co., local Stutz distributor, and will remodel it to suit their needs. This structure, two stories in height, contains approximately 25,000 square feet of floor space, is one of the most pretentious along the row, and has adequate room for service facilities. The entire front half of the street floor, Hambuechen said, will be used for the display of new passenger cars, while the rear section will be utilized for emergency service and minor repairs. The second floor will house the shops.

For the time being the building will also house used cars. Central States Motors, however, starts out with no used cars in stock. In the course of a few months a used car establishment will doubtless be set up

Hambuechen has had 18 years of experience in the automobile business in St. Louis, the first 10 of which were spent as a salesman. For three years he operated a company that handled Paige and Jewett cars, on South Grand boulevard. For the next seven years he was a partner in the Bray-Hambuechen Motor Co., 5127 Delmar boulevard, which held a Ford franchise.

He expressed himself as being well pleased with the 1930 line of Franklin cars, which features an airplane type motor and an extremely modern stream-lined appearance.

Joseph N. Kellerman, factory representative of the Franklin Automobile Co. of Syracuse, N. Y., will continue to have his headquarters in St. Louis, at least for a few months. Charles Parks, wholesale supervisor for the Western United States, also will continue here.

Most of the personnel of the service as well as other departments of the Franklin agency here, which has been operating at 3949 Lindell boulevard, will be retained by Hambuechen, he said. Announcement of the selection of department heads will be made within a week or two.

The Central States Motors will act as Franklin distributer in Eastern Missouri, Southern Illinois and Western Kentucky.

Automobile Said To Be Functioning As 'Home-Maker'

BOSTON, Mass., April 26.—The automobile is actually becoming known more as a "home-maker," than a "home-breaker," in the opinion of Prof. H. Augustin Smith, of Boston University, who has just completed plans for the fifth world-wide anniversary of "Home Dedication day."

"It is permitting people to build anywhere, instead of keeping them near the corner grocery and drug store," continued Prof. Smith. "The incentive to buy is strong today, because the automobile provides a chance to purchase where real estate is more reasonable, and a vista of lawn or countryside is quite likely to be thrown in with the sale."

Taxis Run 20,000 Miles Without Shock Absorber Service

Many inquiries have been received from taxi-cab companies regarding the new Gabriel triple-vane hydraulic shock absorber, since a Cleveland taxi company reported that no adjustments were needed on the vehicles in its fleet following 20,000 miles of service, according to H. C. Merry, 3920 Lindell boulevard, local distributer.

"Taxi-cabs must ride smoothly or they will not be patronized," Marry said. "For this reason, companies operating fleets of cars for hire are careful to have the best of equipment, including shock absorbers."

Branch Manager Of De Soto Moves Offices on Grand

W. T. Dunkin, zone manager here of the De Soto Motor Corporation, announces that he has moved his offices from the Missouri Theater Building to No. 1907 Central Life Insurance Building, Grand boulevard and Olive street. The new building rises to a height of 23 stories and is the most recent addition to the Grand-Olive section.

A considerable increase in the business handled by the zone manager's office made the change necessary, according to Dunkin.

Lasker Appoints Used Car Head

Appointment of W. H. Peters as manager of the used car department is announced by Lasker Motors, Inc., 5201 Delmar boulevard, hrysler-Plymouth dealer. The company maintains its used car department ata 3128 Locust street. Peters has had many years of experience with Chrysler dealers, in the sale both of new and used cars.

150 Local Garage Owners Organize, Join Parent Body

More than 150 local garage owners, meeting recently, formed an organization which will be affiliated with the National Garage Owners' Association. P. Harvey Reis was elected president; Meril Ogden, vice president; Henry W. Meyer, treasurer, and A. H. Kollmer, secretary.

P. H. REIS.

The purpose of the organization is to stabilize the business, keep down frauds, raise the standards of service and join in a national advertising movement. Every owner of a motor car is invited to take his machine to any of the member garages and receive a free inspection. Skilled mechanics with special tools and equipment are provided for the convenience of the public. Rates are said to be the lowest in the industry on many service operations.

An Interesting Fact.

Because they were quizzed about their age when applying for drivers' licenses, many women in Butte, Mont., have foregone the pleasure of motoring rather than reveal this vital information.

Post-Dispatch Highway Maps Made Available

THE Resort and Travel Bureau of the Post-Dispatch has for distribution an excellent 50-page auto trails atlas of the United States and Eastern Canada, showing the condition and numbers of highways and mileage between towns. The price is 50 cents and 60 cents, if mailed.

St. Louis and vicinity maps show all towns, roads, rivers, streams, lakes and other details within a radius of 50 miles of St. Louis. They sell for 20 cents, 24 cents if mailed. Individual State maps are 10 cents, and 12 cents mailed.

City guides giving the location of streets and street car and bus lines, churches, hospitals, theaters, office buildings and containing a map of the city, sell for 25 and 30 cents.

Maps of St. Louis and the suburbs, showing the streets of St. Louis, East St. Louis, Madison, Venice, Clayton, Ferguson, Kirkwood, Webster Groves and University City, sell for 40 and 45 cents.

Lambert-Tigges Has Used Car Department

The Lambert-Tigges Motor Co., 4035 Lindell boulevard, announces the opening of a used car store and lot at 5870 Easton avenue. W. I. McKelvey is used car manager of the company.

Cadillac Prepares To Manufacture Marine Engines

The Cadillac Motor Car Co., according to a statement by its president, Lawrence P. Fisher, plans to offer its line of engines for marine purposes.

"In addition to our motor car business we now find ourselves being drawn into the allied lines of air and water transportation," Fisher said.

"Some form of the V-type engine seems most suited for marine and air purposes, and our manufacturing program of the future calls for engines of this type only. We have never considered a departure from the V-type engine nor do we contemplate so doing.

"Heretofore, our manufacturing capacity has just kept pace with the growth of our motor car business. However, after a program of continuous expansion, extending over a period of five years, the plants of the Cadillac company are, for the present at least, ample in every respect."

Blees Promoted To Vice Presidency Of Oakland Motor

The appointment of W. A. Blees as vice president in charge of sales of the Oakland Motor Car Co., to succeed W. R. Tracy, resigned, is announced by A. R. Glancy, president.

Blees joined the Oakland organization Jan. 6 as assistant general sales manager is charge of dealer accounting and management. Less than two months later, he became sales manager and now assumes full charge of the extensive Oakland-Pontiac selling organization.

The new vice president has had wide experience in automotive merchandising. Before joining Oakland he was president of the Motor Accounting Co., a subsidiary of General Motors. Prior to that, he was for five years associated with the sales and financial departments of the Chevrolet Motor Co. His thorough knowledge of the sales and financial problems of automobile retailers had been gained through close personal contact with many thousands of dealers in every section of the United States.

Expect Meyer an To Start in Big

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., April 26.—Speed and thrills!

These are the elements that will form the chief attraction for the many thousands of persons who will witness the International 500-mile automobile race at the Motor Speedway in Indianapolis on May 30. It will be the eighteenth annual running of the classic and is designated by Europe as "the American Grand Prize."

The fastest American and European cars will be entered and a great race is anticipated. The American defense against foreign invasion of the speedway racing laurels are built around two daredevils—Louis Meyer and Peter de Paola.

Meyer, only 25 years old, champion in 1928 and 1929 and winner of the 1929 Indianapolis race, will defend his title with a 16-cylinder car. He will be ready to take the track for test spins within a few days. De Paola, champion in 1925 and 1927 and winner of the 1925 Indianapolis race in which he established the exacting record of 101.13 miles an hour for the distance, is grooming a Duesenberg for the contest.

Other American stars are planning their campaigns and already Louis Schneider, an Indianapolis driver, has his car at the track, running it a few laps every day. Many new faces will be seen in the race this year. Some old-time drivers are planning to return, and there is a stampede of youngsters to gain cars.

Italy's 16-Cylinder Threat.

Many close followers of the annual speed classic believe the record of 101.13 miles an hour for the distance will be broken this year. The American drivers are taking seriously the foreign threat, especially the 16-cylinder Maserati. Italy is sending a crack team of two drivers to man the Maserati, the fastest car in Europe. It gained that distinction by speeding 152.85 miles an hour in a flying start over a 10-kilometer course at Cremona.

New specifications for the race will permit of a varied size and shape of cars and, for the first time in seven years, the rules demand two-man cars. This means each driver will have to carry a mechanic beside him every mile of the competition.

The riding mechanic is the driver's "eyes" in the back of his head. He warns of approaching cars—machines capable of overtaking and passing the one in which he is riding. The "single seater" mounts of the past seven years

Expect Meyer and De Paola To Start in Big Race Classic

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., April 26. —Speed and thrills!

These are the elements that will form the chief attraction for the many thousands of persons who will witness the International 500-mile automobile race at the Motor Speedway in Indianapolis on May 30. It will be the eighteenth annual running of the classic and is designated by Europe as "the American Grand Prize."

Many new faces will be seen in the race this year. Some old-time drivers are planning to return, and there is a stampede of youngsters to gain cars.

Italy's 16-Cylinder Threat.

Many close followers of the annual speed classic believe the record of 101.13 miles an hour for the distance will be broken this year. The American drivers are taking seriously the foreign threat, especially the 16-cylinder Maserati. Italy is sending a crack team of two drivers to man the Maserati, the fastest car in Europe. It gained that distinction by speeding 152.85 miles an hour in a flying start over a 10-kilometer course at Cremona.

New specifications for the race will permit of a varied size and shape of cars and, for the first time in seven years, the rules demand two-man cars. This means each driver will have to carry a mechanic beside him every mile of the competition.

The riding mechanic is the driver's "eyes" in the back of his head. He warns of approaching cars—machines capable of overtaking and passing the one in which he is riding. The "single seater" mounts of the past seven years caused many unnecessary and dangerous situations when cars were attempting to pass each other.

More than 50 cars are under construction for the race. Heretofore only 33 cars have been permitted to start at Indianapolis. This year, however, the American Automobile Association, the governing body of the great gasoline sport, has decreed that 40 cars may ride the 2½-mile Indianapolis track with its two long straightaways, two short straightaways and four connecting quarter turns. They will line up in 14 rows of three cars each, with one car in the fourteenth row.

Only 40 Cars to Start.

Only the 40 fastest entries are allowed to start. The starting position of the various cars—with the fastest cars forward—is determined the week preceding the race when each car rides a 10-mile trial against the clock.

South America, as well as Europe, will be represented in this year's classic. Jean Gaudino, recent winner for the second time of the Grand Primo Nacional, a strenuous 800-mile road race in the Argentine, will be South America's entry. He is regarded as eminently fitted for the gruelling contest.

Prize money at Indianapolis totals $100,000. Of this sum $65,000 is put up by the speedway, $20,000 by Indianapolis citizens and various divisions of the automotive industry and the additional $20,000 is in accessory prizes. The accessory prizes is added money contributed by firms whose product is used on the victorious cars. The $20,000 put up by Indianapolis is divided into 200 prizes of $100 each, the money being awarded the driver bringing his car first across the tape in each lap of the race. This has the effect of making a race "within a race" with every lap a race.

A big "gate" is anticipated. Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, America's flying ace during the World War, a former racing star and now president of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway organization, said today that advance sales of seats is 25 per cent in excess of the corresponding time last year.

"I think we will have a record crowd at Indianapolis this year," said Capt. Rickenbacker. "I am in hearty sympathy with the new racing rules and specifications. The public fancy is caught by the riding mechanic—the second man in the car—whose wild gestures, signalling his pit and aiding the driver in every possible manner. The riding mechanic adds zest to the race."

Even though the car may stand stock still when you are waiting at a pedestrian crossing better hold the brakes on. Suppose your car were to be pushed from behind?

A battery with cells that are going dry give little or no warning until the break-down point is reached. As a matter of fact the battery will seem to be a little peppier when nearing its demise, if that serves you as a warning.

The farther the car is driven the lower the average oil pressure reading will be. This is due to the wear on the engine bearings.

Experienced owners are suspicious of the engine that never needs an addition of oil as this usually is a sign that the lubricant is being diluted with gasoline.

Years of Research Developed Smooth Straigh-8 Power

Years of specialized research and experimentation in the design of intake manifolds and cylinder heads has developed the smoothness responsible for the present marked trend toward the straight-eight type power plant, says an official bulletin from the engineering department of Dodge Brothers, just received by the Milstrand Motor Co., local Dodge distributer.

Even while the "one-lungers" were chugging and jerking about the streets at the dawn of the industry, engineers were at work on plans for converting the single sledge-hammer blows of the one-cylinder power plant into a series of linghter taps that would give the same force but with less shock, the bulletin states.

The four, six, eight and 12-cylinder engines followed in rapid succession. But merely dividing the force of one great explosion into a series of lesser explosions was not the complete answer. Greater smoothness resulted, it is true, but then it became necessary to evolve a system of distributing the work more equally among the larger number of cylinders. This proved an intricate task. Research finally centered around the cylinder head and the manifold, especially the latter. The correct design and proportion of these units necessitated an appraisal of the entire store of knowledge concerning the internal combustion engine. It required practically all that science and mathematics had to offer to arrive at the state of perfection claimed for the new Dodge Brothers' eight-in-line.

Favor Safety Glass for Busses.

In addition to New York, two more states, Massachusetts and Delaware, are now considering legislation requiring the use of shatterproof glass in the doors, windows and partitions of motor vehicles engaged in the public transportation of passengers.

Hudson Averages 36 Miles an Hour In Endurance Run

Driven 6003 Miles, Through Three States, in Space of 165½ Hours.

One of the most exhaustive tests an automobile was ever put to in St. Louis has been completed by the Hudson-Frampton Motor Car Co., distributer of Hudson and Essex cars. A five-passenger Hudson great eight sedan was used.

The car was checked out of the Hudson-Frampton service department at 2:30 o'clock Saturday, April 12, and from then until noon, Saturday, April 19, it was driven a total of 6003 miles without the motor being stopped. Four drivers, working 12-hour shifts, put the car through its paces.

Before commencing the reliability run, the car was put through performance demonstration by local newspapermen. The speedometer had been calibrated by the Stewart-Warner Speedometer Corporation for the speed and acceleration tests, and the fuel consumption tests were made with a half gallon standard U. S. fuel receptacle attached to the carburetor.

An average speed of 73 miles was made over a measured course in Illinois, timed by stop watches. Gasoline tests showed an average of 15.2 miles to the gallon.

Encounter Severe Storms.

All day and night of April 12 the car was driven in the vicinity of St. Louis, but beginning Monday morning, a run was made to Kansas City and back in 11½ hours. Monday night the car was driven to Indianapolis and back. Tuesday a run was made to Springfield, Decatur, Matoon and Vandalia, and return, the drivers encountering two violent storms. Other cars were stalled at the roadside, but the Hudson kept going.

Tuesday night a run was made to Terre Haute, Ind., down to Vincennes and back, the drivers again encountering severe rain and windstorms. Wednesday the trip included Vandalia, Effingham, Decatur, Danville and Springfield, Ill. Wednesday night another trip was made to Indianapolis. Beginning Thursday morning, four more round trips were made to Kansas City, within 48 hours.

Average speed during the entire run was 36 miles an hour, including stops. A total of 416 gallons of gasoline was used, the car averaging 14.43 miles to the gallon. This in spite of hard, fast traveling through all kinds of weather and over all sorts of roads.

On completion of the run, which was supervised by newspaper men, the car was again taken out for gasoline and speed tests. The Hudson proved its dependability by averaging better than 15 miles to the gallon of fuel and making 70 miles an hour over a measured course.

The automobile was equipped with Goodyear tires and no changes were necessary. The tires were in good condition at the finish. The motor, too, was running smoothly and quietly, although carbon was present.

Acceleration Record.

In the acceleration tests, the Hudson went from five to 25 miles per hour in 8 1-10 seconds; from five to 35 in 12 1-0; from five to 40 in 13 4-10; from 10 to 50 in 20 1-10, and from 10 to 60 m. p. h. in 32 4-10 seconds. These tests were made in high gear, without shifting.

Brake tests were made as follows: Fifty miles an hour to a dead stop, 125 1-3 feet; 40 miles an hour to a stop, 55½ feet; 30 miles to a stop, 37¼ feet; 20 m. p. h. to a stop, 11½ feet. In every instance the car was stopped more than 15 feet short of the space required by official regulations.

A gasoline test was made by representatives of St. Louis newspapers through suburban traffic, with six full stops along the line. The car averaged 15.4 miles to the gallon.

New Law on License Plates.

Effective Jan. 1, 1931, a seller of an automobile in New York State may register another car and use thereon the number plates which were issued for the car previously registered in his name. Under the present law the number plates remain with the car when sold.

Endurance Car Which Traveled 6003 Miles in Week

Sets Time Record Between Buffalo And Rochester, N. Y.

Taking road conditions as they were, a non-professional driver in an Oakland eight stock car recently established a new record from Buffalo to Rochester, N. Y. According to Western Union and A. A. A. officials who officially timed the run, the Oakland traveled the distance of 63 miles in 55 minutes and 30 seconds. The car maintained an average of 68.1 miles per hour, establishing a new stock car record between the two cities.

The driver, George DeKoker of Rochester, attributes this record to the power and road-gripping design of the Oakland, which permitted him to make such a record in spite of his lack of professional driving experience.

Covers 4000 Miles Of Difficult Roads In Australian Tour

Touring the vast area of Australia is not like the usual motor trip one takes in any other country. In this huge and rugged continent the motorist can travel for miles and miles without encountering any towns. All sorts of conditions, from trackless areas, boulder-strewn country, deep sand, rough timber tracts and the thick, black soil country which is always difficult and almost impassable after a rainfall, were encountered. There are, of course, also many splendid roads, but most of these are near the seacoast and large cities.

An interesting trip was made recently by E. J. Heathcock of the North Australian Mounted Constabulary. Starting from the Roper River territory in the northermost part of Australia, he drove his Buick some 4000 miles by way of Darwin, Katherine and south by the West Queensland route, to Melbourne.

Constable Heathcock's territory in Northern Australia covers a vast stretch, part of it touching some of the great plains where cattle travel the long stock routes to market, railhead or point of shipment, so he was not entirely unprepared for the obstacles he was to meet en route. He made the hazardous journey without any trouble.

White Appointed Branch Manager of Securities Concern

L. B. Gratz, director of the motor division of the Merchants & Manufacturers Securities Co. of Chicago, announces the appointment of J. H. White as branch manager here, with offices in the Landreth Building. White is well known to automobile men in the city and has been connected with several companies. The credit department here will be in charge of F. H. Kurtz.

Laredo-Mexico City Surfaced Highway Still Not Completed

By the Associated Press.

LAREDO, Tex., April 26.—Charles Mumm, secretary of the Laredo Chamber of Commerce, who for several years has handled the automobile tourist traffic through this port to Mexico, says that erroneous impression exists that it is already possible to drive all the way to the Mexico City without hazard.

Numerous tourists coming to the border solely for the purpose of taking this trip are naturally greatly disappointed upon learning that as yet there is no highway connection with the City of Mexico and when they are told that it probably would be a year or more until the Pan-American Highway is in all-weather condition. The touring bureau of the Laredo Chamber of Commerce refuses to procure the necessary permits for trips to Mexico City, with the exception of such cases where the trip is regarded as strictly an adventure or exploration trip or where the tourist is trying to make the trip through Mexico to Central or South America.

The first lap of the Pan-American Highway in Mexico, which is the stretch from Laredo to Monterrey, of 151 miles, is fully graveled and being topped and is in splendid condition. Thousands of American tourists have already made this interesting trip and visited the mountainous country around Monterrey, which is provided with good hotel facilities.

this locality is large enough for a small company of men to ride horseback into it and be hidden from view. The Purvis cave has been explored to a depth of two miles through winding passages. This cave was once inhabited by Osages, and also has yielded some profitable lead veins. Strange vocal effects, due to echoes, are heard in a cave at the mouth of Big Gravois, voices being heard half a mile distant on top of a hill, indicating there are crevices which connect with the outside.

Many in Bluffs Along Osage.

There are numerous caves in the upstanding bluffs along the Osage River in St. Clair County east of Osceola. These caves were once used by the Osage Indians as fortresses. The Indians owned and occupied this territory before the coming of the white man, and one time the great Osage village contained a population of more than 10,000 warriors. Where the beautiful cliffs overlook the Monegaw River in close proximity to its entrance into the Osage is Monegaw's mausoleum. Here the old war chief of the Osages lived and died. Carved upon this cavern's chalky walls are fanciful designs of Indians on horseback, all bedecked in war bonnets and feathers, bound for the battlefield.

But when the Osage tribe voted to give up their home on these bluffs and go to a new home in Oklahoma Monegaw, who was a physical giant, called his fighting men around him and said: "Go, but I am no longer your chief. My hunting ground has been taken from me and this home shall be my burial place." So saying he retired to the cave. His people left him. White men later found the body and gave it burial with all the trappings of his chieftaincy. His tomb is in this cave today and it can easily be found in the vicinity of Monegaw Springs, an inland village fast taking on renewed life due to construction of Lake Sac-Osage which backs the waters of Osage from Osecola up to this point and gives easy access by motor boat.

Natural Wonders of Onondago.

Wonderful work of nature shows throughout the entire three miles of Onondaga cave, located three miles south of Leasburg and near U. S. Highway 66 in Crawford County. Water has taken its time to carve, sometimes in pure white, sometimes in tan or brown, many things of beauty. Where it has not carved it has worn away the softer part and made deposits of vari-colored material gathered elsewhere.

Onondaga means "men of the mountains" and is the name of an Iroquois tribe, some traces of which have been found nearby. There are two human skeletons in the cave, which have become imbedded in the floor. Through the cave are many rooms and interesting spectacles. Water flows for about two miles through this underground wonder.

The room in which the Twins—a representation of two life-like infants—stands is 350 feet long, 150 feet wide and 130 feet high. The twins stand almost in the center of the room. The ballroom is about of equal size and its floor is of pure onyx. Water falls roar under the king's canopy and can be heard for half a mile. Many of the formations give forth a musical tone when struck, and sometimes vibrations of the onyx floors can be felt plainly. The chimes in cathedral hall have tones similar to the bass notes of a pipe organ.

Lost River winds throughout the passages. The roof of the cavern is hung throughout with beautiful stalatites of vari-colored onyx. The temperature in this cave remains at 62 degrees, summer and winter. The owners live on the property and have shown the underground beauties to thousands of visitors, scientists and world travelers.

Bates Caves on Big Piney.

On the Big Piney River in the southeast corner of Phelps County, and only a few miles east of U. S. Highway 63 is Bates cave, which contains a ballroom where dances and picnics are held even to this day, and where, according to tradition in the neighborhood, bushwhackers availed themselves of its ideal hiding places. This cave is entered with difficulty by sliding feet first down an inner slope for 40 or 50 feet and by getting out in the same manner, sometimes with the aid of ropes. However, the ballroom is of ample size for 50 couples, the floor is hard and level. Artificial light is required.

The cave is 600 feet deep, its ceiling 110 feet high, and a large stream comes from somewhere far back in the unexplored interior. There is said to be a firm belief in the neighborhood that somewhere in this cave is concealed $100,000 in gold which was put there by an old squaw sole survivor of a massacre.

There is a pronounced cavernous condition near Boiling Springs on the Gasconade River, five miles southwest of Arlington on U. S. Highway 66. There is a pronounced cavernous condition near Boiling Springs on the Gasconade River, five miles southwest of Arlington on U. S. Highway 66. Here is Onyx cave, 50 feet wide and 800 feet deep, and for two miles over the ground above the passage of a wagon produces a rumbling sound, indicative of a cavity at no great depth. There are a dozen sink holes around Onyx cave, one being a mile long and a half mile in width.

Eyeless fish weighing three pounds have been caught in Fishing cave, on Sinkin Creek in Shannon County east of Highway 19. This cave, together with Bat, Welsch, Big Creek and Blue Spring caves, all in the vicinity, have been explored by scientists and thousands of tourists who have visited the Jack's Fork country. The caves are large inside, dry floors, and several of them have springs which create underground lakes.

Ashley's cave on Cave Creek in Texas County near Houston is down a deep walled canyon and difficult to approach. Ten years ago officials of the American Indian Museum in New York visited Ashley's Cave and pronounced it a prehistoric habitation of Indians. In 1814 this cave was known to have been a powder manufacturing plant, and records preserved show that from 1816-18 Gen. William Ashley, fur trapper and explorer, sold from this cave 60,000 pounds of gunpowder, which he made there from potassium nitrate. The inside of this cave is even now heavily charged with saltpeter, charcoal and sulphur.

Money Cave lies about 12 miles northeast of Salem in Dent County. This cave faces on the Meramec River, and takes its name from a customary tradition that Indians concealed a large treasure here; the legend being authenticated by an Indian chief who told a white man that his people had buried much gold in the cave on the bluff, built a fire over the money, then filled the mouth of the cave as best they could. In this vicinity are Mammoth, Guthoerl. Short Bend, Watson, Twin and Onyx caves, all of which are more than 80 feet deep and plenty wide and easy for exploring. The caves can be reached from the highway leading from Steelville to Salem, and Short Bend postoffice on this road is a good point to start from.

Owner Buried With Whisky Cask.

Facing Barren Fork Creek, 12 miles southeast of Tuscumbia, near State Road No. 17 in Miller County, is a cave celebrated by reason of a provision in the will of a former eccentric owner. John Wilson settled here in 1822. For years he lived in this cave with his family. He died in 1855 leaving instructions that his body was to be packed in salt, placed in this cave with 10-gallon cask of whisky. The entrance was then to be sealed up. On the seventh anniversary of his death, the whole community was to assemble, eat, drink and be merry.

For many years this cave had also been used as a place for festive gatherings, but the seventh year after its owner had been pickled in salt, the whisky and coffin were brought from their resting place, certain famous fiddlers of that day were to ascend a platform and play, while the guests danced. The program was carried out in due form, according to local tradition, and then the bones of John Wilson were duly buried in a little neighborhood cemetery.

In the vicinity of Hahatonka in Camden County on the Niangua River is Bridal cave, from the walls of which hang a mass of stalactites fully 10 feet from side to side at the top, which are a delicate transparent loop and fold, equal in beauty to many other famous caverns. Onyx cave in this section has wonderful deposits on ceiling, walls and floor, which have the most ornate patterns, and if not so inaccessible would attract throngs of visitors. Caveland in the Hahatonka section will soon be opened by the completion of Osage lake at Bagnell, which will back waters up to these caves, and perhaps inundate some of them forever.

Human Bones Found in Cavern.

Seven miles south of Waynesville, on U. S. Highway 66, is Maxey's cave on Robidoux Creek. Entrance is 40 feet high and 100 feet wide. The front chamber is 300 feet long to where the cavern forks; in one of these branches daylight penetrates 400 feet. This is the largest, but there are a dozen or more large caves in this neighborhood which can be explored. On the Laughlin goat ranch are seven cairns or stone graves which have been opened for inspection by scientists. These are on the summit of a ridge overlooking Robidoux Creek.

On top of a hill about one-half mile south of Waynesville is the site of an Indian village, where several mortars, grinding stones and numerous flints have been found. Here on the farm of Dr. Sell is a cave, located on the northern end of the ridge entirely detached from the surrounding hills. The roof of this cave has partly fallen in at the entrance. Its width is about 50 feet. From it have been removed the skulls and bones of three humans, thought to be an aboriginal people. There are 50 or more other caves around Waynesville which can be explored for signs of ancient habitation.

Three miles north of Big Piney, in Pulaski County, is a cavern, which, from its position, formations and surroundings, is peculiarly adapted to the requirements of a primitive race of people in search of a permanent shelter. This Miller's cave is situated on a bluff rising from the left bank of Big Piney River, 200 feet above the level of that stream. The cave opens to the southeast, there is a large spring opening directly at its mouth. The cave is divided into numerous rooms. There are numberless designs of flying birds and other grotesque figures chiseled on the sandstone walls.

Tells of Development Of Automobile Row in Last Two Decades

Development of St. Louis' automobile row in the last two decades was described as remarkable by L. A. Horn, formerly connected with the Reo Motor Car Co. as traffic manager, who was a visitor in the city last week. Horn, now representing the Altorfer Brothers of Peoria, Ill., manufacturers of ABC washing machines, helped organize Kardel Brothers, first Reo distributer in the city, in 1908. At that time, the company was handling farm machinery, and took on one and two-cylinder Reo cars as a side line.

"We thought we would have difficulty competing with four-cylinder cars," Horn said. "But after a lot of hill climbing and road tests, we established our position and did a good job of selling. It is difficult to understand how we ever sold those first cars, when one thinks of the values now offered in automobiles."

THESE 2½-ton International Harvester trucks, purchased by the Arrow Coal & Hauling Co., 1008 South Eleventh street, have been in use on many of the major construction projects in the city lately.

Car Lifted Off Ground By Engine Mounting

The seemingly difficult feat of uniting two such unlike substances as rubber and steel was recently given a dramatic and convincing test. A steel-and-rubber engine mounting, consisting of a block of rubber bonded top and bottom to two thin plates of steel, was used to lift a De Soto six completely off the ground.

During the test there was not the slightest sign of separation of the rubber from the steel. In fact, the engineers asserted that the rubber mounting was strong enough to lift two cars, instead of one, without giving way.

New Arbella Carries Word of Celebration

A new "Arbella," named in honor of the stout ship in which John Winthrop landed at Salem, Mass., June 12, 1630, is at the present time winging its way to 22 states and 67 cities east of the Rocky Mountains, carrying the message of the Massuchetts Bay Colony Tercentenary and the American Legion convention of 1930.

Instead of rising and falling to the swell of the tide off New England's shore, as did the original good ship "Arbella" when it dropped anchor near Plymouth Rock, the new "Arbella" will drop from the sky, its landing cushioned with Fisk airplane tires of a type designed primarily to absorb shocks and jolts of landing.

Court Fight for Control of Moon Motor Co. Looms

A court fight for control of the Moon Motor Car Co., Inc., of St. Louis, looms with the announcement in New York of C. W. Burst, former president, that he and his associates do not recognize stockholders and directors' meetings held early this month, at which new officers and directors were chosen.

Concerning the meetings, Burst said: "Immediate steps will be taken to determine the validity of these actions by the appropriate court procedure and meanwhile we give assurance to all our stockholders and dealers that I and my associates will continue to direct our efforts to the conduct of the business as we have in the past."

William J. Muller, newly elected president of the company, declared that the present management is proceeding to place the affairs of the company on an aggressive and satisfactory basis. Production of Windsor cars, he said, had dwindled away to practically nothing.

"We have put the plant on a production schedule of 15 cars a day," Muller declared, "which will quickly be increased to the maximum capacity. It is our opinion that the business will expand rapidly with the introduction of the Ruxton and other front-drive cars in various price classes."

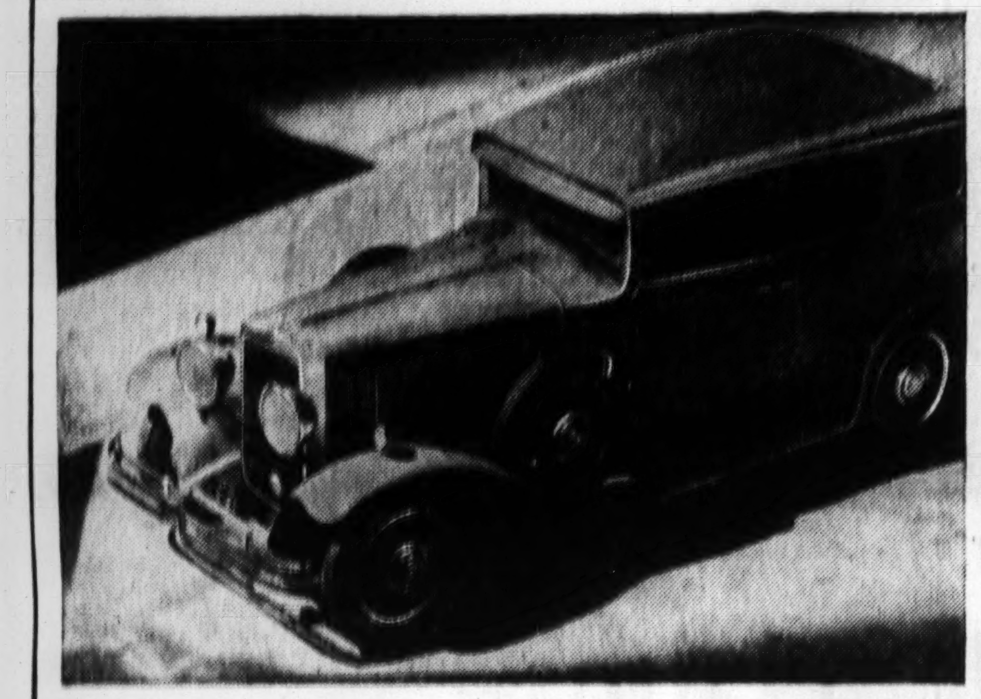
THE NEW PEERLESS

PRODUCT OF AMERICA'S OLDEST FINE CAR BUILDER



PRESENTING A THIRD NEW PEERLESS OF OUTSTANDING INDIVIDUALITY AT AN UNUSUALLY ATTRACTIVE PRICE

FOLLOWING quickly in the path of the great success created by the new Peerless Custom Eight and Master Eight, the new Peerless Standard Eight now appears on the scene. Here is a car of moderate price that refuses either by appearance or behavior to classify itself with the usual moderate price conceptions.

Like all Peerless cars, its chief aim is to serve an exacting clientele, and to serve that clientele in a fashion and to a degree beyond the range of the usual "mass production" makes.

As an instance of this the Peerless Standard Eight is powered by a straight-eight engine, rather than the conventional six. Its comfort dimensions are over-sized as to leg-room, head-room and elbow-room. Its interior details have been studiously worked out with a constant eye toward a truly fine car effect. For ease of operation every possible new development has been incorporated.

To all who seek the truly distinctive and the fine thing well done a most cordial invitation is extended to see and drive this latest of all Peerless creations.

The Standard Eight, price under $1500. Other new Peerless cars—The Custom Eight under $3000; the Master Eight under $2000 (all prices at factory).

Criticizes Ozark Tour Article.

To the Automobile Editor:

REFERRING to last Sunday's article, "Tour Leads Into Rugged Big Springs Country," why not add that the dust and dirt on all State gravel roads is an almost insurmountable discomfort during dry weather? The Arcadia region and No. 25 to St. Genevieve, Perryville, Hermann via Washington, New Haven, Berger and return by No. 19 and U. S. 50, are all in the same category. Rideable in comfort only after a hard rain. And the wear and tear on tires is at least five times that of going over concrete for the same distance.

Goggles, dusters and other long-discarded automobiling clothing has to be worn on these "scenic" trips, and even then inflamed eyes, nose and throat are not uncommon. Too many people are fooled by ballyhooing "scenery," and omitting any mention of blinding clouds of dust. Am told that the reason these scenic gravel roads are not oiled or treated with the new chemical that settles the dust is that if it is put on the scrapers cannot level the deep ruts.

So let's have the drawbacks of these tours fully explained. Another matter is the deep fords, unbridged creeks, impassable with modern, low machines.

I had such an experience in Perry and Bollinger Counties, trying to reach No. 61 from Perryville. Got stuck, had to be pulled out, and had to buy a new set of coils at a cost of $35. Rather expensive, you must admit, for just crossing a creek.

ROBERT HOLM.

Engineers Made Car Powerful and Then Built in Comfort

"What doth it profit an automobile to be capable of great speed unless it rides smoothly?" This is the way the Willys-Overland engineers reasoned before they designed the Willys six. They designed a car capable of power and speed and then set out to make it as smooth riding and as comfortable as possible. The result is that the Willys six combines speed and comfort to a new degree in cars selling under $1000.

The Willys is said to bring a new conception of riding comfort at every speed range. Not only is this comfort and smoothness brought about by the employment of Monroe two-way hydraulic shock eliminators on all four wheels, but it is also the result of the construction of the chassis and the manner in which the engine has been mounted.

Rockelman Resigns As Ford Salesmanager To Go With Chrysler

Rockelman is recognized as one of the ablest executives in the automobile industry and one of the most thoroughly experienced in every phase of motor car production, sales and service.

For the present Rockelman will be attached to Chrysler's personal staff.

Auburn-Graves Has Two New Dealers

R. B. Roberts of Cabool, Mo., and Daab Motor Car Co. of Belleville, Ill., have been appointed Auburn dealers by the Auburn Graves Motor Co., Inc., distributors in St. Louis. This makes a total of 13 Auburn dealers in the St. Louis territory and with the present plan which Auburn Graves has in mind, it is planned to have a minimum of 30 Auburn dealers and at least 10 Cord front drive dealers in the St. Louis territory by the middle of summer. Due to the popularity of the Auburn automobile the company is receiving many inquiries from dealers throughout this entire section.

Finish 4000-Mile Exploration Through African Jungles

From the denseness of the almost impenetrable jungles of darkest Africa comes word from Martin Johnson, famous explorer, that his expedition has just completed a 4000-mile journey over almost impassable trails, with his caravan of seven Willys-Knight cars and trucks. He adds, "I know of no other cars that would stand up under such severe and cruel service."

Johnson, together with Mrs. Johnson, who has also won fame as an African hunter and explorer, are making their fourth expedition into Africa to continue the work of photographing wild beasts in their native haunts. Much of the territory to be penetrated by the Johnsons during their two years' stay has never before been visited by whites.

The primary purpose of the present expedition is to reproduce in colors and sound all of the life of the jungle, this being the first time that sound pictures have ever been made in the African wilds. These reproductions are expected to be invaluable to scientists.

Spend $20,000,000 for Roads.

Chicago Against Grade Crossing.

The State of Illinois, Cook County, and the railroads plan to spend $37,348,000 during the next two years to eliminate grade crossings within a radius of 30 miles of Chicago.

Speedometers Given Exhaustive Tests

Speedometers have been run as high as 500,000 miles in tests and could have continued running indefinitely; some of them are driven steadily at 150 miles an hour, while others are made to stop and start about three times a minute. Fifty thousand miles of steady running is a common test. Temperature tests are also made to determine effect of changes in temperature. If speedometers were not compensated for temperature change they would read too high when cold and too low when hot.

This information is given by Harlow H. Curtice, president of the AC Spark Plug Co., which is moving into its newly constructed engineering building.

UNUSUAL SMOOTHNESS and handling ease in this Eight with SUPERIOR PERFORMANCE

Because of its V-type design, Oakland's eight-cylinder engine has an extremely short, rigid crankcase which supports the bearings in accurate alignment. The crankshaft too is very short and sturdy, and has no torsional vibration period within the speed range of the engine. This means that no matter how fast you drive, the New Oakland Eight runs smoothly and quietly.

Its smoothness is further intensified by a complete down-draft system of carburetion and manifolding—new type duo-plane cylinder heads assuring uniform combustion—and laminated steel spring and rubber engine mountings.

Driving this car at high speed or over rough roads, you will find it exceptionally easy to handle as well as smooth. And your pleasure in driving will be made still greater by the car's riding ease. Long springs, Lovejoy hydraulic shock absorbers and spacious Fisher Bodies greatly increase its delightful comfort.

But you should actually drive this newest General Motors eight to appreciate fully its handling ease, comfort and superior performance. Only at the wheel can you learn how many important advantages it now enables you to enjoy in an eight of very moderate price.

$1045 AND UP

Prices are f. o. b. Pontiac, Michigan, plus delivery charges. Lovejoy Hydraulic Shock Absorbers included in list prices. Bumpers, rear fender guards and spring covers extra. General Motors Time Payment Plan available at minimum rate.

FLYING SCHOOL: Lambert-St. Louis Field. Ask for Mark Sims

At St. Louis Airfields

THE Weather Station at Lambert-St. Louis Field was equipped last week to send and receive weather information over a circuit of approximately 1000 miles including Kansas City, Omaha, Chicago, and intermediate points. The new service replaces the previous system of sending weather reports by radio.

The system is operated with automatic printers over American Telegraph and Telephone Co. wires, each station on the circuit being in constant touch with the others. Hourly reports are placed on the wires by 30 observers, and one observer may request and receive information from another in less than two minutes. Previously only half a dozen hourly reports were received by radio.

Information embodied in the hourly reports includes general conditions, ceiling, visibility, wind velocity, barometer, temperature and field conditions. The service was installed and is operated by the Government Weather Bureau.

New Air Mail Rate.

The Watres bill authorizing the Postmaster-General to award air mail contracts on a mileage and space basis instead of a poundage system, to extend the present system, and to authorize the carrying of first-class mail on existing passenger lines was passed Thursday by the Senate and sent to the President.

The bill has been a matter of keen interest to airline operators, who see in it a means to offset their losses resulting from operation under the present low passenger fare. It will also permit the Postmaster-General to extend the air mail service.

Early enactment of the measure was urged by Postmaster-General Brown in view of the expiration on May 5 of six poundage basis contracts, including that on the St. Louis-Chicago service.

Five Gliders for Students.

Gliding instruction will start at Parks Air College next Friday. Five primary gliders are being prepared for use by students, who will begin by learning the use of controls. Short direct flights will follow and, as the student becomes proficient, he will be taught to maneuver and to soar aloft.

Planes for Exploring Parties.

Three Challenger Robin monoplanes were sold last week by the Curtiss-Robertson Airplane Manufacturing Co., to the Consolidated Mining & Smelting Co., of Canada. The ships will be used chiefly to transport exploration parties to distant sections of the Dominion. The contact resulting in the transaction was made by Maj. Robertson during the aircraft exposition at The Arena early this year. The planes were flown to Winnipeg last Friday.

New Schedule to Denver.

Air service between St. Louis and Denver, Colo., on an eight-hour schedule was started last Tuesday by United States Airways, Inc., of Kansas City. The service is operated daily from the new Curtiss-Steinberg Airport on the East Side. Seven passenger, single-engined monoplanes are used. Ships leave here for the West at 9 a. m. and stop at Booneville, Mo., Kansas City, Mo., and several towns in Kansas. The eastbound ship arrives here at 6 p. m. C. M. Bontrager and George Halsey, veteran flyers, are among the pilots employed in the new service, which is at the prevailing fare of approximately five cents a mile.

Handles Robertson Sales.

Joe Read, veteran Lambert Field flyer, has been placed in charge of sales for the Robertson Airplane Service Co. Read sold 37 planes last year for Universal Aviation Corporation.

St. Louis to Buenos Aires.

Seven-day air mail service from St. Louis to Buenos Aires has been started through a series of connections including the St. Louis-Evansville section of the Interstate Airlines System. The service touches at Panama, Colombia, Venezuela, Ecuador, Peru, Bolivia, Chile and Argentina.

Woman Instructor Employed.

Mrs. May Haizlip, transport pilot, has been employed by the von Hoffmann Flying School as an instructor of women students. Mrs. Haizlip is a veteran flyer and claims about 2000 hours in the air.

J. W. Brennan Promoted.

J. W. Brennan, local representative for T. A. T.-Maddox Airlines, last week was placed in charge of traffic on the Eastern Division of the line following the resignation of H. W. Connor, formerly Eastern traffic manager. Brennan will continue to make his headquarters at St. Louis.

Price Reductions on Planes.

Following are the price reductions on tri-motored Ford monoplanes recently announced by Edsel Ford: The 5-AT model, three Wasp engines, reduced from $55,000 to $50,000; the 4-AT, with Wright J-6 engines, the 9-AT with Wasp junior engines, and the 11-AT, Packard Diesel engines, were cut from $42,000 to $40,000. The price of the 7-AT model is now $47,000 instead of $51,000.

Parks' Status Advanced.

Parks Air College airplane and engine shop has been approved by the Department of Commerce as an authorized repair station. Under the approval planes overhauled in the shop will be relicensed without further inspection by the Department of Commerce.

Plans to Enter Air Derby.

Ben O. Howard, Universal Airplanes pilot, expects to enter the All-American Flying Derby for which $25,000 in prize money has been posted by the Allied Motor Industries, Inc., if the racing plane he is now building meets requirements. The race is for light planes and will be the most severe test of the kind ever held. The tentative route is from Detroit to Montreal, New York, Atlanta, Houston, Mexico City, Los Angeles, Salt Lake City, Omaha and finish at Detroit. The start will be made about July 21.

Colombians in Flying School.

Guillermo de Leyva, 19 years old, grandson of a former President of the Republic of Colombia, started flight training at the Universal Flying School last week. The youth, whose father is a Senator in Colombia, took a preliminary flying course at Antwerp, Belgium, last summer. He expects to be joined at the local school by his counsin, Lieut. Sergio de Leyva, an officer in the Colombian army. The visit of Col. Lindbergh to Bogota, De Leyva's home, in 1927, aroused general interest in aviation and De Leyva expects to start a flying school and transportation company when he completes his course. To avoid complications in prouncing his anme De Leyva is encouraging his associates to call him "Bill."

Other foreign students taking training at the Universal School are George Cadina, who came from the Island of Cebu, and Jose de Almeida of Brazil.

Sunday Exhibition Off.

The usual Sunday afternoon exhibition flying programs at Lambert-St. Louis Field will be discontinued during the period of grading and road building, due to limited parking facilities for automobiles. The construction work will be completed within a month.

Amateur Buys Ship.

The Von Hoffmann Aircraft Co. sold an Avro-Avian biplane to Frank Richards of Springfield, Ill., last week. Richards is an amateur.

Preparing for Long Jump.

Lieut. Alexander Magyar, former Australian Army flyer, who plans a non-stop refueling flight from Detroit to Budapest in June, is in the air daily at Parks Airport in preparation for the flight. Lieut. Magyar is taking a course in navigation in addition to brushing up his flying technic.

T.A.T. Maddux to Move.

Transfer of T.A.T.-Maddux activities from Lambert-St. Louis Field to the new Curtiss-Steinberg Airport will take place shortly. .A.T. has operated at Lambert Field since the coast-to-coast service was started last July.

Stout Airlines, operating between Detroit, Cleveland and Chicago, recently completed its one millionth mile of flying without injury to a passenger. The line was started in 1926 between Detroit and Grand Rapids, Mich., and has carried a total of 107,000 passengers.

Air Tourists Here Tuesday.

Representatives of the State of Massachusetts and the American Legion, who are making an air tour of the United States to advertise the National Legion convention, and the Tercentenary celebration at Boston next October, are due to arrive at Lambert Field next Tuesday.

New Students Enrolled.

Six flying students were enrolled in the Curtiss-Wright flying school during the week. The group included Sylvester Karst, Oliver Evans and Matthew Muir of St. Louis; James Brownell, London, England; Byron Nickerson, Leeds, Ala., and Harold Porter, Gutherie Center, Ia.

Having your brakes in good shape to stop when you want to — or when you must — beats "stepping on it" to beat the red. A checking ticket from General looks better, too, than a ticket from a cop.

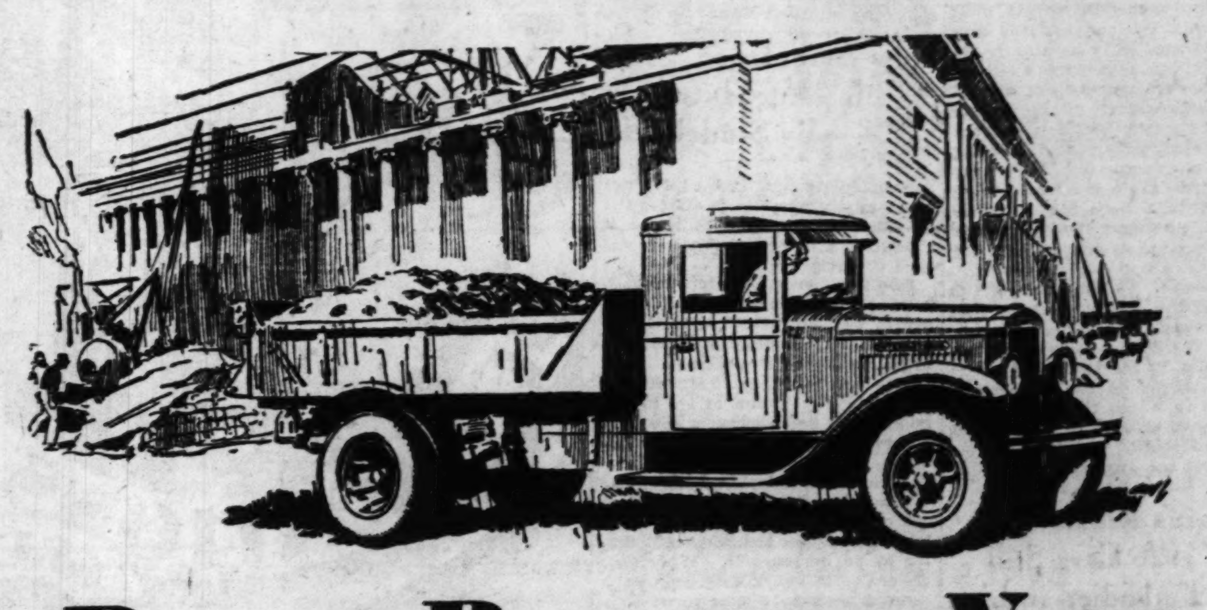
International's "7 FOR 1" Record



Proof of Remarkable Value
Every truck user should give full consideration to this fact and its bearing on his own future success with trucks:
● In ten years International Truck production has increased 700 PER CENT while the total truck production of the industry has increased only 100 PER CENT.
Such an increase from a small beginning would not be important—it is necessary that you know and bear this in mind also:
● Ten years ago, in 1919, International Harvester was already a highly successful truck builder of fifteen years' experience. Even then it was one of the leaders of the industry, with a production of thousands of trucks per year.
From that vigorous starting point International production went into high gear. Demand for International Trucks sprang ahead by leaps and bounds, with this result:
● Last year International Harvester built seven times as many trucks as it was producing in 1919. In the same year—1929—the industry as a whole was building only twice as many trucks as were being turned out in 1919.
Year by year International Harvester reaches and passes new and significant milestones in truck success. The consistent march of the Company toward a dominant position in truck building is the best possible evidence of the value of the International product. It is the everyday truck buyer, himself, who provides this evidence. We offer this steadily growing preference for International Trucks and Service as a guide to any man in search of economical transportation.
The International Line includes Trucks ranging in capacities from ¾-ton to 5-ton.

More Attention To Driving Urged By F. C. McDonald

Nash Distributer Launches Campaign for Safety Among Owners.

If some miracle could broaden the streets of St. Louis, entirely separate motor and pedestrian traffic, eliminate every railroad grade crossing in the State and change human nature, we could look forward to cutting the 1930 automobile accident list to nothing. Lacking such superhuman help, people must depend primarily on the individual automobile driver for traffic safety and a reduction of traffic fatalities this year.

F. C. McDonald, president of the Southwest Nash Co. of St. Louis, stressed the importance of individual safety education among all Nash owners yesterday in launching a campaign for traffic safety among the small army of people who make up the Nash merchandising organization in this territory. He urged Nash employes to bring home to car owners their personal responsibility in the life saving movement and pointed to a few improved motoring conditions that may help this year in reducing the accident toll.

"One of the most important factors in St. Louis safety improvement," he said, "is the increased ease of operation and responsiveness of the new 1930 cars. It seems to me that any owner and driver of the new Nash twin ignition eight, twin ignition six or single six models should be able to meet any traffic emergency and to drive through the year without a single accident, if he is mentally and physically capable to be entrusted with a car.

"Every mechanical detail of these new type automobiles is built along increased safety lines.

"The new internal expanding, self energizing and self aligning four-wheel brakes on the '400's' make deceleration and stopping an exact science. With a little practice, the average driver can halt his car instantly and on any given mark. The new worm-and-roller type steering gear—a unit similar to the gear used on the specially built racers which have successfully reached the terrific speed of 230 miles an hour on Daytona Beach—offers accurate steering facilities which form another important safeguard for both the driver and those in other cars.

"Non-shatterable plate glass, used in windshield and all windows of the twin-ignition eight models, is a safety feature that cannot be overestimated; the instant responsiveness of the new cars to the driver's will makes them the safest vehicles so far developed for use in either heavy city traffic or on the open road.

"No matter how much safety the manufacturer builds into his cars, the final responsibility rests with the individual driver, and the best of drivers need to be constantly reminded of that fact. After all these years of safety education, careful driving campaigns, speed courts and police effort, we learn that the 'hit-and-run' driver is increasing rather than decreasing. People are making the same careless driving mistakes that they did 20 years ago, and although the percentage of accidents as compared with the number of cars in use has materially decreased, we still are forced to watch the traffic casualty lists mount, month by month.

"It is the duty of every automobile dealer in St. Louis and every man employed in the automobile industry to watch this vital phase of the business and to do his part in promoting careful driving among all car owners."

Features Present In 1926 Cars Still Embodied in Line

Although embodying the newest features of straight-eight construction, the Marmon 8-79, one of the four lines of 1930 Marmon eights, is the outgrowth of the design originated in 1926 in the first Marmon straight-eight.

In the four years that have passed since Marmon entered the eight-in-line field exclusively, the company's engineering and manufacturing departments have constantly improved and refined their products with close attention to the performance of Marmon straight-eights on the road and in the hands of actual owners. The 8-79 offers ample evidence of the results of this broad experience in the straight-eight field.

In 1926, Marmon instituted certain standards of straight-eight performance, riding qualities and comfort that have been continued in basic principle through several successive periods of refinement. Such advancements as rubber shock insulators instead of metal shackles and duplex-down-draft manifold instead of the conventional type which were originated four years ago still are incorporated on the 8-79 as well as other Marmon products.

Wet Sentiment Reported Growing In Auto Industry

WET sentiment in the automotive industry appears to be more intense than in any other industry, judging from what is believed to be the first poll taken exclusively of this group. The poll is now being concluded among its readers by the house organ of the Triplex Safety Glass Co., which circulates among automotive executives, engineers and salesmen.

Returns to date from nearly half of the ballots show 10 per cent voting for enforcement, 24 per cent for modification and 66 per cent for repeal of the amendment. Ninety per cent, therefore, express themselves as desiring some change in the present liquor situation. Should these percentages continue to be as steady and unchanging as they have been, according to those in charge of the poll, enforcement will receive 198 votes, modification 480 and repeal 1322, out of the total.

Buffalo, N. Y.; New Orleans, La.; Detroit, Mich., and New York vote strongly wet in the poll. Syracuse, N. Y., and Indianapolis, Ind., lead in enforcement and modification sentiment.

Roadster Is First Vehicle to Traverse Indian Gap Trail

A Plymouth roadster was the first four-wheel vehicle of any description to cross the heretofore impassable Indian Gap Trail in the Smoky Mountains of North Carolina.

A. J. Huff of Mountain View and Dock Gomer of Smokemont, N. C., were the principals in this modern achievement of pioneering, which was made in four hours and 45 minutes from Gatlinburg, Tenn., to Smokemont, a distance of 24 miles, 10 of which had never before been traveled except on foot or by horseback. At this particular spot Mount Le Conte is 5500 feet high.

In making the trip it was found necessary to move rocks, cut trees, clear underbrush and frequently hold the car in position lest it careen down the mountainside. The last half-mile before descending on the North Carolina side was driven on an old logging spur railroad, long since fallen into disuse and decay.

Through all the journey the Plymouth traveled under its own power and, once the worst obstructions were removed, performed as if it were on a country road.

The owner of this car, which had traveled more than 60,000 miles, also owns another Plymouth and has his order in for two more. The cars are used in mountain climbing, sight-seeing and hotel service. The object of the trip described above, one of which takes place each month, was to search out a new trail and new beauty spot for visitors at Mount Le Conte.

New Ambulance Line Introduced By Studebaker

A complete new line of funeral cars and ambulances is announced by Studebaker. This company is the world's largest builder of this type of equipment.

The line consists of eight models, headed by a new de luxe funeral car to be known as the Buckingham, and a new de luxe ambulance to be called the Providence. Both are powered by the Studebaker President eight motor of 115 horsepower, and mounted on a specially designed chassis of 156-inch wheelbase.

A new Westminster funeral car and a new Samaritan ambulance are also announced, each powered by a Studebaker straight eight motor of 80 horsepower. Wheelbase of each is 146 inches. On the same wheelbase but powered by a 75 horsepower Studebaker-built six-cylinder engine is the Arlington funeral car, and its companion car, the Bellevue ambulance.

Packard-Diesel Aircraft Motor Is on Display

Starting tomorrow, the Berry Motor Car Co., 2201 Locust street, Packard distributer, will have on display for a week a Packard-Diesel motor.

More than 20 years of experimenting are back of this aircraft engine, which has proven practical. Unlike any other aircraft motor, the Diesel has no carburetor, magneto or spark plugs. Yet it is of conventional, nine-cylinder, radial air-cooled construction. Although a four-cycle engine, it differs markedly from a gasoline motor.

Ordinary furnace fuel is used and each cylinder has a separate fuel pump. Only when properly atomized or used with a wick like that of an old-fashioned lamp, can this fuel burn. And the oil itself will quench an open flame when poured upon it.

The new Diesel motor developes 225 horsepower and weighs but 510 pounds. Safety, conomy and reliability are characteristics.

Phillips Elects Three New Vice Presidents

All directors and officers of the Phillips Petroleum Co. were reelected at the annual meeting of the company in Bartlesville, Ok., last week. In addition, three new vice presidents were elected—F. E. Rise, in charge of the natural gasoline division; C. R. Musgrave, in charge of traffic, and H. A. Trower, in charge of retail marketing.

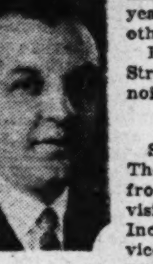
What's New in Radio Industry

Walter H. Dyer to Be Vice-President of U. S. Radio and Television Corporation—W. E. Fuetterer to Distribute Sentinel Receivers—E. J. Strauss Co. to Handle Auto Radio Set—Otto N. Frankfort Will Be Story & Clark Sales Manager — Trade Notes.

Dyer Takes Important Position in Chicago.

Walter H. Dyer, one of the most widely known of St. Louis radio men, has been elected vice president of the U. S. Radio and Television Corporation of Chicago. He also is to be assistant to the president and director of sales. U. S. Radio and Television Co. is one of the larger radio manufacturing concerns, and has its factories at Marion, Ind. It makes the Apex and Radiotrope receivers and is just introducing a new radio set for automobiles. Its president is J. Clark Coit, formerly of the Simmons Hardware Co. of St. Louis.



W. H. DYER.

Dyer has been a manufacturers' agent in St. Louis for seven years. He served several terms as a vice president of the St. Louis Radio Trades Association. He has handled a number of the largest radio accounts in this city. He will have offices in Chicago, but expects to retain his residence here for some months. He will also retain his manufacturers' agency in the Paul Brown Building.

The new U. S. radio automobile receiver is already in production at the rate of 100 a day, according to Dyer. It uses two AC screen grid tubes, one 26 type tube, a 201A tube and a 171A power tube. It is very compact and is unusually selective and sensitive.

Fuetterer to Be Distributor of Sentinel Receivers.

The United Air Cleaner Co. of Chicago has appointed the W. E. Fuetterer Supplies Co. distributor of its Sentinel receivers. These sets come in two principal models, both having a chassis with four AC screen grid tubes, a 27 type tube in a resistance coupled first audio stage and two 45 type tubes in push-pull final audio stage.

One model is a straight receiver, in a two-tone walnut cabinet with maple overlay and built-in dynamic speaker. Another is a radio-phonograph combination, with electric pick-up, electric motor, dynamic speaker and record compartment.

J. T. Beatty is president and treasurer of the United Air Cleaner Co.; F. T. Paul, vice president and sales manager, and John Hockey, secretary; C. P. Feebush is district sales manager of the radio division, while Melville S. Cohen is factory representative with headquarters at 3117 Washington boulevard.

Straus Co., Inc., to Distribute Automobile Sets.

The E. J. Straus Co., Inc., has been appointed a distributor of O-E automobile receivers. This set uses two AC screen grid tubes, a 27 tube, two 201A tubes and a 171A power tube. The Napper Radio Service Co., 3717½ Washington boulevard, has been appointed service and installation station for O-E sets.

The E. J. Straus Co., Inc., states that it is not a distributer of the new Trav-Ler low-priced set just introduced, as was reported last Sunday.

Gene Straus has entered a Sparton baseball team in the Empire League, in which his players last year won the pennant under another name.

TRADE NOTES.

Sale and exploitation of the Theremin have been transferred from the Radiola to the Victor division of the R. C. A.-Victor Co., Inc. . . . Jesse Hawley, formerly vice president of United Reproducers Corporation, is now president of the Hawley Fibre Co., St. Charles, Ill., which is making fibre diaphragms and is occupying the former Newcomb-Hawley plant in that city. . . . A statement from Chicago says that John C. Tully and Arthur T. Haugh have resigned as president and vice president, respectively, of the Steinite Radio Co., positions which they accepted recently. . . . The Transformer Corporation of America, Chicago, has decided on a chassis for its new receiver using three screen grid R. F. tubes, power detection and 45 tubes in push pull audio. . . . The Audiola Radio Co., Chicago, which has made receiver chassis, is to make a complete line of receivers which are now being introduced. . . . Plans for a merger of the Amrad Corporation and the Magnavox Co., makers of speakers, San Francisco, are reported.

After Thursday, May 1, the weekly Los Amigos programs on WLW are to be shifted to Tuesday nights, at 8 o'clock. These broadcasts are especially for the Spanish-speaking listeners in Latin American countries. Octavio Bermudez, once a Gaucho on the Argentine Pampas, is master of ceremonies.

New Studios for WENR Are Called Most Beautiful

New studios on top of the Chicago Opera building into which WENR has just moved are said to be the most beautiful yet built for a station. Studios and offices for the 50,000 watt transmitter operated by the Great Lakes Broadcasting Co., an Insull subsidiary, occupy part of the forty-first floor, all of the forty-second floor and most of the forty-third floor.

The main studio will accommodate more than 100 musicians. It is 30 feet wide, 52½ feet long and two stories high. The color scheme is white, sun-tanned ivory, blue and lacquer red. The decorative design gives a modernized adaptation of a roof garden. The effect is of being in this garden at some elevation, with the blue of night outside. The walls are formed by a series of 20 parabolic arches separated by conventionalized palm trees done in a modernistic manner and extending from ceiling to floor. In these arches are hung royal blue velour curtains.

Illumination corresponds to daylight. This is produced by 32 300-watt beam reflector lights recessed in the ceiling. Around the walls are 14 plaster baskets, each of which conceals a 200-watt light in an amber globe.

Studio Number Two is 22 feet wide, 36½ feet long and 17½ feet high. The general color scheme is buff, rust coral, olive yellow and gold. The walls are draped with full length rust coral curtains on rods to permit adjustment for acoustical purposes. The corners of the room are set off by diagonal plaster pilasters with fluted vertical surfaces. In each pilaster is a full length mirror.

There are six other sound-proof rooms that may be used as studio, audition or rehearsal rooms. These range in size from 10½ feet by 3½ feet to 24 feet by 18 feet.

Washington U. Play Music on Air Over 3 St. Louis Stations

The principal musical numbers from the musical comedy, "Si, Si, Senorita," which is to be presented at the American Theater by the Quadrangle Club of Washington University for four nights, beginning May 7, will be broadcast by three radio stations, KMOX, KWK and WIL will each devote one-half hour to the Quadranglers.

"Si, Si, Senorita" was written by Ted Williams and Carleton S. Hadley, Washington alumni, who also wrote last year's Quadrangle success, "Ship Ahoy!" It has a cast of more than 80 students, including 50 co-eds. There are 18 musical numbers.

Members of the cast will sing the show's outstanding numbers in the broadcasts. In addition, a medley of tunes from "Si, Si, Senorita" will be played on two pianos by the composer of the score, Williams, and Miss Catherine Fink. Gilbert Moore, leading man; Mary McNatt, prima donna, and Doris Shumate, ingenue, will sing.

WIL will put the Quadranglers on the air at 8 p. m. Tuesday; KWK, 5:30 p. m. Friday, and KMOX at 6:30 p. m. Saturday.

Broadcasting a series of concerts by the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra over KMOX on consecutive Sunday afternoons, from 5 to 6 o'clock, is proposed as a basis for an advertising campaign for this city. The radio concerts would begin with the opening of the orchestra's season next fall. Carrying out the plan would depend on a successful outcome of the drive to raise a $750,000 fund for the orchestra for the next three years.

Plans to broadcast the solemn pontifical vespers service at the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception in Washington at 1:30 this afternoon have been abandoned because of time change complications.

The Columbia System has acquired WPG, Atlantic City, as a permanent link in its network and now has five stations, including KMOX, St. Louis; WABC, New York; WCCO, Minneapolis, and WBBO, Chicago. Some 70 other stations broadcast CBS programs. The entire station personnel, equipment and operation will be taken over May 1. WPG operates with 5000 watts on 1100 kilocycles, alongside of KMOX. It is seldom heard by St. Louisans, as KMOX "blankets" it. WPG first went on the air seven years ago as the municipal station of Atlantic City.

A new radio feature for children, "The Happy Jack Health Club," will begin over KWK at 5:30 p. m. next Wednesday by the Tuberculosis and Health Society of St. Louis. "Gypsy Gay," a member of the Health Talk Bureau of the society, will relate "Happy Jack's Adventures in Healthyland." These will be health stories and lessons in the guise of tales.

Last autumn "Gypsy Gay" visited most of the public and parochial schools here, telling a story of health illustrated and enlivened with a hand-animated monkey which she called "Happy Jack." This monkey became so real to the children, according to J. Ferd Oberwinder, chairman of the Educational Committee of the society, that it assumed definite characteristics and personality to the 55,000 children who saw it. "Happy Jack" will be the symbol of this new health club.

Withdrawal of Major J. Andrew White from active participation in broadcasting is announced by the Columbia system. Maj. White, one of the founders of the Columbia system, and a pioneer in broadcasting and wireless, has resigned from all executive duties, but will retain his stock holdings in Columbia.

"The date marks my twentieth year in radio," White said. "I want a good, long holiday and freedom from all responsibilities. I shall retain my interest in broadcasting, but no active engagement."

White was the first to describe a major sports event by radio. He was at one time public relations director for the Marconi Co. of America and editor of Ocean Wireless News, a newspaper published daily on ships at sea, and The Marconigraph. In 1913 he founded The Wireless Age, a radio magazine, and on organization of the Radio Corporation he was elected vice president and general manager of Wireless Press, Inc., a subsidiary of that company.

He built the first official R. C. A. station and completed and opened WDY, at Roselle Park, N. J. He supervised construction of the first WJZ in New York and WRC in Washington, D. C. In 1925, he became vice president of the Haynes-Griffin radio service, and shortly thereafter organized his own radio company. Since 1927, he has been one of the chief executives of the Columbia Broadcasting System, its first president and later its managing director.

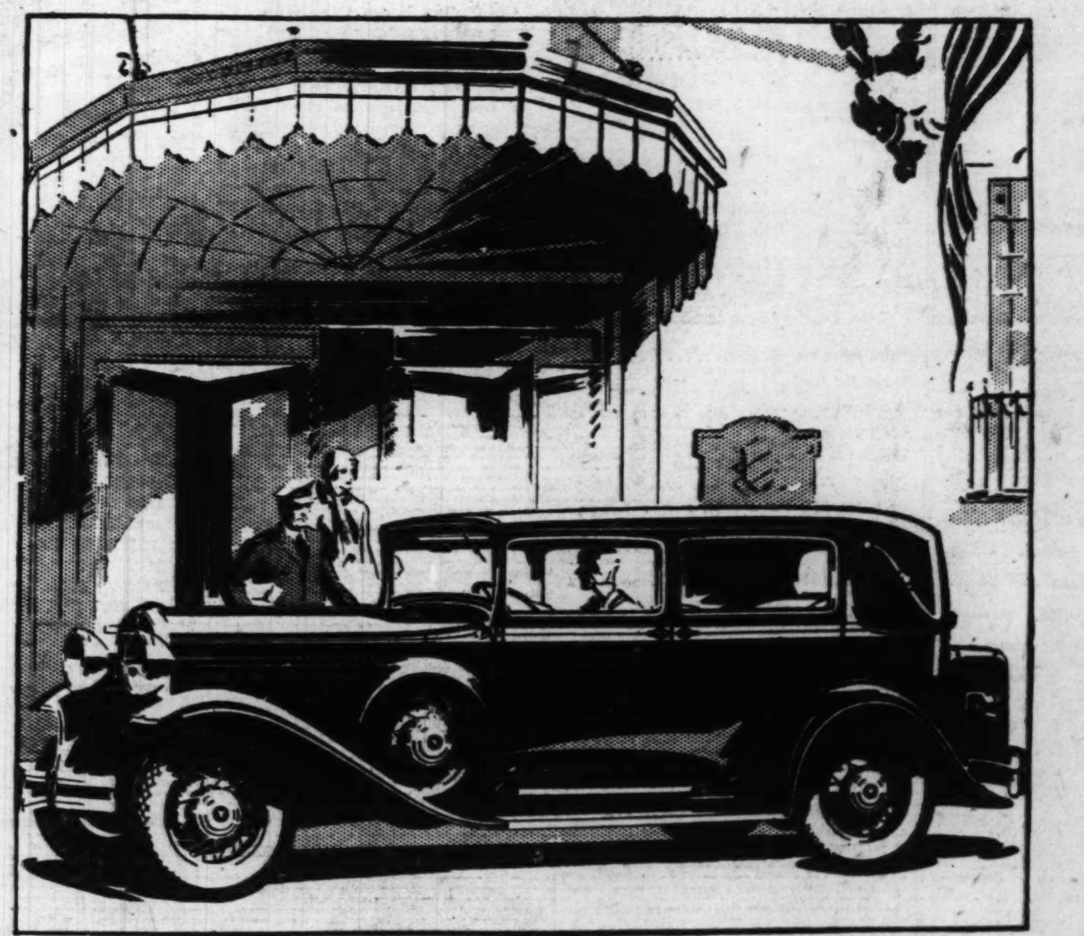
The newest and finest in 8-cylinder Quality and a New Scale of Low Ownership Costs



Come see how "Eights" have changed. There is no other way to know the latest in motordom.

For here is an Eight that provides all the superior qualities of its type with the low first cost and low maintenance cost of cars that heretofore dominated the medium priced field.

It means an "Eight"—a quality "Eight"—selling in the price range of "Sixes." It means an "Eight", with outstanding performance—operating on a remarkable economy scale. It means—in performance—a keenness and new zest that will bring back your first thrills in motoring.

Hudson's Great Eight vastly increases power in proportion to weight. Its performance is alert, free and active. You travel faster within the speed limits You are away quicker. You pick up faster. You level hills with ease. You have smoothness that makes the long journey free of fatigue. That reserve ability gives freedom from strain. It makes for a long life car. It almost doubles endurance. It assures minimum wear and repair needs.

Combined with this superlative mechanical development, Hudson's Great Eight, in beauty and rich distinction, of appointment, questions the wisdom of ever paying more for any car.

100 EARNING REPORTS FOR QUARTER OFF 17 PER CENT

PROFIT TAKING IN THE MARKET

Assortment of Utility, Amusement, Food and Specialty Issues Showed Sizeable Gains in First Quarter Profits.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 26.—The stocks market was subjected to a steady stream of profit taking and general liquidation last week, but speculation for the rise was vigorously pressed forward in some of the utilities, amusement and specialty shares.

The selling largely represented disappointment that business has shown but moderate gains in April, normally the month of peak activity. For the most part, however, offerings were well absorbed by large operators who feel that the long range view is encouraging. Speculation for the rise was largely concentrated in issues with interesting merger prospects, or in stock of companies which have been able to show good earnings for the first quarter.

First quarter earnings reports appeared thick and fast, causing belated recognition in some quarters of the extent of the industrial recession during the early months of the year. The first 100 companies to report for the quarter show an average reduction of nearly 17 per cent from the like period of 1929. A fairly sizeable assortment of utility, amusement, food and specialty issues, however, showed sizeable gains in first quarter profits.

Increase In Loans.

Another increase in brokers loans, amounting to more than $90,00,000, was not regarded as particularly auspicious in time of declining prices, although new bonds offerings may have been a factor in the increase. Nevertheless, the loan figures were interpreted in one quarter as indicating profit taking by investment trusts and other important interests.

Unsettling influences were reduction in the annual dividend rates of Chile Copper and Stewart Warner. Copper and a number of the motor, and motor accessory issues were depressed to new lows for the year.

Short selling became an important factor late in the week, and the more bullishly inclined regarded this as a favorable development, definitely improving the market's technical position.

Standard Oils of New Jersey, New York and California, Houston and a few others reached new high ground during the week.

Upturn in Utilities.

Rumors of mergers and extensive projects provided the basis for a further upturn in the public utility stocks although the advance was unevenly distributed. Consolidated Gas of New York was one of the features.

With the exception of Vanadium and A. N. Byers, the steel and pipe stocks failed to make much progress. Bethlehem reported first quarter earnings of $2.60 a share as against $4.05 in the first quarter of 1929.

Poor traffic and earnings reports had a depressing influence on the rail shares, although recent statements of some of the leading carriers have shown a smaller percentage of decline than some of the earlier reports this year.

Financing Pace Maintained.

New financing so far this year has kept abreast of the record-breaking pace attained in the corresponding period of 1929. The total of new offerings floated from Jan. 1 to date has reached $2,245,486,000, showing a decrease of only $246,923,000, or about 9 per cent as compared with the aggregate of $2,492,409,000 for the same period last year. A more or less significant change is to be noted in the character of the offerings, however, in that this year such new financing has been almost entirely in the form of bonds.

Of this year's total, bonds have constituted $2,009,738,000, contrasted with $1,224,564,000 a year ago. New stock offerings this year comprise only $235,748,000 of the aggregate, or more than $1,000,000,000 less than the total of $1,257,845,000 placed on the market up to this time in 1929.

MIXED CHANGES IN STOCK LIST; TRADE MODERATE

Net Gains and Losses Are About Evenly Balanced at the Close — Several Utilities and Specialties Bid Up.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 26.—Prices churned about rather confusedly in today's short session of the stock market, as they have during the greater part of the week. Several of the utilities and specialties, in which merger prospects or increased earnings provided fuel for speculative enthusiasm, were bid up to new high levels for the recovery, while several of the steels, motors and motor accessories, and rails, were under persistent selling pressure.

Retirement of short contracts caused moderate rallies here and there in the final realings, and net gains and losses were evenly balanced at the close, the index of 90 shares showing a fractional gain. Trading continued moderately active, the turnover for the two-hour trading period aggregating 2,315,690 shares.

Earning Reports Received.

Week-end trade and business reviews and such earnings statements as came to hand were for the most part not particularly encouraging. Standard Oil of New York reported profit for 1929 of $2.23 a share, a decrease of 5 cents from the previous year, but the report showed unusually heavy charge-offs, running about 15 per cent higher than a year ago. Caterpillar Tractor reported earnings of $1.79 a share for the first quarter, compared to $1.17 for the like period of last year, which caused a rise in the shares to a new high for the year. Although St. Louis Southwestern's earnings for March showed a large gain, other rails generally reported unsatisfactory results. The first 26 roads to report show an aggregate decline of 38 per cent from March, 1929.

Indications are that steel mill operations next week will show little change. Operations at Youngstown, which have been stepped up in recent weeks to meet increasing demands from automobile manufacturers, are expected to remain stationary at about 70 per cent of capacity. Wall street looks for continuance of comparatively cheap money during the month end settlement period, with large imports of gold from Brazil likely to provide a stabilizing factor.

United Corporation rose more than 3 points, and U. G. I. more than a point, to new highs for the year.

Other strong spots were Auto Strop, Columbia Graphophone, Foster Wheeler and General Foods, which rose 2 to 3 points to new highs for the year. General Electric and Radio were firm and United Aircraft rallied about 5 points.

Some of the Lower Stocks.

Such issues as American Can, American Rolling Mill, American Telephone, Colorado Fuel, Vanadium and Western Union lost 2 to 3 points. Diamond Match, a recent buoyant feature, fell back 10 points. Canada Dry, International Silver, Lackawanna and Stewart Warner were among issues touching new lows for the year or longer. Johns Manville dropped 5 points, duplicating its previous 1930 minimum.

In the commodity markets wheat sagged for a ime, but rallied and closed steady on reports of better export demand. Corn lost about 1 cent a bushel on further bearish weather. Raw sugar futures again touched new lows. Cotton closed barely steady 30 to 55 cents a bale lower.

Foreign exchanges eased, sterling cables ruling at $4.86 7-32, off ⅛.

IMPROVEMENT SHOWN IN THE BOND MARKET

Railroad Issues Tend Upward in Final Session of the Week.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 26.—The bond market improved in today's two-hour session. Rails found good support, considering the lightness of the trading, and prices in that department tended upward. Utilities and industrials, as well as United States Governments and foreign bonds, were duller than the carrier and generally firm.

Inquiry in the rails centered in the low coupon issues, Chesapeake & Ohio 4½s, unusually active, added three-quarters of a point to their friday close. Illinois Central refunding 4s advanced nearly two points on odd lot buying. St. Louis San Francisco 4½s rose 1⅛. Nickel Plate 4½s, Pere Marquette "C" 4½s, Southern Railway general juniors, Texas & Pacific "C" 5s, Missouri Pacific 5s and St. Paul adjustment 5s averaged half a point higher. Today's move, combined with yesterday's, represented the best demand for the carrier liens in about a month.

General Theaters Equipment 6s led the share feature list with a four-point rise. Pathe Exchange 7s and Shubert Theaters 6s advanced two points each. American Telephone 4½s slumped 1⅛ net on another small turnover.

American Telephone 5s, Consolidated Gas of New York 5½s, New York Telephone 4½s, Sinclair Crude Oil 5½s, Western Electric 5s, International Telephone 5s and International Mercantile Marine 6s worked into higher ground on better than average inquiry.

The only active obligation of the United States was the fourth Liberty, up a shade.

COTTON CLOSES STEADY AT 6 TO 11 POINT DECLINE

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 26.—Trading in cotton was comparatively quiet today with prices lower under scattering liquidation of near months and some selling of later deliveries which appeared to be prompted by reports of rains in the Southwest and the absence of any aggressive support. May contracts sold off to 15.88c, but recovered part of the loss on covering, closing at 15.98c, while the general market closed steady at net declines of 6 to 11 points. Spot, middling, 16.20c.

COTTON CLOSES STEADY AT 6 TO 11 POINT DECLINE

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 26.—Trading in cotton was comparatively quiet today with prices lower under scattering liquidation of near months and some selling of later deliveries which appeared to be prompted by reports of rains in the Southwest and the absence of any aggressive support. May contracts sold off to 15.88c, but recovered part of the loss on trade calling, closing at 15.98c, with the general market closing steady at net declines of 6 to 11 points. Spot, middling, 16.20c.

The opening was steady at a decline of 3 points to an advance of 4 points. There was some buying on the relatively steady ruling of Liverpool, but there was very little demand for old crop positions, and the market soon eased under liquidation. It looked as if some scattering long accounts carried over the first May notice day, or some of yesterday's earlier buyers were liquidating in the near months owing to the failure of the stopping of notices to stimulate a more aggressive demand. Meanwhile the reports of rains in Texas and Oklahoma brought in some selling of new crop positions with the new October contract selling off to 14.72c or 13 points net lower. July declined to 15.99c, compared with 16.13c at the close of the previous day. Closing prices showed rallies of 7 or 10 points on old crop positions on grade buying which was attributed to price fixing, while later deliveries closed within a point or two of the lowest. The closing quotation for May was 8 points under July, but 124 points over the new October.

Much of the day's business was attributed to week-end evening-up of accounts, promoted to some extent, perhaps, by uncertainty as to whether the rains reported in the Southwest had been sufficient to relieve drouthy conditions, while there also appeared to be continued uncertainty over the near-month situation. Liverpool cables did not fully meet the local decline of yesterday, according to cable advice received in the trade here, the market there influenced by continental buying and trade calling, together with an improvement in the demand for cotton cloths from the continent and South America. The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 78,000 bales, against 97,000 last year.

ERRATIC COURSE TO PRICES ON THE CURB

Gains and Losses Are About Evenly Divided at the Close.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 26.—Prices on the New York Curb market were churned about in rather erratic fashion today with gains and losses about evenly divided at the close. Trading was fairly heavy for a half holiday session, the day's sales running over 800,000 shares.

American Superpower was again the leader of the utility group, crossing 39 to a new high on a tremendous turnover. American Gas and Electric ran up more than seven points to a new high at 156⅝, but lost part of its gain. Electric Bond and Share and Niagara Hudson, two of the recent leaders, showed little change. Cities Service showed a small decline. North American Light and Power and Commonwealth Edison were heavy.

Driver Harris manufacturer of chrome nickel and other alloy products, was whirled across pan for a gain of more than 7 points, most of which was retained. Columbia Pictures issues again moved into new high ground. Agfa-Ansco issues, Metal and Mining, New York, Rio and Buenos Aires Airplane, and a few other specialities also reached new high levels.

Except for an advance of nearly three points in Gulf Oil and the establishment of a new high by Carib Syndicate, there were few changes of interest in the oil group.

General Electric of Germany warrants broke 165 points on one sale. Further decline also developed in Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea, which ordinarily changes hands in small lots. Struther Wells declined to a new low for the year. Investment, trust and trading corporation issues moved within narrow and irregular limits.

A Low-Priced BARGAIN STOCK

FROM hundreds of listed securities we have chosen a low-priced issue that appeals to us as meeting all the qualifications of an outstanding Bargain Stock. It should be bought by all foresighted investors.

This stock we now are strongly recommending in the form of a Special Stock Market letter.

Our last Special Letter advocated the purchase of General Electric. It was described as one of the best buys on the board. General Electric was available to our subscribers February 24 at 72¾. In a little over ONE MONTH General Electric reached 92¼. Here is a profit of 33% on a 50% marginal basis in LESS THAN SIX WEEKS!

As indicated above, we have now discovered another Bargain Stock. While this security is low-priced, it represents nevertheless one of our Premier Industrials.

We believe that the immediate purchase of this low-priced issue will return most desirable profits over the NEAR TERM as well as the long term. We do not believe, however, that this stock will long be available at current deflated levels.

If you wish to take advantage of this unusual opportunity while it is still available, simply send us your name and address and a copy of the Special Letter recommending this Bargain Stock will be sent to you without cost or obligation. Simply address:

DRY GOODS MARKET REVIEW

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 26.—Cotton goods markets were quiet today with scattered covering on quick requirements at firm prices. Reports indicated good sales volume in coarse yarn gray goods during the week, and some gains in fine and fancy cloths. Burlap markets were unchanged, cables from Calcutta indicating no new developments that might disturb jute mill operations. Spot raw silks were unchanged and dull. Some inquiry was current for late summer and early fall deliveries.

MAY WHEAT SELLS DOWN TO 99 CENTS, NEW LOW ON CROP

Rebounds Near Close, However, for Net Advance of Small Fraction on Reported Indications of Good Export Business.

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, April 26.—Report of indication of good export buying of North American wheat brought about a late rebound in wheat futures today after May wheat had sold down to 99c, a new low for the season. The downturn was credited to reports of rain in the Southwest. It was the first time May wheat was below $1 on the season. Corn closed lower on comment of prospect of larger movement to market.

In the cash grain market soft wheat was steady to 1c lower. Receipts, which were light did not include any choice No. 2, but there was a fair local demand and offerings cleared closely. The chief buyers were local elevators. Sales of No. 2 were on a basis 7c to 10c above the Chicago May figure and No. 3 at 5½c to 7c above. Hard wheat was up 1c. Supplies were light and there was a pretty good inquiry, especially for country-run winters and low protein blending wheat. Sales of country-run No 1 were on a basis 2c above the Chicago May figure and No. 3 yellow 1½c above. Corn was steady to 2c lower. The basis as compared to futures was off ½c and 2c. There was a fair demand and the available supply cleared pretty well. Oats were down ½c to 1c. The chief purchasers at the decline were mills and elevators.

Opening fractionally lower, wheat futures recorded further losses early, May going down more than cent and September a cent. Winnipeg declined more than a cent early. Liverpool closed ⅝ to ¾d lower. July corn sold fractionally lower early.

May wheat opened at 99¾c, July wheat $1.01½ and September wheat $1.04⅝.

Local wheat receipts, which were 51,800 bushels, compared with 148,400 a week ago and 71,400 a year ago, included 22 cars local and 15 through. Corn receipts, which were 78,400 bushels, compared with 152,600 a week ago and 72,800 a year ago, included 51 cars local and 5 through. Oats receipts, which were 90,200 bushels, compared with 184,800 a week ago and 52,800 a year ago, included 34 cars local and 7 through. Hay receipts were 12 cars local and 11 through.

MAY WHEAT MAKES NEW LOW, REBOUNDING ABRUPTLY

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 26.—Abrupt late advances in wheat values today contrasted sharply with earlier downward swings that tumbled May contracts to below any price record heretofore this season. Indications of big export buying of North American wheat did much to bring about the swift change of the market from weakness to strength. Besides, during the late dealings, May wheat appeared to be getting staunch support from aggressive buying on the part of Farm Board allies.

Closing quotations on wheat were firm at the same as yesterday's close to ⅛c higher, with corn ⅜c-1¼c down, oats ⅛-½c off, and provisions unchanged to a setback of 5s.

At first the wheat market showed pronounced weakness today, owing to general rains Southwest and West affording relief for crops.

After wheat prices here had tumbled uncomfortably close to a dollar-per-bushel basis, however, buying of big lines of wheat tightened up the market in surprisingly quick fashion. Much of the purchasing was for previous speculative sellers who were collecting profits, but there was also buying of May wheat, which appeared to be for the National Grain Stabilization Corporation. May advanced faster than other months in the late trade, and there was talk that cash wheat is now at a level to share in the world's demand.

Despite the late strength in the wheat market, corn was heavy, with pit speculators good sellers on prospects of a larger movement of corn to market in the immediate future. December corn sold at a new low price record for the season. Oats went lower, sympathizing with other grain, and because weather conditions were favorable for oats growth.

Liquidation sales of May lard had a depressing effect on provisions, nothwithstanding firmness of the hog market.

LOWER RANGE TO HOG PRICES DURING WEEK

Dressed Pork in Eastern Wholesale Centers Finds a Dull Outlet.

NATIONAL STOCKYARDS, Ill., April 26.—(United States Department of Agriculture.)—Under moderately light supplies and a good demand early in the week, all of the major killing classes scored advances, but buyers became bearish again at midweek, when the dressed trade failed to show much of any improvement and all of the earlier gains on steers and a good share of the upturn in fat cow prices were wiped out. Vealers were subjected to considerable pressure and hit a new low level since May 26, 1927. Compared with a week ago, steers sold mostly steady; mixed yearlings and heifers largely 25c higher, choice light kinds 50c up; cows steady to 25c higher; low cutters and bulls steady; vealers 75c lower; stocker and feeder steers steady to 25c higher; stock cows and heifers unchanged. Tops for week: 1287-pound steers, $14; 588-pound heifers, $13.15; 775-pound yearlings and 592-pound mixed yearlings, $13; cows, $9.65; medium bulls, $7.75; vealers, $11.25; feeder steers, $11.50. Two loads of steers scaling 1349 and 1493 pounds sold at $11.50 and $12.15, while two or more loads of well finished 1300-pound averages reached $12.75. About six loads of medium weights averaging 1203 to 1287 pounds went at $11.35 to $14, while others tipping the scales at 1100 to 1178 pounds ranged from $10.25 to $12.60; bulk, $10.65 to $12.10. Light-weight steers held a spread from $8.75 to $13, bulk $9.35 to $12.40, while bulk of all steers cleared at $9.50 to $12.40. Most of the fat steers brought $11.75 to $12.65, fat mixed yearlings and heifers, $11 to $11.85; medium grades principally $10 to $10.75; cows, $7.25 to $8.50; low cutters, $4.50 to $5.25; stocker and feeder steers, $8.50 to $10.75. At the close of the week top and bulk of good and choice vealers brought $10.50. Last year the corresponding week bulk and top prices were as follows: Steers, $12 to $14; top, $14.50; fat mixed yearlings and heifers, $13.50 to $14; top, $15; medium grades, $12 to $13; cows, $9 to $10.50; top, $12; low cutters, $6.50 to $7.25; top vealers, $17; top sausage bulls, $10; stocker and feeder steers, $10 to $11.25; top, $12.80.

Hog Prices Down.

Hog receipts this week approximated 73,700 compared with actual arrivals of 75,100 last week and 73,293 corresponding week last year. Dressed pork in Eastern wholesale centers continued to find a dull, weak outlet and live prices were reduced in the face of slightly diminished marketings. Shipments were limited during the early sessions of the week but increased later with the lower prices stimulating orders from Eastern killers. For the Saturday to Saturday period net losses of 15c to 30c were recorded with lighter weight material mostly 25c or more off. Pigs and sows shared the downturns. The Saturday session was quoted steady to 10c lower than Friday and a good clearance was effected this way. Top price was fixed at $10.20 for load lots though a part load of choice lightweights touched $10.25. Bulk of 160 to 230 lb. averages cleared at $10.10 to $10.20 and a few part loads of 240 to 250 lb. butchers realized $10.00 and $10.05; heavies were lacking, though 280 to 300 lb. descriptions were considered salable at $9.75 to $9.90, possibly a little better. Most 130 to 150 lb. light lights turned at $9.50 to $10.00 and 100 to 130 lb. pigs at $9.00 to $9.50. Packing sows bulked at $8.75, a few $8.85.

Shep and lamb receipts approximated 7000 this week compared with 11,049 last week and 3879 corresponding week last year. Lighter receipts enabled sellers to obtain higher prices for lambs and quotations were pushed nearly 50c up the scale. During the latter half of the week packers were bearish and the trend was lower though a net gain of 25 to 50c was maintained. Hardly enough of any class were offered late to test values. Spring lambs were in lighter supply than last week and sold unevenly. Fat ewes, though scarce, found a limited demand and ruled weak to 25c lower. Several loads of choice wooled lambs sold early in the week up to $9.75 with bulk for the period at $9 to $9.75. No choice kinds were offered late. A city butcher paid up to $9.50 for a deck of choice clipped lambs, while bulk of this class turned at $8.50 to $9.25 and most late sales were made below $9. Packers paid $12.50 to $13 for desirable springers while city butchers paid as high as $14.75 for small lots of specialties. Wooled ewe bulked at $4 to $5.50 and clipped ewes cashed at $5 and below. A deck of 92-lb. two-year-old wethers realized $6.50.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NATIONAL STOCKYARDS, Ill., April 26.—The horse and mule market for the week was fairly active generally, and values were steady to lower. There was no special demand for mules but a decent mule of any class sold. Good work horses 1200 pounds up were in demand but the littler types were weaker.

WEEKLY METAL REVIEW

NEW YORK, April 26.—Export demand for copper tapered off last week, after foreign consumers were said to have bought about 40,000 tons for prompt shipment thus far in April. Heavy selling in the London futures market, which caused further weakness in quotations there may have checked demand. Domestic fabricators continued to restrict purchases to limited quantities for immediate needs. Some metal for May-June shipment was reported offered at concessions, although large producers were holding steady at 14c delivered in the Connecticut Valley. Activity of electrical equipment industries is considered an encouraging feature.

Lead was very steady considering the weakness abroad. Consuming interest failed to improve and was largely for requirements, most orders calling for prompt shipment.

Zinc was a fraction easier, however there was no important selling pressure despite the small demand.

New York Sugar.

NEW YORK, April 26.—Raw sugar was unchanged today. Buyers were interested only in nearby shipment supplies. Sales reported were 7000 bags of Cuban for prompt shipment to an outport refiner and 53,000 bags to a local refiner at 3.39, duty paid.

Futures opened unchanged to 1 point lower under liquidation and selling by houses with Cuban and European connections, but showed a fairly steady undertone thereafter. Covering by trade interest against sales in spot and some new outside buying in distant deliveries absorbed the offerings and there were partial rallies. The market closed unchanged to 1 point net lower. Approximate sales, 23,250 tons. No. 2 contracts closed net unchanged to 1 point lower with no sales. Final prices: No. 1 May, 1.57c; July, 1.59c; September, 1.66c; December, 1.75c; January, 1.77c; March, 1.83c; No. 2 May, 3.47c; July, 3.49c; September, 3.57c; December, 3.69c.

REAL ESTATE

SITE OPPOSITE NEW TELEPHONE PROJECT SOLD

Negotiations Said to Be Concluded for 250 Feet on Olive by 69 Feet on Beaumont, Southwest Corner.

STORE EXPECTED ON U. CITY HALL SITE

Exchange of Municipal Building for Woman's Magazine Tower Lacks Only Aldermanic Action.

By Berry Moore.

Negotiations have been concluded, it is understood, for the southwest corner of Olive street and Beaumont avenue by interests which have plans completed for the erection of a representative structure on the site. The site is owned by Frank Yawitz, real estate operator. Pending final papers in the transaction, the identity of the purchaser will be withheld, it is stated.

Speculative interest is keen as to the price involved for this property, which has a frontage of 250 feet on Olive with a depth of 69 feet on Beaumont. The depth was reduced to 40 feet in the widening of Olive street.

The northeast corner of Olive street and Beaumont avenue was purchased a year ago by the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., which is erecting a building on the site for the terminal equipment of its $50,000,000 underground cable system, now under construction. This site, which has a frontage on Olive of 225 feet by a depth of 127 feet, was assembled at prices ranging from $500 a foot to $1000 a front foot. Negotiations were handled in this instance by the Mercantile Commerce Bank & Trust Co.

Retail Structure on Delmar.

A large retail structure is predicted for the City Hall block in University City, with negotiations for exchanging it for the Woman's Magazine and Press building at the northwest corner of Delmar boulevard and Harvard avenue, practically concluded and awaiting only ratification by the Board of Aldermen of that municipality. The plan for the exchange of these properties was disclosed exclusively in the Post-Dispatch several weeks ago.

A downtown department store is said to be available as a tenant for a branch store on a modern scale in this block. Several nationally known chain stores are also said to be regarded as potential lessees of quarters in the block, which is essentially one for large retail stores.

The University City Hall block is to be acquired by the Jeanette Realty Co., owner of the Woman's Magazine and Press building. The company, of which Nathan Frank, a former Congressman, is president, has ample capital available, it is said, for the erection of a building on a scale with the importance of this block, which has a frontage of 365 feet on Delmar boulevard with a depth of 165 feet.

The estimated value of the City Hall property is $365,000, which is based on the price paid by the S. S. Kresge Co. for the northwest corner of Delmar boulevard and Heman avenue, 100 by 100 feet, which was at the rate of $1000 a foot on Delmar. The Kresge site, however, has a second frontage on Enright avenue, which materially enhances its value. No allowance is made for the City Hall building and engine house, since they are not adapted to commercial use, according to Eugene D. Ruth, Mayor of University City. The site was purchased in 1909 for $30,000.

The possibilities of this block, which, if realized, would greatly augment the importance of this section as a business center, is expected to be a factor in lending renewed buoyancy to real estate on Delmar boulevard. Property on Delmar boulevard between Hamilton avenue and University City has been in noteworthy demand since the completion of the viaduct over the Wabash tracks at Hodiamont avenue.

Woman's Magazine Building.

The Weman's Magazine Building, comprising five stories, and octagonal in design, has dimensions of 85 feet between parallel sides and floor space of 27,500 square feet. The press building, 107 by 244 feet, now rented by a storage company, is two stories in height, with a floor area of 70,000 square feet. About 54,000 square feet, which would not be needed, could be rented for $10,000 to $12,000 a year, it was suggested by Ruth.

The additional space would also

Negotiations Said to Be Concluded for 250 Feet on Olive by 69 Feet on Beaumont, Southwest Corner.

STORE EXPECTED ON U. CITY HALL SITE

Exchange of Municipal Building for Woman's Magazine Tower Lacks Only Aldermanic Action.

By Berry Moore.

Negotiations have been concluded, it is understood, for the southwest corner of Olive street and Beaumont avenue by interests which have plans completed for the erection of a representative structure on the site. The site is owned by Frank Yawitz, real estate operator. Pending final papers in the transaction, the identity of the purchaser will be withheld, it is stated.

Speculative interest is keen as to the price involved for this property, which has a frontage of 250 feet on Olive with a depth of 69 feet on Beaumont. The depth was reduced to 40 feet in the widening of Olive street.

The northeast corner of Olive street and Beaumont avenue was purchased a year ago by the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., which is erecting a building on the site for the terminal equipment of its $50,000,000 underground cable system, now under construction. This site, which has a frontage on Olive of 225 feet by a depth of 127 feet, was assembled at prices ranging from $500 a foot to $1000 a front foot. Negotiations were handled in this instance by the Mercantile Commerce Bank & Trust Co.

Retail Structure on Delmar.

A large retail structure is predicted for the City Hall block in University City, with negotiations for exchanging it for the Woman's Magazine and Press building at the northwest corner of Delmar boulevard and Harvard avenue, practically concluded and awaiting only ratification by the Board of Aldermen of that municipality. The plan for the exchange of these properties was disclosed exclusively in the Post-Dispatch several weeks ago.

A downtown department store is said to be available as a tenant for a branch store on a modern scale in this block. Several nationally known chain stores are also said to be regarded as potential lessees of quarters in the block, which is essentially one for large retail stores.

The University City Hall block is to be acquired by the Jeanette Realty Co., owner of the Woman's Magazine and Press building. The company, of which Nathan Frank, a former Congressman, is president, has ample capital available, it is said, for the erection of a building on a scale with the importance of this block, which has a frontage of 365 feet on Delmar boulevard with a depth of 165 feet.

The estimated value of the City Hall property is $365,000, which is based on the price paid by the S. S. Kresge Co. for the northwest corner of Delmar boulevard and Heman avenue, 100 by 100 feet, which was at the rate of $1000 a foot on Delmar. The Kresge site, however, has a second frontage on Enright avenue, which materially enhances its value. No allowance is made for the City Hall building and engine house, since they are not adapted to commercial use, according to Eugene D. Ruth, Mayor of University City. The site was purchased in 1909 for $30,000.

The possibilities of this block, which, if realized, would greatly augment the importance of this section as a business center, is expected to be a factor in lending renewed buoyancy to real estate on Delmar boulevard. Property on Delmar boulevard between Hamilton avenue and University City has been in noteworthy demand since the completion of the viaduct over the Wabash tracks at Hodiamont avenue.

Woman's Magazine Building.

The Woman's Magazine Building, comprising five stories, and octagonal in design, has dimensions of 85 feet between parallel sides and floor space of 27,500 square feet. The press building, 107 by 244 feet, now rented by a storage company, is two stories in height, with a floor area of 70,000 square feet. About 54,000 square feet, which would not be needed, could be rented for $10,000 to $12,000 a year, it was suggested by Ruth.

The additional space would also make it possible to establish a municipal library, which has been urged for several years. Space in the press building adjoining the octagonal building also is being considered for the engine house. Plans contemplate equipping the basement of the Magazine Building for the jail.

The Magazine building and the Press Building are valued at $550,000 and the ground is said to be worth $300,000. It is to be traded subject to a $75,000 deed of trust which University City would assume.

The site, comprising 3½ acres, exclusive of the buildings, was appraised by Charles J. Daly of Daly & McCabe, president of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange, at $301,500, by Cyrus Crane Wilmore at $300,000, and by M. H. Rodemyer at $309,750.

Alterations to Cost $30,000.

Architects state that the Magazine Building would be suitable for use as a city hall after alterations and repairs not exceeding $30,000, it was said. Present zoning restrictions prevent erecting of apartment buildings on the site of the Magazine Building, but if such restrictions were removed, it was suggested, the value of the tract would be increased appreciably.

During the last two years negotiations have been on several times for the Woman's Magazine Building, which was sought by life insurance companies for general offices. The Southern Surety Co. was among the prospective purchasers of the building. Frank formerly owned the Egyptian Building.

Several leases for quarters on Delmar boulevard west of Skinker road were reported the past week. These included that of the northwest corner of Delmar boulevard and Skinker avenue, to the Servel Electric Refrigerator Co., which has headquarters at 2906 Washington avenue.

KINGSHIGHWAY NORTHWEST NOW A FINISHED ARTERY

Stretch Between Penrose Park and West Florissant Has 26-Foot Roadways Separated by a Parked Strip.

Kingshighway Northwest is now a finished thoroughfare between Penrose Park at Kingshighway and West Florissant avenue, consisting of two 26-foot roadways separated by a parked strip. The last unit, one of the roadways between Lillian and Lucille avenues, was finished yesterday with asphaltic pavement. This thoroughfare swings in a great curve across the northwestern part of the city, affording a new direct route to northern St. Louis County and the new Chain of Rocks and Lewis and Clark bridges.

From West Florissant avenue to Hall's Ferry road there is a 20-foot concrete pavement which eventually will form one roadway of a similarly parked street. A traffic circle is to be built at the city limits at the junction of Kingshighway Northwest, Hall's Ferry road, Goodfellow avenue and the new road to the new Lewis and Clark bridges to be built by the State. From this point to Broadway and Riverview drive one more link of Kingshighway Northwest remains to be built. This cannot be done until the city can finance an underlying sewer for Maline Creek.

All other links of the Kingshighway boulevard system, which stretches from Carondelet to Baden, are completed, except the drve through Christy Park, just south of Gravois avenue, which the Park Division is finishing now.

NEW FOREST GARDENS APTS.

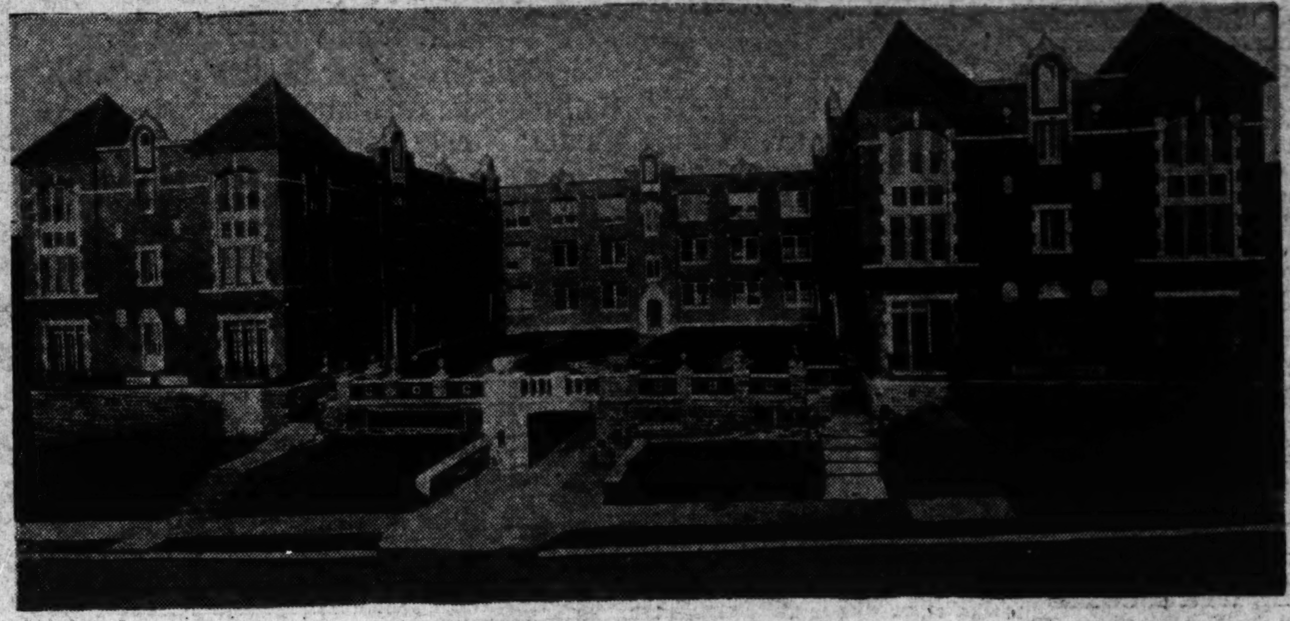
1016-24 ART HILL PLACE 6400 WEST ON OAKLAND—½ BLOCK SOUTH OF FOREST PARK



BEN SHAPIRO, ARCHITECT

NOW OPEN FOR YOUR INSPECTION, apartments among the finest in St. Louis. An ideal location for those who wish to live at Forest Park. Within walking distance of the Art Museum, Zoo, Arena, Missouri Riding Academy, Bird Cage, Golf Links, Tennis Courts and the Municipal Opera.

HERE is a spacious court, 75 feet wide, elaborately landscaped with shrubs and flowers, in the center of which is a terra cotta and tile fountain.

ALL apartments have two exposures; some have three. Special features include colored tile walls in bathroom with shower and linen closet. Another feature is abundant closet space; some three-room apartments having as many as six closets.

LIVING ROOMS have panelled walls with distinctive decorations in lead and oil. All woodwork is in satin finish. Bedrooms will be painted in any chosen color, to suit your individual taste!

KITCHENS are equipped with individual General Electric Refrigerators, White Swan Gas Ranges, with heat control, and built-in reversible ventilating fans which insure odorless apartments. All kitchens have a rear porch.

ALL apartments have large bedrooms and concealed beds. Special designed modernistic electric fixtures with indirect lighting effect.

OTHER features for comfort are complete roof insulation against heat and cold, also weatherstripping throughout the building.

THE steam-heated garage is under the court leaving the entire basement—10,000 square feet—for laundry space and lockers. The laundries are equipped with built-in tubs, ranges and automatic gas dryers.

RENTALS INCLUDE HEAT, GAS, ELECTRICITY, HOT WATER and General Electric Refrigeration. Ranging in price from $75.00 to $92.50. Garage $7.50 extra. Only two apartments left with two bedrooms.

ALTHOUGH there are few choice apartments remaining, we, however, suggest you inspect one of the most beautiful court apartment buildings in the city.

WE HONESTLY BELIEVE THAT THERE ARE HUNDREDS OF PERSONS IN THIS CITY who would buy the beautiful home at 6940 Delmar—practically new, 100-foot lot, 6 bedrooms, 3 baths,—if they knew the property and the very unusual conditions under which it can be bought. We doubt if there is another such opportunity in the entire city at this time.

If you can use such a property, see it by all means. It is a PREFERRED SERVICE LISTING

DO AS WISE MEN DO

The motor wise buyer knows there is greater dollar for dollar value to be had in a good, reliable used car than in a new car of equal price. Our business is built solely on merchandising dependable used cars. Old customers returning time and again for newer or different model cars give proof of our success in giving satisfaction and service.

IN MEMORIAM

BERGMANN—In loving memory of our dear mother, Mrs. Mary Bergmann, who passed away one year ago, April 29, 1929.
We are lonely, yes, for mother,
In the year that passed away,
And we know she will always guide us
Till we meet again some day.
She is happily reunited
With her pal, our father, dear
In the Beautiful Isle of Somewhere,
They await their children there.
Mother your memory is as sweet today as the day you passed away.
HER CHILDREN.

BRINKER—William Palleeck Brinker, who departed this life April 25, 1927:
There is someone who misses you sadly,
And finds the time long since you went;
There is someone who thinks of you always
And tries to be brave and content
Gone is the face we loved so dear,
Silent the voice we loved to hear;
It's sad but true, we wonder why,
The best are always the first to die.
Sadly missed by PARENTS, SISTER AND ALL WHO LOVED HIM. (c)

'Though you left us a sad year ago.
Sadly missed by
HUSBAND AND CHILDREN. (c)

SALESMEN WANTED

MR. SALESMAN

ANALYZE the sort of selling job that you want—the job that will pay you the greatest return for the time invested. Your analysis will probably include and stress the following points:

1. An item or product that has already created a wide demand in diversified fields.
2. That appeals to all kinds of business activity—manufacturers, jobbers, distributors, banks, insurance companies, public utilities, etc.
3. That repeats several times a year.
4. That has little or no active competition.
5. That will interest a man who has earned $8000 to $10,000 per year or more.
6. That can be sold in units to suit the individual customers.
7. For which leads and inquiries are constantly being received and furnished to the salesmen in their respective territories.
8. Because of the fact that the item or product is known and universally used, the sales presentation can be brief and thereby make possible a maximum number of calls per day.

WE have such a product and are prepared to show you how closely what we have to sell conforms to the above eight points.

THE product is new, is one for which there is a tremendous demand, and—it is a virgin deal.

IT is a service used by sales organizations to stimulate and increase sales. It has already proven its result-getting value through actual use by nationally known organizations. Nevertheless, it is a brand-new idea and therefore offers a virgin opportunity to the salesman.

MEN who have a record of success in the field of intangible selling—who are accustomed to an income of $7500 per year or more, and who appreciate an opportunity to form a commission connection with a company rated AAA1, which has a record of achievement covering more than a quarter of a century, may telephone MR. DALTON F. BURNS, at the Jefferson Hotel, on Sunday and Monday. If you can answer our questions satisfactorily over the telephone you will be given a personal interview.

Special Sales Representative

A company which has been the recognized international leader in its field for 65 years requires an outstanding sales representative.

The man chosen will possess:

FIRST, intimate acquaintance with and facilities to reach quickly a wide circle of industrial executives.

SECOND, outstanding sales ability as reflected in an established record of selling to this type of executives.

A THIRD desirable, but not absolutely essential requisite, is a well-grounded knowledge of machinery—its purposes and functions, industrial plant operation and conditions. A mechanical engineering education would be helpful.

In addition to telling us that you possess the foregoing qualifications, please state age and in chronological order your education, experience and salary earned.

Salary will be commensurate with fitness for the work and ability to get results. Applications will be treated in confidence.

Address Box J-225, Post-Dispatch.

STALKING REPTILES in the Central American Jungles

Day-by-Day Adventures That Befell the St. Louis Zoo's Expedition Headed by R. Marlin Perkins.

Terresa stood in the bow with his harpoon poised.

By ROBERT W. SAFFORD
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff

"FOR a thriller, try harpooning crocodiles at night with a drunken native in a tipsy cayuca."

R. Marlin Perkins, chief of the St. Louis Zoo's Central American expedition, sighed as he wrote that entry in his diary. It was midnight. His muscles still ached from the effort of balancing the cranky, dug-out canoe and now writing, under the flickering flame of a candle stuck in a beer bottle, was making his head ache.

At the other side of the thin-partitioned hotel room, his partner in the reptile-collection trip, R. J. Moody Lentz, lay in bed under mosquito netting, alternately shining and extinguishing a flashlight to quiet three rope-bound crocodiles that thumped and twisted on the floor.

Outside the tropical stillness was broken only by the buzz of insects and the occasional call of nocturnal birds. San Pedro de Sula, like most of the other towns in Spanish Honduras, was asleep. The hard mattress, the iron frame, the worn mosquito netting of Perkins' bed jutted invitingly from a far wall. But keeping a log was one of the duties of the chief of the expedition. It was March 19, only eight days before the reptile hunters would start back to St. Louis. Perkins sighed again and scribbled on:

"After supper, Bonilla (Araman Bonilla, owner of a large ranch at San Pedro), Moody and I, Terresa, an English-speaking Negro, and two of Terresa's sons, got into a cayuca with our lights. The two sons paddled. The rest of us were using the lights to try and spot the red eyes of crocodiles. Terresa stood in the bow with his harpoon, poised like the true hunter he is.

"BEFORE long I spotted a pair of eyes, close to the water's edge and red like live coals. Terresa picked them up with his light and the rest of us extinguished ours. Slowly and noiselessly, the paddlers eased the boat toward shore. Before long we could make out the upper part of the head, lying just above water. Closer and closer we came until Terresa, with his long harpoon, could almost touch the creature. He raised his arm to strike, but the 'croc' dove. A long stream of bubbles indicated the direction he had taken.

"Quickly the boat was turned and we drifted in slow pursuit. Presently Terresa motioned toward the corner of the lake, and again the stalk began. This time he dove again and we lost track.

"Then back to the edge of the lake until we had spotted another. This one was less wary, and with a quick thrust, Terresa stuck the harpoon into him. Down he went and the water boiled. Up he came with a loud slap of his jaws against the cayuca. One of the paddlers, sitting half over the edge—our freeboard was not over six inches—giggled and settled himself in the bottom of the boat. The croc missed his haunches by inches, but it didn't seem to bother the boy.

"After a tussle of about 10 minutes, during which he dove and sulked on the bottom and swam and fought like a game fish, the croc gave up and we were able to tie his jaws shut and haul him aboard to be hog-tied. Terresa pulled out the harpoon and we shifted the croc into another cayuca. Again we stalked and again Terresa missed. And again and again Bonilla whispered in my ear that a cousin of Terresa had died two weeks previously and that the hunter was still drunk and could not judge distance. That was a comforting thought.

"For three hours we hunted and got two more crocodiles. The last one we stalked was a big one with eyes large enough, judging from the six-footer we caught, to be all of ten feet in length. Fortunately for us, perhaps, Terresa missed and we called it a night and came in."

The crocodile hunt was but one incident in six weeks of adventure. Mountain lions stalked the hunters in the darkness; sharks swam hungrily about the launch that labored with them through 100 miles of rough seas—and the possibility of snake bite was always present.

None of these things, however, bothered the young men as much as did the scarcity of reptiles, the rapid passage of the inadequate time allotted for the trip and the delays that were caused by natives and officials who could not be made to hurry.

"Up at 5 o'clock," Perkins wrote in the diary of February 15, "with little sleep on the damn hard cots we bought in Balboa. The two light blankets were not nearly enough cover. I got really cold before morning. Carlos was hired as guide, and we started just after light to the mountains south and east of camp. Saw plenty of fresh tapir tracks as well as small cat (ocelot, probably), agouti and lizard tracks. Until about 11 o'clock we found no snakes, then Moody saw a small snake in the leaves in the dry stream bed. It is similar to the racers, but has a differently-shaped head. Returning in the afternoon, we caught a long, green snake as it was taking a drink in the stream. It was wild country we were in, but in this dry season the ground was mighty dry. The native told us in Spanish that many big Bebero (bad snake) lived in the hills. Bebero is the local name for bush master and fer-de-lance. This evening we took lights and went into another section of the hills. Until midnight we walked and looked and searched — no luck. Maybe tomorrow will not be so cruel."

The expedition at this time was in virgin jungle at a Government construction camp, headquarters for the men who are building a concrete road upon which materials to construct the Madden Dam, a power project, will be hauled. Already, three days after arriving in Panama, the disappointment that marked the first part of the expedition was becoming noticeable in the diary.

"Sunday and all the white men have gone to town/" was the next day's entry. "Moody and I went north to the Chilibre River which spread out to about the size of the Meramec. In the lowlands, on the banks of the stream are hummocks similar to those in Florida where snakes are so plentiful. At the edge of a banana farm, where some brush and weeds had been piled, we ran out a culebra mico, or rat snake. It was alive with ticks, but a nice large specimen. Back in the hummocks we found a snake similar in markings to the copperhead, but of a dark brown color. It nearly got away under the roots of a tree. At 1 o'clock, Carlos came to take us into territory where 'many big bad snakes' lived. We tramped the afternoon away in hills similar to those of yesterday without luck. This being the dry season, the snakes that surely live in the hills probably travel to damp localities. At night, Moody and I tramped the road in hopes of getting one crossing. My feet are getting sore from the water and heat. Both of us are getting coats of tan.

"When we came to this camp, Dr. Bartlett stayed in Ancon. He has to give an address at the Medical Society of the Zone on the eighteenth. Because of the irregularity of transportation, he was afraid he could not get back in time."

Dr. Willard Bartlett, 53 Westmoreland place, met Lentz and Perkins in New Orleans and accompanied them on the first part of their trip. He returned home about two weeks before they did.

ONE of the prime objects of the expedition was to catch a bush master, one of the two most dangerous snakes in the world. It sometimes attains a length of more than 15 feet, is deadly poisonous and will attack without provocation, while most poisonous snakes bite only in self-defense. Eighteen days of the expedition were spent in a vain hunt for bush masters. On February 17 Perkins wrote:

"A native told us of a bush master being killed and buried. We dug and found most of the skeleton. It had fangs about the size of a six-foot rattlesnake. The vertebrae were very large and loosely articulated. The natives always bury snakes because they are afraid they will step on them later and be poisoned.

"There are snakes in this locality. They may be in holes, or they may be in the lowlands or both. Tomorrow we will hunt only the lowlands and hummocks. This is certainly disgusting work. Walk and hunt all day and we get nothing and all the time we know there are snakes here.

"We saw lots of little lizards that the natives call the Jesus Christ lizard because they walk on water. They run right out on the water and move their legs so fast that they just skim over the surface. I saw them run over 20 feet of water and not even get wet. It is getting dark now, so we shall go out again with lights. God! for some snakes!"

More fruitless days followed, when the capture of a harmless snake or two and a handful of lizards was the only

But Cleveland Society Snubbed Mrs. James W. Corrigan and She Is Preparing to Take Up Her Permanent Residence in the British Capital.

Mrs. James W. Corrigan.

NEW YORK.

MRS. JAMES W. CORRIGAN, once waitress in a Chicago restaurant and now possessor of $30,000,000 from her late husband's estate, is preparing to take up permanent residence in London, where she is recognized as one of society's favorites, in spite of the fact that Cleveland society has consistently snubbed her.

Although Cleveland society proved indifferent to her wealth and charm, even though her husband was one of the city's richest citizens, the much more fastidious London elite have been paying her whole-hearted homage. The result is that Mrs. Corrigan has shaken the dust of Cleveland from her slippers forever and is going back to London with the great fortune she just acquired from the sale last month of the Corrigan-McKinney Steel Company of Cleveland, of which her late husband was president.

It is therefore with something of an amused smile at the self-importance and pretensions of Cleveland society that Mrs. Corrigan, now temporarily located in a luxurious suite at the Ritz-Carlton here, is waiting to sail for London, where Dukes and Viscounts are pleased to receive invitations to the stunning dinners she provides at her home on Grosvenor Square.

To set forth the story of Mrs. Corrigan's dramatic career it is necessary to begin back in Stevens Point, Wisconsin, where she was born Laura May Wheelock, the daughter of a gardener employed at the home of one of the town's wealthy citizens. As a very young woman she went to Chicago and for a time found employment as waitress in a restaurant. It was in Chicago that she met Dr. Duncan Robert MacMartin, house physician at the Great Northern Hotel, and soon afterward they were married.

IN THE meantime a series of events was occurring which was destined to be of great importance in her life. One James Corrigan, founder and president of the Corrigan-McKinney Steel Company of Cleveland, died in 1908 and left a large fortune to his 28-year-old son, Jimmy Corrigan. Young Jim had not been on very friendly terms with his father. Nevertheless, due to the drowning of his mother and three sisters when the Corrigan yacht, Idler, sank in Lake Erie, Jimmy Corrigan, while still under 30, inherited 40 per cent of the stock of what was then the biggest independent steel company in the world.

Soon after inheriting this fortune he met and married Mrs. MacMartin, who in the meantime had obtained a divorce from her husband. He brought his wife to Cleveland. In spite of her husband's wealth and the fact that his father had been one of the city's industrial pioneers, the rulers of Cleveland society showed no tendency to welcome Jimmy Corrigan's wife. The word had somehow been passed around that Mrs. Corrigan had once been a waitress and, despite the fact that she was a woman of exemplary conduct and no little personal charm, the elite of Cleveland persisted in snubbing her. Even the wife of Price McKinney, president and active head of the steel company, remained aloof, thereby putting a definite end to Mrs. Corrigan's hopes of being accepted in the exclusive circles of Cuyahoga Valley society.

In 1922 the Corrigans left Cleveland and went to London. Mrs. Corrigan determined to win a place in the more exclusive society of the British capital, probably inspired by a desire to show the folks back home how foolish they had been to reject her.

SHE planned her campaign as a clever General plans a maneuver. First, she rented the historic Keppel mansion at 16 Grosvenor Square. Mrs. George Keppel, owner of the house, had been the closest woman friend of the late King Edward during his last years. Now, King Edward was a very particular person. He liked good food and wine and he insisted on perfect service and appointments. To please him, Mrs. Keppel built the house on Grosvenor Square, in Mayfair, next to the dwelling of the Duchess of Marlborough. She collected a staff of household servants, each of whom was a paragon. The butler was perfect. The chef was a genius whose accomplishments became famous. Every servant knew his duties. In short, no establishment functioned more luxuriously and gracefully than that at 16 Grosvenor.

Shortly after arriving in London, Mrs. Corrigan met Mrs. Keppel. Despite the late King's solicitude, that lady's fortunes were suffering from the general post-war depression. She still had her staff of perfect servants and she still had her historic mansion, but they were possessions which she preferred to be rid of if it could be arranged tactfully—and with profit. Mrs. Corrigan, it seems, was able to supply both the tact and the profit. She became friendly with Mrs. Keppel, and leased from her the house and the perfect staff of servants.

When it was heard that social life was soon to be resumed at 16 Grosvenor Square considerable interest was aroused in London, particularly among many of the old-timers who had been familiar figures in that perfect household when King Edward was alive. Mrs. Corrigan, however, did not attempt to take London by assault. A few perfectly quiet preliminary dinners soon proved that nothing had deteriorated during the years in that house. The butler was still perfect, the chef as wonderful as ever and everything moved in the same harmonious grooves. The hostess, though not a close friend of any King, was found to be interesting, handsome and witty, and Jimmy Corrigan, a buoyant and gay spirit, was a genial and friendly host. Soon more formal introductions were made. The Corrigans became familiar figures at hunting parties, week ends and affairs at some of the most exclusive English estates. And soon Princes and Earls and Dukes and Prime Ministers and their wives became Mrs. Corrigan's frequent guests, and in turn entertained her.

FOR instance, at one of her affairs the guests included such socially important personages as Princess Marie Louise, the Italian and Belgian Ambassadors, the Duchess of Somerset, Viscount and Viscountess Deerhurst, Lady Beatrice Pole Carew, Lady Belper, Viscount Churchill and others of the socially elect. It was a list that no Cleveland hostess could dream of equaling.

In fact, as time passed, Mrs. Corrigan's affairs came to be regarded as among the big events of the London social season. She introduced many novel forms of entertainment and added to her distinction as an excellent hostess who was highly original as well. Her money enabled her to procure the finest entertainers. For result of hours of strenuous effort. Then a glimmer of hope in the entry:

"Dr. Bartlett called on the phone this evening to tell me that we may accompany a group of Army surveyors into the Gatun region. They are going into damp (Perkins underlined that word) virgin territory and are leaving by launch Saturday morning. We will leave here Friday and make arrangements with the Army that afternoon. Lord, for a bush master or even a boa!"

BACK in Ancon, the hunters found another disappointment. "Dr. Bartlett has several leads, of which the one to Monte Sirio with the Army sounds best," Perkins wrote. "Out to see Major J. W. Hall, Army medical officer, formerly of the teaching staff of Washington University, St. Louis, who lends us pup tents and arranges all details. Just after, Dr. Bartlett learns the Republic of Panama has arranged to send us to Darien for six days on the private yacht of the President of Panama. There are supposed to be an abundance of bebero there.

"Major Hall tells us we have to accept and to go. They tell us there is no rain in Darien, which looks bad. With the Army, we would go into territory where it rains every day. Well, here is hoping there are snakes crawling in Darien."

The next day was wasted between a man who wanted to show Perkins and Lentz his collection of curios, another who had caught a frog and two snakes for the hunters and wanted to talk, and a man who was trying to figure some way in which he could exploit the expedition for his personal profit. The "yacht," 54 feet long, was to leave at midnight, but it was 1 a. m., Perkins recorded, before "they started the three-cylinder Diesel engine and we rattled off." The next day was February 23. The diary continues:

"There is only one person on board that can understand us, or we him. He is the engineer, who lived in California. One hombre carries a long-barrelled revolver and gets across to us that we could not catch a snake even if we saw one. Carramba!

"Pretty soon before sundown, we enter the mouth of a large river. It got rough as hell here and the boat bounced like a cork. There are fourteen on board and one little lifeboat strapped on the rear end. I see no life preservers. What use, anyway, with all the sharks? Oh, well.

"At dark, we see the town, Las Palmas, on the down side of a large hill. We go ashore, to the upstairs of a store where we will sleep. They have oil lamps on the streets and palm-leaf houses are set on the hillside above. To the end of the street, into a large building where a fiesta (dance) is to be held. We meet and shake hands with everybody.

"Someone starts a clarinet and another, a guitar. After a while there is a rasping noise and I look into the shadows to see a native Negro with mouth open, scraping a spoon handle on the corrugated case of an old thermos bottle. The traps. Pretty soon, a light brown scoots up with a darker brown and offers her to me for the dance. I refuse, explaining I can't dance in rubber-soled shoes."

The Darien section was even dryer than the Canal Zone and all the life the hunters saw was "thousands of land crabs that make a rattling noise when they retreat into their holes." On February 26, Perkins wrote: "At noon we left the town and very thankfully. Aside from riding a rough sea in the 54-foot boat all night, our return trip was uneventful."

FROM Panama, the expedition went to Guatemala. On the afternoon of March 6, reunited with Dr. Bartlett, they visited the Maya ruins at Quirigua, where stone monoliths and half-ruined temples remain of a civilization that flourished on the American continent as early as the eighth century.

"Up at 5 for an early start on a 'Go-Devil' motor car," Perkins wrote the next night. "For four hours we followed rivers through valleys and gorges. We then left the car and started down the Zacapa River, hunting the fertile fields and undergrowth. Natives spoke of Sumbadoras and Barba Amarillas, but we cannot shake the jinx.

"Toward evening, we took to the cactus-covered hills, in hope of rattlesnakes. I have never seen so many stickers in my life. Every weed, bush and tree here is covered with thorns. We have come to regard everything that grows from the soil as a potential menace and have to back away from many thickets we would like to explore. Tonight we started down the banks of the river with lights and hunted until 1 o'clock. Just one snake today, a long-nosed bush snake of the genus oxybulus. 'What to hell is the matter? God, I'm tired."

March 9 was a better day. A wealthy planter sent one of his natives out with the expedition and up the river they started.

"WE FOLLOWED the tributary of the river and before long Moody caught a snake striped like our Western garter snake, but with the head of a burrower. It, like most of the snakes we have caught, has large teeth in the rear of the upper jaw, that we suspect are fangs. On the return trip we caught a large racer, similar to the light-color phase of the coachwhip. It was found in a pond in a pasture and fought like the Devil when caught.

"We cornered it, and when it saw its plight, it came at me with mouth open and head raised a foot from the ground. The Moro nearly had a fit, and from then on, he eyed us as though we were agents of the Devil. He firmly believes the snake is poisonous. As best I could understand, that is a snake that grabs a cow by the nose and hangs on until it has sucked out all the blood. We were told it could kill five or six cows a day. Huh! Dr. Bartlett left this morning for Guatemala City and home."

The next day, they caught one snake, several lizards and a musk turtle. "We hunted banana plantations, corn fields, open country, primitive untouched jungle, railroad tracks, stream beds and banks and an old Mayan city. Where are they?" Perkins wrote disgustedly.

Not recorded in the diary are the two nights when pumas followed Lentz and Perkins. The first time was on Barro Colorado Island, in Gatun Lake, a Government game preserve. The second time, in Guatemala, the beast kept pace with them as they walked along a railroad track at night for several miles. At one time its blazing eyes were only three feet from a gate Lentz started to open.

These, however, were casual matters, hardly worth recording, Perkins thought, like the fact that he and Lentz took 15 grains of quinine a day and hunted, dizzy and with their heads "pounding like a 1904 Ford," as Perkins recalled when it was all over.

The book, however, is large in its praise of the men throughout Central America who went out of their way to help the expedition. One captured and gave to Perkins the rare rainbow boa that the expedition brought back. Others furnished natives to help hunt. Such a one was Dr. L. M. Waller, at Tela, Honduras. A hunter famous throughout Central America, Dr. Waller helped Lentz and Perkins immeasurably and introduced them to Senor Bonilla, who made the crocodile hunt possible.

Of the first hunt arranged by Dr. Waller, Perkins wrote: "About noon we came across a large Bothropic viper lying at the base of a tree. The native name is timbo. It looks a lot like the Old World vipers, particularly the African puff-adder, and is reputed to be savage and dangerous. Here was our first really poisonous snake and a real thrill it gave us."

Next comes the account of the night crocodile hunt after a day of vain effort to capture the saurians from the banks of the lake. Then, on March 20: "At noon we left for Confradia in one of Bonilla's trucks. Snake tracks crossing the road were examined on both sides until 'Ho, there he is.' A beautiful rattler. I ran back to the truck after a snake stick and returned to find Dr. Waller and Moody standing on the snake to keep him from getting away. The stick held his head down and he was soon in the bag. Ha! Our first rattler."

The last three entries are brief: "March 25: Spent the day making crates, receiving a beautiful female spider monkey, a gift, and in general looking after the collection. March 26: Finished the crates and boxes and bought a nice toucan from a lady who has had him as a pet. Had to make a cage for him. March 27: Got all our stuff packed, transferred to the dock and put aboard the ship. They started loading the ship with bananas at 6 o'clock. We sail at 2 in the morning."

Al Capone.

CHICAGO.

ALPHONSE CAPONE, Chicago's restless racketeer, hunched far forward in his expensive leather chair and uttered his theme song:

"You know, if I was just a plain bozo I wouldn't stand around the streets, like they do, fighting for a chance to get a squint at Al Capone. Yes, it's pronounced Capone (two syllables). Honest, I'd have something better to do. Besides, it kind-a hurts Chicago's reputation."

Then this gentleman, who was that night celebrating his return from a year of safety and silence in a Philadelphia jail, for gun-toting, sank back, carefully confident, at the big, mahogany desk in his suite at the Lexington Hotel, here. He was the big business man, with a buzzer beneath the desk, and a cradle phone above it; also a massive golden ink pot. Above him there were three pictures. A somewhat bewildered portrait of George Washington; a more understanding smile from Mayor ("Big Bill") Thompson, and a laughing caricature of Al himself, in golf togs, playing the game down at his Miami estate.

And, where other magnates are surrounded by stenographers and secretaries, alert to guard their boss from book agents and beggars, this overlord of a beer empire is surrounded by jewel-eyed Sicilians, who pack a mean gat and are eager to ward off the alien bullet.

It gives one an uneasy, spied-upon feeling, to sit with Capone in this large, terribly large, room. Of course, Capone sits in the corner, facing the door. He never exposes his back. Even when he goes to the theater, he buys some seats to the right and to the left, and in back, for these same jewel-eyed gentlemen with their protecting guns.

AS WE sit in this room, Al pushes the buzzer. Instantly, and that means instantly, the door flies open, and a suave, eager little man slides in. You are sure he must have been right at the key-hole, else he never could be here so speedily. The little fellow glides forward, awaiting orders.

The "Big Fellow" says, crisply as any business man asking to have a customer brought in, "Please bring in my mother and sister."

Every gesture of the little man has been a bow. Now he makes a deeper scrape and goes, facing forward most of the way. He closes the door into the vestibule, into which six or seven other doors give. Behind those doors you almost know are scores of similar gentlemen. Presently the door into Capone's big room opens and two dark-haired, dark-skinned women trail draperies of blue chiffon. It is Al's home-coming night and the evening is festive.

Capone presents them. They murmur a "Pleased to meet you," and mouth a commonplace or two, about it being nice to have "him" home, and they depart. The wife is tall and slim. The sister, eighteen-year-old Mafalda, is shorter, plumper and very pretty. She is a graduate of one of the Chicago high schools. A brother attends high school, and another brother, Bert, pursues his studies at an Eastern university, but he pursues them under an assumed name. Still another brother, Ralph, has an alias; not for the sake of education, but for realism. They call him "Bottles."

Al provides a home for his mother and one or two other members of his family at 7244 Prairie avenue, in a neighborhood of modest flats and apartment houses. There is nothing to distinguish the two-family flat building from any of the others on the pleasant, tree-lined street.

But once inside you are made aware of a special kind of magnificence. The living room is lined with enlarged photographs of Al and his mother, Al and his wife, Al and his sister, Al looking like a dapper bond salesman, Al in a bathing suit. There is a profusion of overstuffed furniture, upholstered in astonishing velours, gaudy lamps with glass bangles, velour hangings, all of which make the small living room seem a little crowded.

MRS. CAPONE is a genial-looking soul of about 50, perhaps slightly less. She rests comfortably in her magnificent living room but she is not a part of it. She dresses in black in a style that has nothing to do with the current mode.

It is to this retreat that Al retires when he desires some simple domesticity, relaxation from the strains and tensions of his business. There is a family party. His mother makes his favorite dishes for him, minestrone and spaghetti in the approved fashion. There are often family parties here, when the whole tribe of Capone gathers around the table in the dining room. Then the only reminders of Al's career are the ever-present shadows of his bodyguard, and they do not intrude but take up strategic and inconspicuous stations around the house.

Mrs. Capone smiles blandly upon inquisitive callers. If they happen to be newspaper reporters, who have got in on one pretext or another, she shakes her head and says: "I don't know. All my sons are at work now. I don't know." And that is about as much as one ever learns from Mrs. Capone.

Al likes privacy. He likes it so much that when he was wounded a few years ago, by a gun that exploded in his own pocket, he went to a hospital in Hammond, Ind., under the name of "Mr. Geary."

The nuns at St. Margaret's might have thought their patient was an obscure Mr. Geary, if he hadn't hired four extra rooms, and installed therein a bodyguard of eight doughty disciples. Then the nuns knew they were dealing with "The Big Fellow," as he calls himself.

Wherever he goes, he has these bodyguards. Curiously enough, however, on his internationally famous trip back from the Philadelphia jail to Chicago, he came almost alone, with just his driver. And part of the way he came in a tumble-down, fragile, old runabout.

Here is the way it happened.

He was spirited away from one jail to another, thereby cheating two million people who wanted to tell their grandchildren, some day, that they had seen Al Capone. When at last the papers were signed and he was a free man to leave Philadelphia, he disappeared. Rumor had him everywhere, but in paradise. He was supposed to have dickered with the Pennsylvania Railroad for three drawing-rooms. The railroad is understood to have stalled until it was too late for him to make the train. An airplane was said to be his. Rumor had him on a boat to Europe, and to Bermuda.

Another rumor said he was motoring here, and the roadside was lined with well-informed pedestrians on the lookout for a mammoth, armored automobile.

Capone's home on Palm Island, Miami, Fla.

Back in 1925 his driver was shot up pretty efficiently by the enemy. The Capone car went to the garage, a battered bit of mechanism.

Then Al got a new car, a gorgeous tribute to Chicago's gangland warfare. For the car had bullet-proof glass and bullet-proof body. It was a whole lesson in preparedness itself. Since then he has always traveled in a similar car. It was in such a stockade that he started to drive to Chicago. About half-way here the big car broke down. They were in a small town. They didn't want to pull into a country garage, be quickly identified, perhaps have an interview with the Sheriff.

So they left the grand car on the roadside and went shopping for a new conveyance. They bought, as quickly and as quietly as they could, a poor, tumble-down, antique model runabout. And it was in this wobbly vehicle, completely exposed to bullets and bombs, that the two made their trip to an Indiana point near Chicago. But the fate which sent them this car was not, after all, an unkind fate, for the world was looking for a huge, well-equipped car, and wouldn't have paid any attention to this freakish conveyance that bounced along the road.

"ASK me anything you want." Capone makes this lavish conversational gesture, up there in his suite at the Lexington. Then he adds, "I'll answer it if I can."

First, about his jail sentence. He did not break his way into jail. He is insistent about having that rumor spiked.

"They tell a lot of yarns that I was scared and tried to get pinched in Philadelphia. That's the bunk. Why should I want a pinch, when I'd never had one before, never? I'm not scared of anybody, I'm telling you."

The phone rang. He picked up the receiver. His voice was a new voice as he said into the mouth-piece, "No, he's left town."

Over the wire there must have come some word, some pass-word, some "open sesame." For instantly his voice mellowed into the friendly drawl that is characteristic, and he said, "You mean Murray of New York?"

Another reassurance over the instrument.

Then Capone said, "Sure, this is the Big Fellow. Come on over."

HE REPLACED the phone in its cradle, and returned to the subject of his incarceration.

"Say, they call that Philadelphia the town of Brotherly Love, and that's the bunk, too. They pick me up for carrying a gun. Why shouldn't I carry a gun? A fellow's got to protect himself these days. Then they give me a year. Not for carrying a gun, but because my name's Al Capone."

That brings up the subject of names. Willingly he tells how he came to be called "Al Brown," by which he is well known.

"Sure, I'll be glad to tell you. It was in Indiana Harbor, I and a fellow named Curley was starting a gambling joint and he wanted me to sign the lease. I figured there wasn't any percentage in me holding all the bag, so I signed Al Brown. I guess the name stuck."

Another name that has stuck, but only with his enemies, for his friends would become his enemies if they used it, is "Scarface Al." The sobriquet comes from a long but almost inconspicuous scar on

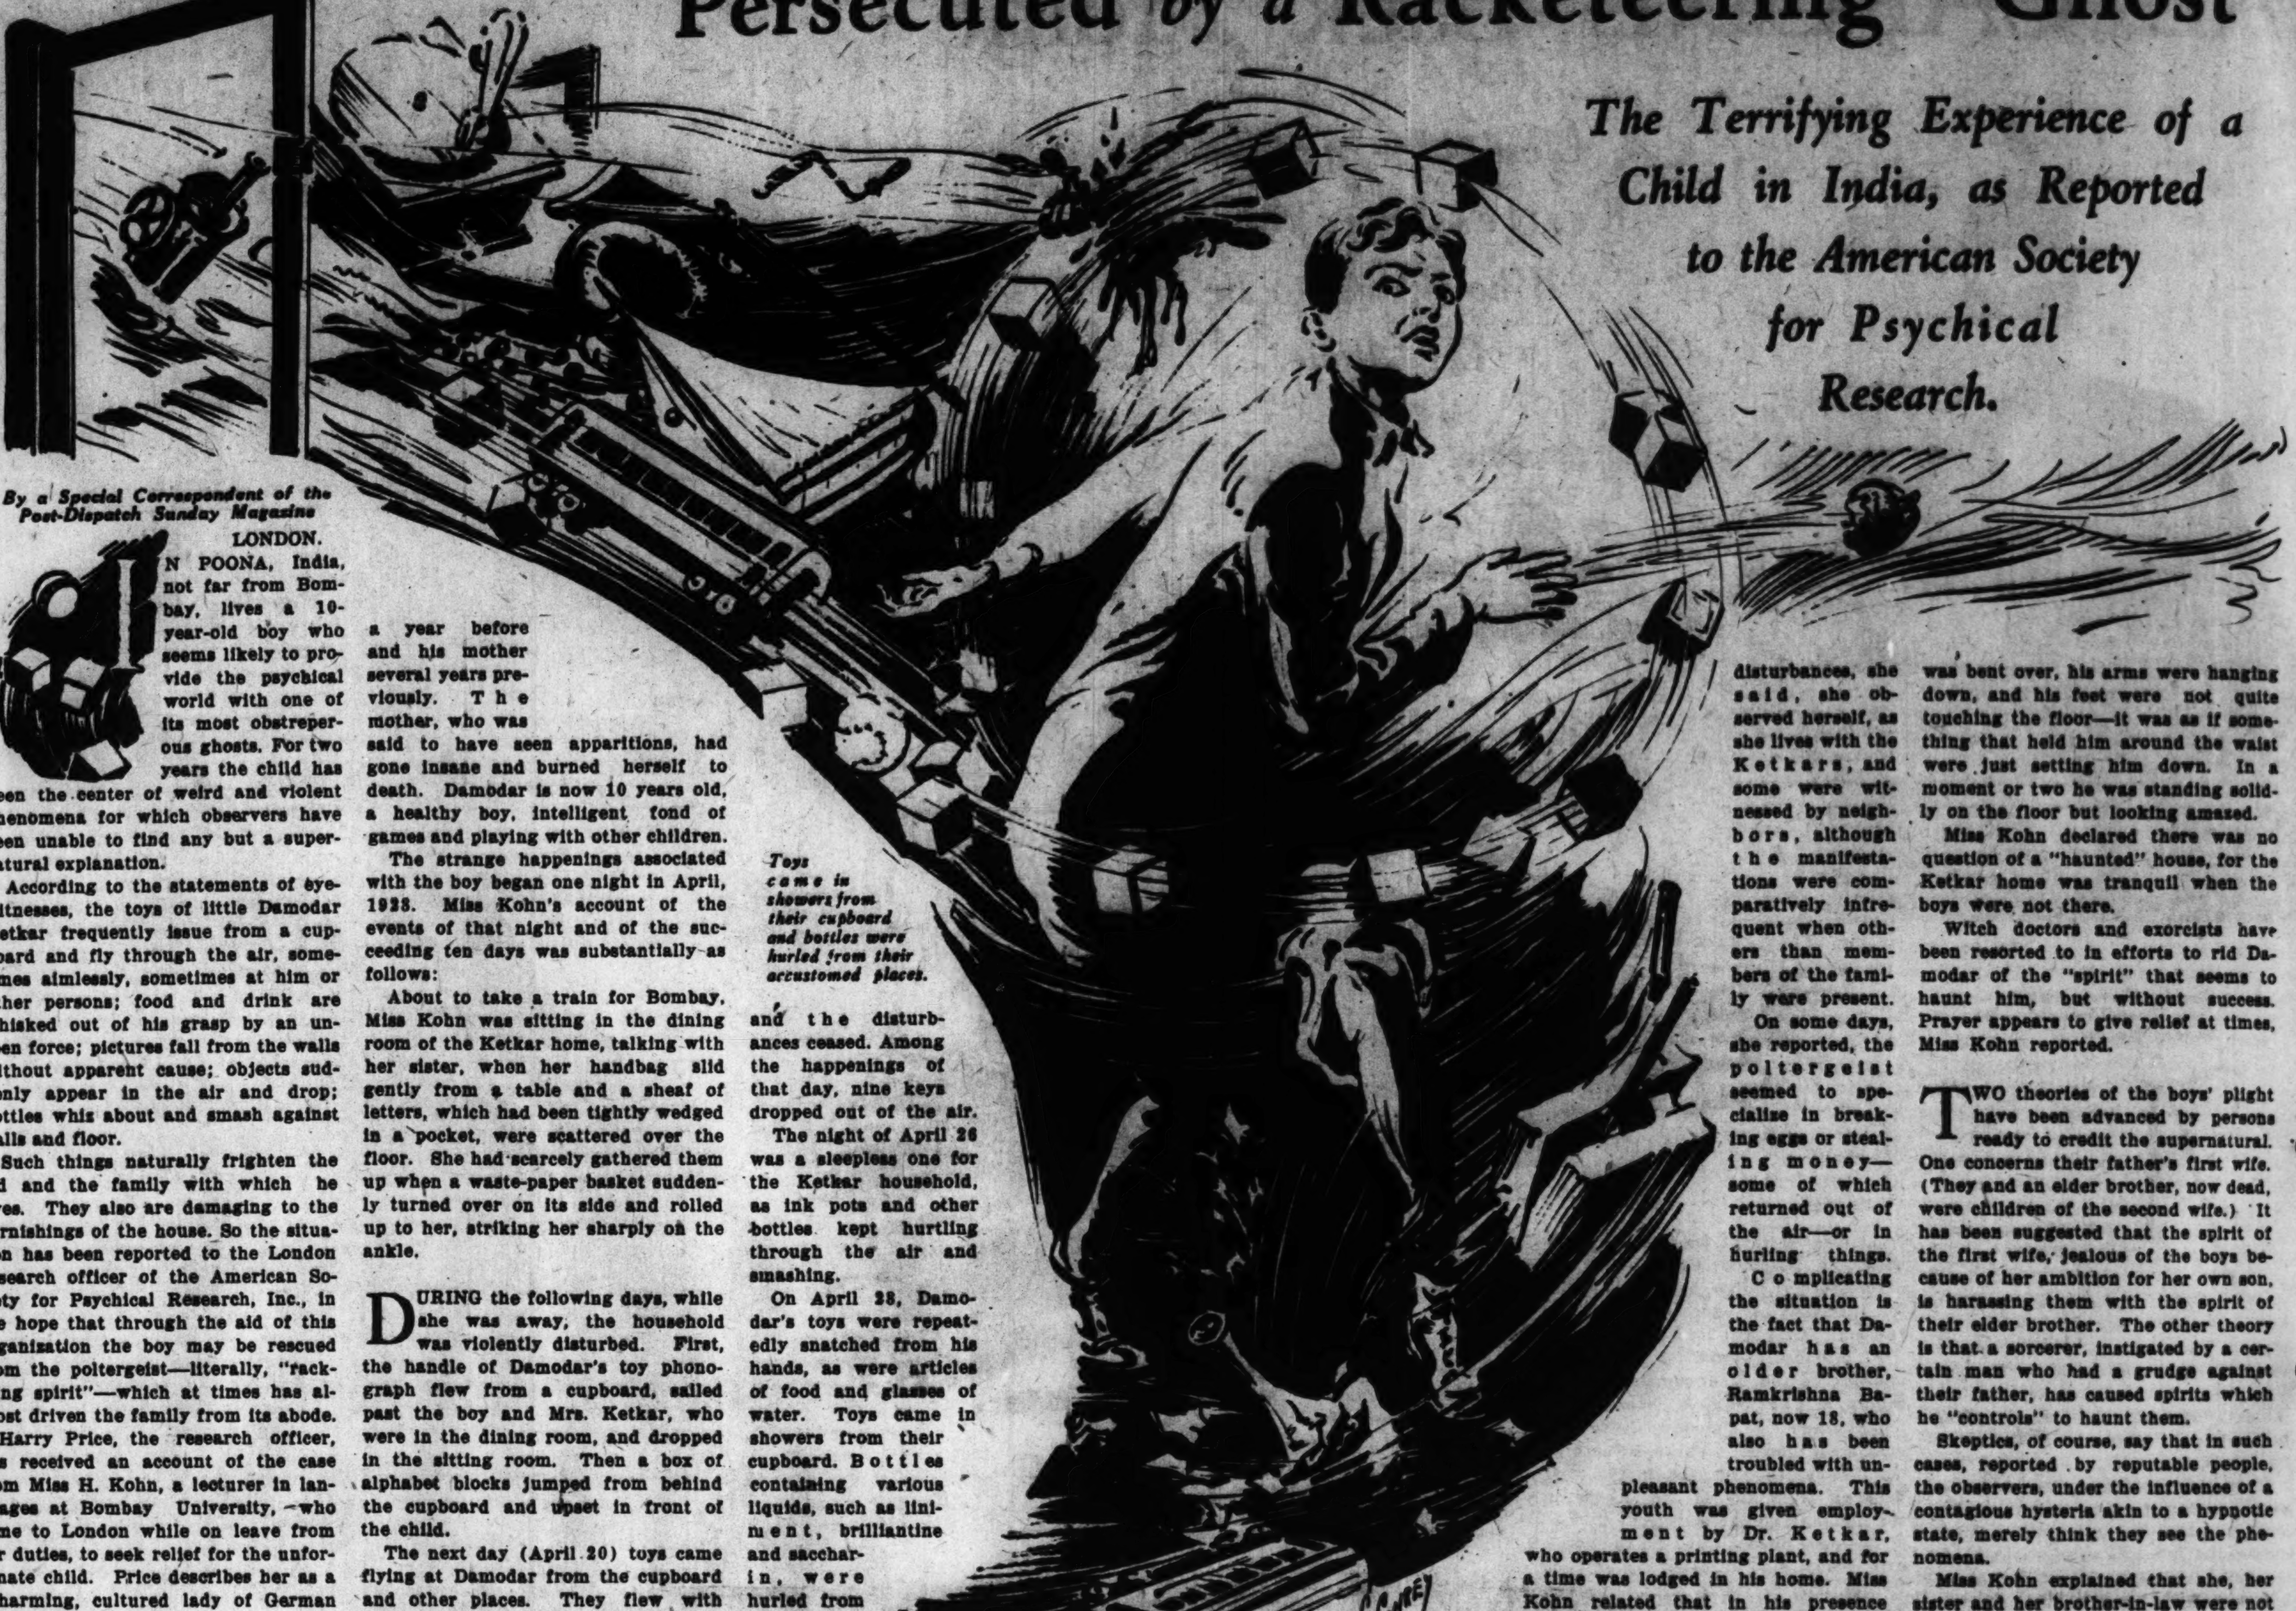
The Terrifying Experience of a Child in India, as Reported to the American Society for Psychical Research.



Toys came in showers from their cupboard and bottles were hurled from their accustomed places.

LONDON.

IN POONA, India, not far from Bombay, lives a 10-year-old boy who seems likely to provide the psychical world with one of its most obstreperous ghosts. For two years the child has been the center of weird and violent phenomena for which observers have been unable to find any but a supernatural explanation.

According to the statements of eyewitnesses, the toys of little Damodar Ketkar frequently issue from a cupboard and fly through the air, sometimes aimlessly, sometimes at him or other persons; food and drink are whisked out of his grasp by an unseen force; pictures fall from the walls without apparent cause; objects suddenly appear in the air and drop; bottles whiz about and smash against walls and floor.

Such things naturally frighten the lad and the family with which he lives. They also are damaging to the furnishings of the house. So the situation has been reported to the London research officer of the American Society for Psychical Research, Inc., in the hope that through the aid of this organization the boy may be rescued from the poltergeist—literally, "racketing spirit"—which at times has almost driven the family from its abode.

Harry Price, the research officer, has received an account of the case from Miss H. Kohn, a lecturer in languages at Bombay University, who came to London while on leave from her duties, to seek relief for the unfortunate child. Price describes her as a "charming, cultured lady of German parentage."

Miss Kohn related that her brother-in-law and sister, Dr. and Mrs. Ketkar, adopted Damodar Bapat from an orphanage when he was 4 years old. His father, a Brahman, had died about a year before and his mother several years previously. The mother, who was said to have seen apparitions, had gone insane and burned herself to death. Damodar is now 10 years old, a healthy boy, intelligent, fond of games and playing with other children.

The strange happenings associated with the boy began one night in April, 1928. Miss Kohn's account of the events of that night and of the succeeding ten days was substantially as follows:

About to take a train for Bombay, Miss Kohn was sitting in the dining room of the Ketkar home, talking with her sister, when her handbag slid gently from a table and a sheaf of letters, which had been tightly wedged in a pocket, were scattered over the floor. She had scarcely gathered them up when a waste-paper basket suddenly turned over on its side and rolled up to her, striking her sharply on the ankle.

DURING the following days, while she was away, the household was violently disturbed. First, the handle of Damodar's toy phonograph flew from a cupboard, sailed past the boy and Mrs. Ketkar, who were in the dining room, and dropped in the sitting room. Then a box of alphabet blocks jumped from behind the cupboard and upset in front of the child.

The next day (April 20) toys came flying at Damodar from the cupboard and other places. They flew with great force, and the lad and his adoptive mother were "paralyzed with fright."

The following day the alarms were so incessant that Mrs. Ketkar, in despair, spoke aloud, as if to a person—and the disturbances ceased. Among the happenings of that day, nine keys dropped out of the air.

The night of April 26 was a sleepless one for the Ketkar household, as ink pots and other bottles kept hurtling through the air and smashing.

On April 28, Damodar's toys were repeatedly snatched from his hands, as were articles of food and glasses of water. Toys came in showers from their cupboard. Bottles containing various liquids, such as liniment, brilliantine and saccharin, were hurled from their accustomed places to break against walls and floor. Damodar became hysterical.

Such phenomena have occurred frequently since then, Miss Kohn declared, and she kept a circumstantial record of the events. Many of the disturbances, she said, she observed herself, as she lives with the Ketkars, and some were witnessed by neighbors, although the manifestations were comparatively infrequent when others than members of the family were present.

On some days, she reported, the poltergeist seemed to specialize in breaking eggs or stealing money—some of which returned out of the air—or in hurling things.

Complicating the situation is the fact that Damodar has an older brother, Ramkrishna Bapat, now 18, who also has been troubled with unpleasant phenomena. This youth was given employment by Dr. Ketkar, who operates a printing plant, and for a time was lodged in his home. Miss Kohn related that in his presence objects would move sometimes without evident cause, that a spoon would jump out of his saucer without being touched. One day, Price was told, Ramkrishna suddenly appeared before Mrs. Ketkar in a peculiar position; he was bent over, his arms were hanging down, and his feet were not quite touching the floor—it was as if something that held him around the waist were just setting him down. In a moment or two he was standing solidly on the floor but looking amazed.

Miss Kohn declared there was no question of a "haunted" house, for the Ketkar home was tranquil when the boys were not there.

Witch doctors and exorcists have been resorted to in efforts to rid Damodar of the "spirit" that seems to haunt him, but without success. Prayer appears to give relief at times, Miss Kohn reported.

TWO theories of the boys' plight have been advanced by persons ready to credit the supernatural. One concerns their father's first wife. (They and an elder brother, now dead, were children of the second wife.) It has been suggested that the spirit of the first wife, jealous of the boys because of her ambition for her own son, is harassing them with the spirit of their elder brother. The other theory is that a sorcerer, instigated by a certain man who had a grudge against their father, has caused spirits which he "controls" to haunt them.

Skeptics, of course, say that in such cases, reported by reputable people, the observers, under the influence of a contagious hysteria akin to a hypnotic state, merely think they see the phenomena.

Miss Kohn explained that she, her sister and her brother-in-law were not spiritualists, but had been forced by the mysterious nature of the events to consider a spirit hypothesis.

Price has asked that Damodar be brought to London for examination in his laboratory.

NORFOLK, Virginia.

DESMOND AUSTIN, 13-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Austin, residents of the little fishing village of Hatteras, on the Carolina banks, six miles south of the famous cape with the same name, had a pain in his side.

It was Sunday afternoon, March 9, last, and there was company in the house, so Mrs. Austin, thinking it was just an ordinary "stitch" and would soon pass away, paid little attention to her son's complaining.

During the night, however, the pain grew more severe and the boy developed a high fever. At dawn a hurry call brought the only physician on the "banks" to the bedside of the sick boy. He said it was a case of appendicitis and that an operation within the next few hours was imperative if the patient was to live.

Nine years ago Desmond Austin, had he developed the same pain, would have died. Today, thanks to the United States Navy and the fact that on December 3, 1903, at Kill Devil Hill, 40 miles to the northward in that same banks country, the Wright brothers launched their first airplane, he is still alive and well.

At 11:40 in the morning a message was received at the Hampton Roads Naval Air Station requesting that its ambulance plane be sent for the sick boy. Less than 30 minutes later the plane, with Captain E. J. King, commanding officer of the station and before he entered aviation famous as the man whose engineering genius raised the S-4 and the S-51, at the controls, was roaring southward. At 2:10 p. m. the plane settled to the surface of Pamlico Sound, at Hatteras, 120 miles away, and taxied in close to the shore.

Desmond, in a rowboat and with his mother and father as attendants, was taken alongside and placed aboard the ambulance plane. Room was made for his parents, also.

An hour and 10 minutes later the plane landed at the Hampton Roads Naval Air Station. A waiting land ambulance rushed the sick boy to a hospital. The operation was performed successfully.

The most unusual ambulance service in the United States, and perhaps in the world, is that maintained by the United States Navy at Hampton Roads Naval Air Station at Norfolk, Virginia—an air ambulance serving the Carolina banks.

The banks, with the Atlantic Ocean on one side and on the other the placid waters of Currituck and Pamlico sounds, are peopled by fishermen, Government employes who man the lighthouses, the crews of the Coast Guard stations that dot the banks at five and seven-mile intervals, and the men of the naval radio compass stations at Cape Hatteras, Cape Lookout and Poyner's Hill. The region is nearly a day's travel by boat from the nearest city on the mainland and almost devoid of roads. There are occasions when the residents are in desperate need of medical help from the outside—and quickly. Then the nearest radio compass station sputters out its request for the ambulance plane. The message, picked up at the radio receiving station at the Hampton Roads Naval Air Station, is no sooner received than the ambulance plane, held in readiness for just such emergencies, waddles out of its hangar and down the runway to the roadstead, tucks its rubber-tired "feet" back under its side and, gaining speed as the pilot "gives her the gun," roars away into the wind to rise from the water a moment later and go soaring southward on a mission of mercy.

THE ambulance service to the banks was inaugurated eight years ago and since that time more than 100 trips have been made to bring stricken residents of that isolated section to Norfolk hospitals.

In every instance save one the air ambulance has landed its patient safely at Norfolk. On that occasion, December 23, 1924, the flying boat F-5-L, taking off with a boy who was ill with pneumonia, struck a fish stake and tore a hole in its bottom. There was nothing to do but continue to Hampton Roads, sending a message to have launches ready to rescue the occupants of the plane when it should come down and start to sink.

But the craft sank so quickly that the patient and three members of the crew lost their lives. Chief Pharmacist's Mate Philip S. Gavin was drowned in trying to get the patient's litter clear of its lashings. A tablet bearing his name has been placed in the air station hospital.

Three of the most famous chief aviation pilots the Navy has ever produced received a part of their training in aviation while serving as members of the crew of the Hampton Roads naval air ambulance. Floyd Bennett made many trips at the controls of the ambulance plane. Wilmer Stultz, who piloted Amelia Earhart's airplane on its trans-Atlantic flight, was also a veteran of the naval air ambulance. Harold I. June, radio man and assistant pilot in Commander Byrd's flight to the bottom of the earth, is a veteran of more than 20 trips to the banks country in the ambulance plane.

Pilots skilled in aerial navigation are in readiness night and day. Every pilot at the station is available for ambulance duty. One of the recent flights was made with Commander H. T. Bartlett, executive officer of the station, at the controls.

Lieutenant-Commander D. H. Vance, until a few weeks ago medical officer in charge of the Naval Air Station Hospital, was always a member of the crew of the flying ambulance. He made so many trips during the two years he was stationed at Hampton Roads that in naval circles he was known as "the flying doctor of Cape Hatteras."

INTERESTING ST. LOUISANS

Meyric R. Rogers

GGOURLEY

Director of the City Art Museum Who Builds His Faith in Modern Art on a Profound Knowledge of What Has Gone Before.

By M. W. CHILDS

Of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine Staff

EVERY sincere experiment in art is its own justification. It is on this fundamental axiom that Meyric R. Rogers, director of the Art Museum, builds his faith in modern art. It is a faith, a conviction, which is sufficiently catholic to include, or at least to tolerate, the farthest north in post-impressionism and cubism—those pictures which the average individual is inclined merely to ridicule. There are no barriers beyond which art may not go in experimentation, Rogers says.

He was discussing, specifically, certain of the paintings in the foreign section of the Carnegie Institute show which recently closed at the museum. It was one of the most important exhibits ever seen in St. Louis. It included the most diverse types of painting—from the severely classical to the fiercely modern. And it provoked the most widespread comment.

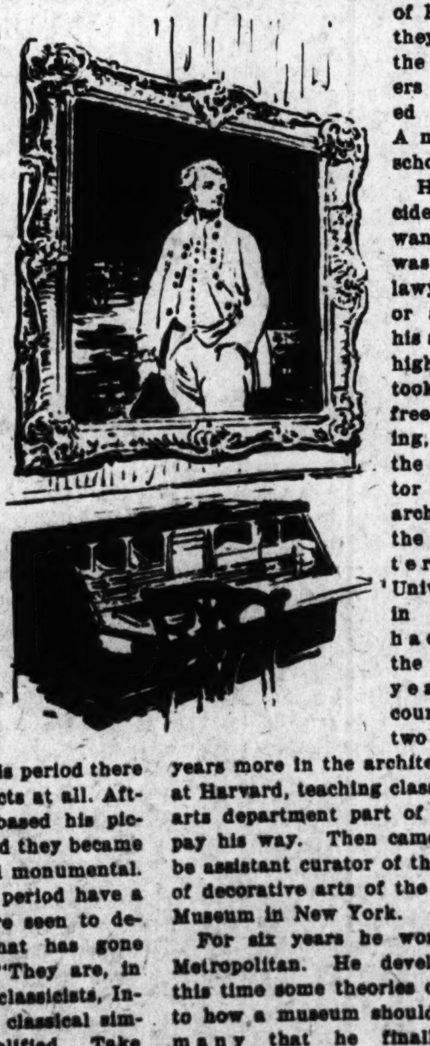
"The fact that one individual or even a number of individuals do not like a painting proves nothing," Rogers says. "If John Smith doesn't care for a particular painting, it means that that picture has no significance for him. The fault may be his. There are no absolute values of good or bad in art.

"Most people, of course, see almost nothing in a museum. The general impression is one of bewilderment, I believe. And that is partly the fault of the museum. A big modern show such as the Carnegie exhibition is almost inevitably confusing. There are, say, 250 paintings. Nearly every one speaks with an individual voice. It is as though one were in a room in which everyone was speaking a different language. The ideal way, of course, would be to have each picture in a separate gallery.

"Looking at one picture after another, one's powers of perception are blunted. When I walk through the museum in the course of my work, I see very few of the things around me. I definitely restrict my vision. It would be too exhausting otherwise."

ROGERS insists on the right of the artist to experiment. We must make every effort to understand what the artist is attempting to do, he says. Rogers himself paints purely for his own diversion, realizing that he has no creative gift. But through his own painting he has had a much greater insight into the work of others.

"A sincere artist may go very far afield from the conventional, the classical, in his search for a new approach. He may end up in a blind alley. But, nevertheless, if he is sincere and a person of intelligence, the result is almost certain to have value."



The trend of art during the past 30 years is embodied to a certain degree, Rogers believes, in the work of one artist—Pablo Picasso, a Spaniard who has done most of his painting in Paris. In the paintings of his earliest period Picasso displays a clear contour, a carefully-planned space arrangement and plastic modeling in cool, greenish-gray tones. Then, through the study of still-life groups, such as bowls of fruit, he evolved the cubist formula. He tried to create a language of abstract form—a visual music. And in the pictures of this period there are no recognizable objects at all. After 1918 Picasso again based his pictures on natural form and they became magnificently plastic and monumental.

"The Picassos of this period have a new quality but they are seen to derive from something that has gone before," Rogers says. "They are, in fact, reminiscent of the classicists, Ingres and David. But the classical simplified, enormously simplified. Take another modern, Marie Laurencin. She has selected the subjective viewpoint of the child. That is obvious in her paintings. Apparently she felt that there was a quality in this viewpoint that was lost later in life. But as she has attained this point of view in her work, it has been sophisticated. It is not purely naive."

Meyric R. Rogers.

Modern art, in Rogers' opinion, does not belong necessarily in the permanent collections of the museum. It is contemporary, it should be lived with, he says. When it has become historic art, then it belongs permanently in the museum.

Rogers became a museum official rather by chance. But, for that matter, museums have interested him ever since he was a small boy. He was born in Birmingham, England, and lived there until he was 13 years old. Trips to London were rare holidays. They always meant, for one thing, a visit to the British Museum. He recalls now that the Rosetta Stone, that invaluable key to the Egyptian hieroglyphics, always fascinated him.

When the boy was 13, the Rogers family moved to the United States. There the elder Rogers was appointed corporation accountant for Harvard University. In Somerville, a suburb of Boston, where they went to live, the young Rogers soon adjusted himself to American schools.

He had to decide what he wanted to do. It was a choice of lawyer or doctor or architect. In his senior year in high school he took a course in free-hand drawing, which was the deciding factor in favor of architecture. In the fall he entered Harvard University and in three years had completed the regular four-year scholastic course. He spent two and a half years more in the architectural school at Harvard, teaching classes in the fine arts department part of that time to pay his way. Then came an offer to be assistant curator of the department of decorative arts of the Metropolitan Museum in New York.

For six years he worked for the Metropolitan. He developed during this time some theories of his own as to how a museum should be run. So many that he finally embodied them in a study of an ideal museum which he offered as his thesis for the degree of master in architecture at Harvard. This work won him wide recognition and a fellowship for a year's study in Europe.

Returning, he accepted the post of professor of fine arts at Smith College at Northampton. And as well he agreed to act as consulting architect for Harvard in the construction of the Fogg Museum. Those years, he says, were the busiest years of his life. But he enjoyed himself immensely, too. He liked the idea of having a hand in designing a museum. In seeing, in so far as it was possible, that everything was done correctly. It was a chance to put into practice all he had learned about museums. The teaching at Smith was another phase of these crowded years. That, too, he enjoyed, for he has been called a born teacher. "Possibly a pedagogue by temperament," he says, smiling. Before the completion of the Fogg Museum Rogers was appointed an associate professor in the Department of Fine Arts at Harvard. He was at that time the youngest person to be appointed to this rank at Harvard. Such an appointment customarily comes as the reward of years of academic service. Here was this young man of 33 apparently fixed at Harvard for life.

He was to stay put, it happened, for just a year. Then came an offer of the directorship of Baltimore's new museum, which he accepted. Rogers found the situation in Baltimore not entirely to his liking. When, two years later, the directors of the St. Louis museum approached him he was willing to consider their offer. And finally to accept it.

"The museum here," he explains, "happens to be in a stage of transition, from the museum of the old type to the new. It is the kind of job that interests me very much and I think a great deal is likely to happen in the next few years."

While the period rooms, opened not long ago, were planned and practically in place before Rogers' arrival, he was largely responsible for their furnishing.

These rooms represent the very latest development in museums. Rogers believes they are among the finest of their kind in the country. "Mr. La Beaume and the other members of the board have been very far-sighted in initiating these rooms and have made excellent selections," he said. "We have tried to create authentic atmosphere. We have tried to fit everything into its place, everything in its setting. Two or three pictures, yes, if the room requires them. But not a picture gallery."

And this, incidentally, is Rogers' idea of what a museum should be. Eventually he hopes to see around the entire museum here a series of rooms representing the main periods of design. A medieval room. An Italian room. There might even be a Greek room and a Roman room, not complete as in the later periods because that would be impossible, but suggestive of what rooms in Grecian and Roman homes were like.

"It would be possible, then," he explains, "to get a clear concept of the history and evolution of art by walking through these rooms. It would be possible to see in this condensed form the finest examples of taste of each period. And I believe this would inevitably influence taste. Influence it directly. In those rooms already installed and in those that we will undoubtedly install later, visitors to the museum will be able to form an idea of space, proportion, quality, line. You cannot say how far such an influence will go."

The ideal museum of Rogers' concept would be made up largely of rooms of this type. Besides this, of course, there would be galleries for loan exhibits of paintings, and art objects. Supplementary material might be kept in reserve for students and specialists and displayed only occasionally. It would be a highly specialized building. As specialized, Rogers says, as a theater—with something of the same dramatic intent. For this reason a museum, in his opinion, should not be an architectural monument.

He discusses with complete candor the limitations of the St. Louis museum. "We will unquestionably need additional space very soon. And there is no use concealing the fact that the present building is not ideal for the purposes of a museum, for it was built before the development of modern museum methods. Eventually, it is possible, an entirely new building in another location will be needed, the present museum serving another purpose for which it is more suited. But this is only a concept, and possibly a remote concept. Meanwhile, we are sawing wood here."

Stimulating increased interest in the museum Rogers regards as one of his principal jobs. It is the problem he is now working on. When he speaks of the important part he feels the museum should play in the community it is with an incisive, sharp fervor.

"IT SHOULD certainly be one of the most important educational influences in the community," he says. "Some excellent educational work has been done here. We hope to extend that and enlarge upon it. The museum belongs to the people of this city. They should utilize it, they should realize that it does belong to them. The educational work is possibly the most important single phase of the museum's activity."

A variety of things engage his attention. He is interested in bringing to St. Louis the best loan exhibits that can possibly be secured. He is anxious to stimulate the interest of wealthy St. Louisans. The museum, as in other cities, must look to them for practical help if it is to grow. For, as he points out, it has less than $170,000 a year to spend for new art objects. And the bidding is customarily against private collectors with millions at their disposal. "Three public-spirited citizens have made notable contributions during the last year—Mr. Ballard, Mr. McCall and Mr. Pulitzer," said Rogers

"It is hoped that others will see the great benefits accruing to the city from their generosity and will be inspired by it.

"And the museum cannot afford to acquire a single thing that is not absolutely first-rate. It is the second-rate that deteriorates in value. Invariably, as experience here has long proved, the best things increase in value—monetary value—astonishingly. They double and even triple in value in a decade or two."

But these are practical details. They are part of the new director's routine. Putting them aside as he talks, he foresees the St. Louis Museum as the proudest possession of the city and State, a treasure house—dramatized and made understandable—of the culture of the ages.

Will Create Eight North American Saints

Missionaries Who Were Tortured and Slain as a Result of the Jesuit Attempt to Christianize the Indians of the St. Lawrence River Region to Be Canonized in June.

By KEITH KERMAN

Of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine Staff

EIGHT Jesuit missionaries who suffered and died for their faith at the hands of North American Indians will soon take their places among the saints of the Catholic Church. They will be canonized in June, becoming this continent's first saints outside of Latin America.

The Canadian martyrs, they sometimes are called, for it was from Quebec as headquarters that they carried on their perilous work and it was on Canadian soil that most of them gave up their lives. But three of them were slain in what is now New York State, and Catholics of the United States give recognition to this fact in repeating the prayer commemorating the martyrdom of the group. Two of the men are named in the prayer, and in this country the name of the one killed in New York is given precedence.

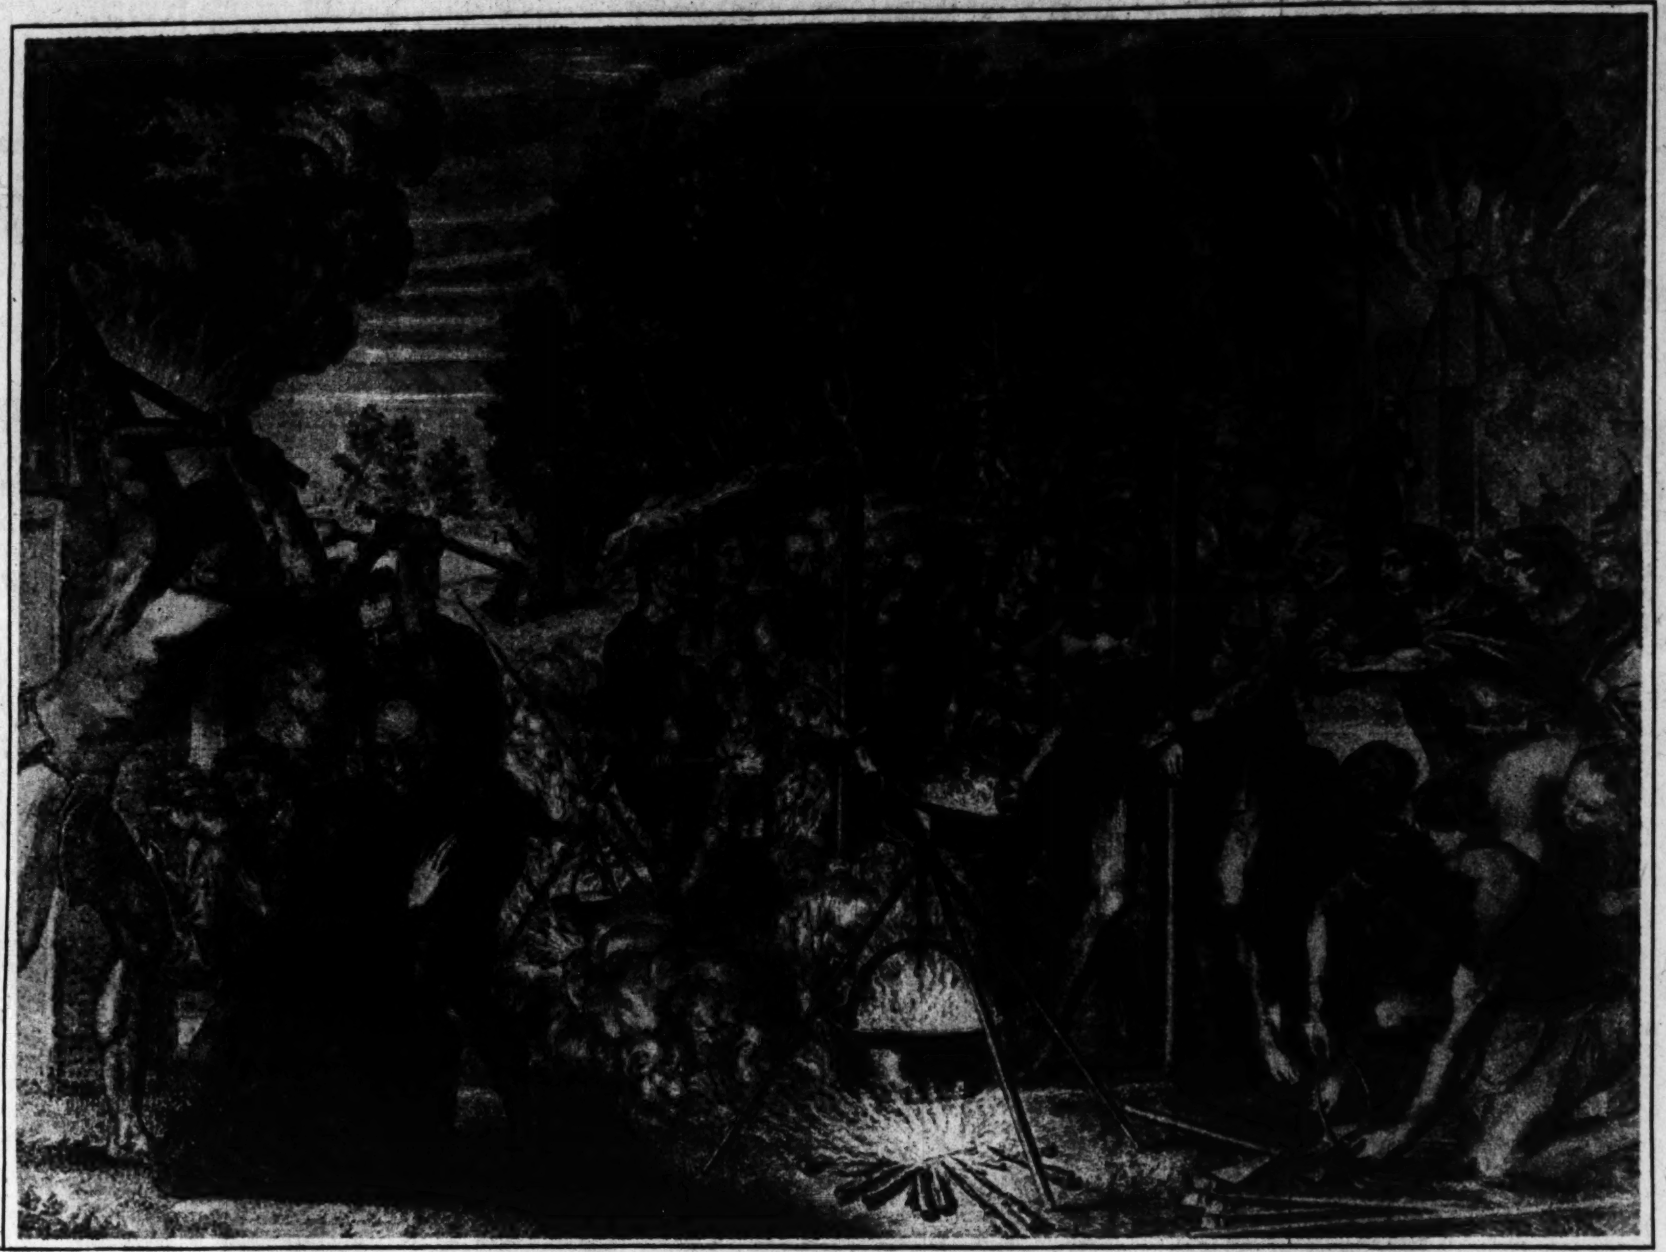
Six priests and two donnes—laymen who gave themselves to Jesuit missionary work—constituted the little band of Frenchmen who five years ago were beatified for the way they lived and died in America in the seventeenth century. They were among the number who came out from France to take part in an attempt by the Society of Jesus to Christianize the Indians of the St. Lawrence River region. The missionary effort was devoted principally to the Hurons, a fairly settled people, with the hope that eventually even the Iroquois, most unfriendly of all the tribes in that territory, might be brought into the fold.

The Huron country lay between Georgian Bay of Lake Huron and Lake Simcoe, and here the Jesuits established several missions, with that on Isle St. Joseph, in Georgian Bay, as a base.

The Hurons—and all the rest of the savage tribes that peopled those Northern woods, for that matter—were most unpromising prospects for Christianity, one gathers from contemporary and later accounts. Inconceivably cruel, dirty, obscene, improvident and even addicted to cannibalism, they are pictured as something vastly different from the noble red man of certain fictionists.

AMONG them the black-robed fathers, sometimes alone, sometimes with a white companion, labored unceasingly, preaching, baptizing, teaching, doing what they could for the souls and bodies of their charges. Exhorting those who had accepted the church to remain in the faith. Administering last rites to converts who fell in battle. Occasionally converting a prisoner before he was put to death. And continually enduring the hardships of primitive life, the dangers of dark forest trails, the revulsion from frightful scenes of bloodshed and torture, the loneliness that men of cultivated minds must feel in such surroundings, and the frequent abuse of the people for whose salvation they strove. Religious devotion had to be strong to cope with these conditions.

Rene Goupil, a donne, was the first of the eight to die. He, with Father Isaac Jogues and a small band of friendly Hurons, was captured on the St. Lawrence by Iroquois in 1642 and taken on a tour of the Indian villages. The Jesuits were tortured every day and compelled to run the gauntlet at some of the villages. Their hair, beard and fingernails were torn out, coals were placed on their bare chests, fingers were crushed and cut off. And Jogues could ignore his suffering and baptize four Hurons who had been added to the prisoners; two he sprinkled on the torture platform with dew from cornstalks given them to eat.



TORTURE OF THE JESUIT MARTYRS.

Reduced facsimile of a plate in Historia Canadensis, published in Paris in 1664. The artist has grouped, in his picture, incidents far separated in time and place.

At last the party reached a village where the town of Auriesville, New York, now stands. Here Goupil incurred the deadly enmity of an old Mohawk brave by making the sign of the cross on the brows of children. As a result, he was suddenly brained with a tomahawk when walking with Jogues. The priest gave him the last absolution.

Father Jogues was spared on that occasion and given as a slave to an Iroquois family. He utilized his situation to preach to his captors whenever possible, to minister to other Indians who were taken prisoner, and to learn the Iroquois language. At last he escaped with the help of Dutch settlers in the vicinity. He accepted their aid only after learning that he was soon to be killed and deciding that he could be more useful to his cause alive. He got aboard a ship and reached France, but soon returned to the missionary field in America. And, after carrying out a diplomatic mission to the Iroquois, he determined, despite his previous experience with them, to return as a missionary to the Mohawks who had held him captive.

In the fall of 1646 he set out from Quebec with a lay companion, John Lalande. When within two days' journey of their destination, they were waylaid by the Mohawks and captured. Shortly afterward some of the Indians invited Father Jogues to come to their cabin for the evening meal. As he entered the door a tomahawk ended his life. The next day Lalande, the donne, was slain in like manner. Goupil, Jogues and Lalande were put to death in what is now New York.

The next victim was Father Anthony Daniel. He had just finished celebrating mass in the Huron town of St. Joseph when the Iroquois attacked it one summer day in 1648. Instead of fleeing with the others, when it was evident that the attack would be successful, Father Daniel remained to baptize the sick and infirm and any of the active defenders who would accept religion in their extremity. A crowd of the Hurons gathered in the church and he assured them, "My brothers, today we shall be in heaven."

As the enemy came near, however, he urged those in the church to flee "and bear with you your faith, even to the last sigh." For himself—"I must face death here, as long as I shall see here any soul to be gained for heaven." At the church door he met the shrieking invaders, and a flock of arrows and a bullet felled him. The savages beat his lifeless body and cast it into the flames that were consuming his church.

THE four other martyrs gave up their lives in the next year as the relentless warfare of the Iroquois on the Hurons drew toward its close—a warfare which was to leave the Huron tribe almost exterminated.

Near the end of 1649, Father Charles Gernier was killed at St. Jean, where he had founded a mission among the Tobacco Indians. Again the Iroquois were the slayers. A band of these warriors, approaching by a circuitous route, avoided the Tobaccos, who had gone forth to meet them, and fell upon the village when it was without an adequate force of defenders. The priest hurried to his church, told the people who had gathered there to flee for their lives and gave them his blessing.

He refused to join the fugitives, but remained to give the consolation of his religion to any who would accept it. Men, women and children he baptized while flames started by the Iroquois roared about him and the triumphant yells of the victors and the death shrieks of the vanquished rang in his ears, as muskets blazed and hatchets rose and fell. So he worked until several bullets brought him down. Mortally wounded, he was seen dragging himself toward another dying man—the last soul he might save on earth—when the Indian woman who gave the account of his last moments was herself struck unconscious. When his body was found it had been stripped and there was evidence that an Iroquois tomahawk had stopped his final missionary effort.

Father Noel Chabanel had been with Father Garnier at St. Jean, but just before the sack of that place had been transferred. He was on the trail to his new post, accompanied by a few Christian Hurons, when he heard Iroquois approachng in the night and his party took refuge in the depths of the forest. He lagged behind—and failed to reappear among his fellows. It was eventually learned that he had been murdered by a Huron apostate who had come to hate the church. Chabanel's temperament was such that the missionary life had been particularly difficult for him, and, although of excellent mind for most learning, he had been unable to gain any sort of mastery of an Indian language. But he refused to yield to his natural inclination to give up this work and took a vow "of perpetual stability in this mission of the Hurons."

The martyrdom of Father John de Brebeuf and Father Gabriel Lalement has given to the Church one of its most moving examples of spiritual strength and to the secular world a truly astounding instance of human fortitude.

These two priests were captured when the Iroquois took the Huron village of St. Louis, in March, 1649. They had been urged to seek safety in flight as the enemy approached, but refused to do so; their post, as Francis Parkman wrote in "The Jesuits of North America," was "in the teeth of danger, to cheer on those who fought and open heaven to those who fell." So they were seized by the enemy when the latter won the town. With the other prisoners, they were taken to the village of St. Ignace, which had been captured earlier in the day, and there burned at the stake.

AN ACCOUNT of the tortures they endured before death ended their suffering is given in "Jesuit Relations and Allied Documents," edited by R. G. Thwaites, a compilation of reports made by Jesuit missionaries. It relates that parts of the bodies and limbs were cut from the living victims; that red-hot hatchets were strung around their necks; that their waists were encircled with burning belts of bark; that they were derisively "baptized" with scalding water. And, says the account, "Before their death, both their hearts were torn out, by means of an opening above the breast; and these barbarians inhumanly feasted thereon, drinking their blood quite warm, which they drew from its source with sacrilegious hands."

Father de Brebeuf, a big, powerful man, bore the torture without flinching. The savages could not make him give a sign of pain. Instead, he encouraged the other captives to think of heaven and die in the faith, and even preached to his tormentors.

Father Lalemant, of frail physique, had not his companion's stoicism, but he bore his torture manfully and he endured it longer—from 6 o'clock in the evening until about 9 the next morning.

These two priests and the rest of that little band of martyrs, there can be no doubt, did not regard themselves as victims, as unfortunates, but as persons unusually favored by God. They prayed to be allowed to shed their blood for the faith. They sought martyrdom as a privilege.

And it is the Catholic view that they did not die in vain. Their immediate cause was lost—the Huron mission failed of its purpose to bring about the Christianization of the Indians of the St. Lawrence country. But, the Rev. John J. Wynne, S. J., points out in "The Jesuit Martyrs of North America," the martyrdoms aroused new religious fervor in old and new France; they inspired other missionaries to the end that eventually the Christian influence was spread among all the tribes of the Great Lakes and down the Mississippi Valley. "Not only among the 3,000,000 Canadians of French origin," says Father Wynne, "who are signed and sealed with the tradition that the martyrs and their associates planted in them; not only among the Catholic people in this part of North America and all over the world, but among Protestants also, and men and women of no faith, is the memory of Jogues, Brebeuf and their companions alive today and a source of inspiration to nobler ideals and appreciation of real religious faith."

SEVERAL memorials to the eight missionaries have been created. The principal one in the United States is the Shrine of Our Lady of Martyrs at Auriesville, New York, where was situated the Mohawk village in which Father Jogues was tortured and held prisoner. Every year thousands of Catholics make pilgrimages to this place.

Church dignitaries of both Canada and the United States have taken part in the movement for canonization of the missionaries. In 1884 the Catholic hierarchy of the United States authorized a formal preliminary inquiry into their lives and deaths. A large volume of evidence was collected and presented to the Congregation of Rites in Rome, which, after the customary long and careful consideration, beatified the eight men in 1925, the action giving them the title of "blessed." And now the Congregation has satisfied itself that they fulfill all the requirements for sainthood, among which is the accomplishment of at least two miracles since beatification. The decree of canonization which Pope Pius will issue in June will give effect to this decision of the church tribunal.

Among the miracles attributed to Father Jogues before his beatification were many cures of ailing persons, for whom he had been asked in prayers to intercede. One of the cures attributed to his intercession was that of a Marie Brevost in Poitiers, soon after his death; another was that of a Sister of Mercy at Buffalo, N. Y., in 1906.

September 26 is the day observed in the United States in memory of the eight Jesuit martyrs. In Canada their feast day is March 16. On these days, in Catholic churches of the two countries, may be heard this prayer:

"O God, Who by the preaching and blood of Thy blessed martyrs, Isaac and John (John and Isaac, in Canada) and their companions, didst consecrate the first fruits of the faith in the vast regions of North America, graciously grant that by their intercession the flourishing harvest of Christians may everywhere and always be increased. Through Our Lord Jesus Christ Thy Son Who liveth and reigneth with Thee in union with the Holy Spirit, one God world without end. Amen."

AL CAPONE BACK HOME

his cheek, memento of one of his life's crises.

Capone speaks of his Florida home, that large estate near Miami. It's all wrong, he says, this story that Chicagoans have brought back, that his 11-year-old boy spends his time on Papa's rifle range, shooting targets.

But it's all true, he allows, that story about the first time he leased a home down there.

The story, and he verified the details, goes this way. A certain rich woman, in blissful ignorance, rented her palatial Miami mansion to a Chicago gentleman. Then she and her husband sailed for Europe. On the way over, the woman learned the identity of her tenant. She fretted all winter on the Riviera, certain that she'd return to the ruins of a home.

When she finally got back to Miami, the Capones' lease had expired and she found her house vacant. Dreading the worst, she looked for bullet holes in the mahogany panels. Not a bullet hole. Then she searched for whisky spots on the tapestry. Not a spot. She went into the kitchen. There she found a change. The Capones had found her large silver and china service inadequate for their hospitality. They had bought a complete extra set of dishes; had doubled the silver.

Amazed, the lady sat down and gasped. In a few days the telephone bill came in. There, she knew she'd have a complaint. Her tenants had gone off without paying a long-distance phone bill of three hundred and twenty-four dollars and sixty cents. Still, she figured, the new dishes and silver more than made up for that. But she used the incident as proof of "what those Capones did."

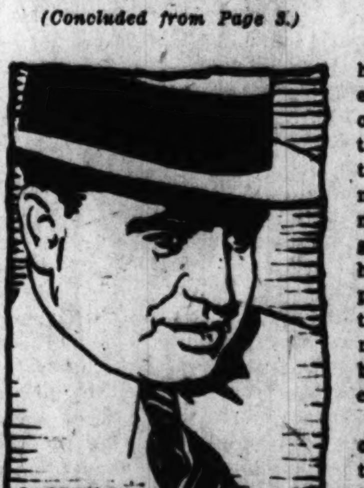
But she only used it a few days. One morning a quiet little woman came into the drawing room, said she was Mrs. Al Capone, and that she had come to pay the telephone bill. It hadn't been sent in, she explained, when they had left.

With business-like gesture, she undid the clasp of her gold purse, took out five hundred-dollar bills, laid them on the desk.

"But I haven't the change," gasped the lady of the house.

"Oh, that's all right," said the wife of the Big Fellow, "I haven't anything smaller. Keep the change," and she walked out.

But then, her husband is said to have trousers with one-way pockets. Seven million in eight years. That's his reported expenditure. And yet he has to pay cash for everything. A racketeer, you know, isn't a particularly good risk.



He wears silk, hand-made pajamas. They cost one hundred dollars apiece.

And when he buys for himself, he buys for the boys. Six or seven will accompany him and he will order like a Lord Bountiful. Just the other day, celebrating his return to civies, he went into the men's store of one of Chicago's most famous establishments. They got the buyer and the fitter and half a dozen other clerks, to bring patterns of silks. But before the third assistant fitter took one measurement of the large, loosely-built man, Mr. Capone had to pay cash.

But he is accustomed to paying cash. Wherever he goes he foots the bills. It's a hundred dollar tip at the cafe. He buys champagne for all-comers. Sometimes they are judges and politicians. But the more that come to see Al Capone, the more it pleases Al Capone, even if it helps to flatten his wallet.

Within the past two years Al and his brother, Ralph, have been taken up by certain wealthy and socially prominent people in Chicago and in Lake Forest. They will say nothing about it, neither will Al, naturally. They have had him at their homes for dinner and they have visited him. It gives them a thrill, they admit in private.

And they think that Al is the most charming man, and so amusing.

While he was in jail in Philadelphia, Al sent to one of these women, through his brother, Ralph, some jewelry made by prisoners. This little tribute pleased the dowager very much. She regarded it as so thoughtful of Al to think of her at a time like that.

He'll go into a hat store, to buy a new fedora. Half a dozen men will speak to him, stand around expectantly.

"See what the boys want," Capone will order the salesman, just as if he were setting them up at a bar. They all want hats, the best and the most expensive.

But it's a tough racket, being Al Capone.

"Whatever I do gets stepped up about seven times," he bewails. "Down at jail I did clerical work. That's what I was fitted to do. But a lot of folks'll think that I ought to have dug ditches, just because my name's Al Capone. All I want is to be let alone. I ain't bothering anybody. I want to get out of this climate. You know, Chicago's awful bad for throat trouble. Still, Chicago's my home, and I'm strong for it."

Then he leaned magnificently back in that swivel chair of his and reflected solemnly, "Still, I hate to see a lot of saps spoil its reputation."

WITH May at hand, the average family feels a strong desire to take the gondola out of the garage and go out and look at the billboards. Many important changes should be in evidence on the highways this season as a result of last year's contest for the most beautiful hot-dog sanctuary.

The hot-dog kennel is not what it used to be. Magnificent stands in early Renaissance, Georgian or Colonial architecture will replace the ramshackle wooden hut in late Bolonian. These salons won't be known as "Ed's Place," "Pete's Joint" and "Gravy Mike's,' but as "The Palais de France" and "Au Canine Roti." The national passion has been glorified and now ranks with artichokes, Brussels sprouts, pear salad and other white-collar edibles.

Perhaps you will find an elaborate Gothic structure with flying buttresses, arched windows and stained glass, where a uniformed attendant will salute you and open the doors of your car. There is no fat man in a soiled apron lolling in the doorway yipping "R-r-red hot!" but an austere gentleman in an immaculate Tuxedo. A string quartet, concealed behind potted palms, whines something from Debussy. After you have specified how you want your hot dog—either "straight" (undivided) or "on the half-shell"—they bring out a canine aristocrat with little blue ribbons tied around the terminals.

The effects of this uplift movement will be closely watched by all hot-dog followers. Some are extremely apprehensive. They contend that hot dogs lose their charm unless bivou-of heaven and die in the faith, and even preached to his tormentors.

Father Lalemant, of frail physique, had not his companion's stoicism, but he bore his torture manfully and he ondured it longer—from 6 o'clock in he evening until about 9 the next morning.

These two priests and the rest of hat little band of martyrs, there can e no doubt, did not regard themelves as victims, as unfortunates, but s persons unusually favored by God. They prayed to be allowed to shed heir blood for the faith. They sought martyrdom as a privilege.

And it is the Catholic view that hey did not die in vain. Their immeiate cause was lost—the Huron mission failed of its purpose to bring bout the Christianization of the Inians of the St. Lawrence country. ut, the Rev. John J. Wynne, S. J., oints out in "The Jesuit Martyrs of orth America," the martyrdoms roused new religious fervor in old nd new France; they inspired other issionaries to the end that eventully the Christian influence was pread among all the tribes of the reat Lakes and down the Mississippi alley. "Not only among the 3,000,-00 Canadians of French origin," says ather Wynne, "who are signed and ealed with the tradition that the maryrs and their associates planted in hem; not only among the Catholic eople in this part of North America nd all over the world, but among rotestants also, and men and women no faith, is the memory of Jogues, rebeuf and their companions alive oday and a source of inspiration to obler ideals and appreciation of real ligious faith."

SEVERAL memorials to the eight missionaries have been created. The principal one in the United ates is the Shrine of Our Lady of artyrs at Auriesville, New York, here was situated the Mohawk vilge in which Father Jogues was tored and held prisoner. Every year ousands of Catholics make pilgrimes to this place.

Church dignitaries of both Canada nd the United States have taken part the movement for canonization of e missionaries. In 1884 the Cathoc hierarchy of the United States auorized a formal preliminary inquiry to their lives and deaths. A large olume of evidence was collected and resented to the Congregation of Rites Rome, which, after the customary ng and careful consideration, beatied the eight men in 1925, the action ving them the title of "blessed." And w the Congregation has satisfied itlf that they fulfill all the requireents for sainthood, among which is e accomplishment of at least two iracles since beatification. The deee of canonization which Pope Pius ll issue in June will give effect to is decision of the church tribunal.

Among the miracles attributed to ather Jogues before his beatification ere many cures of ailing persons, for hom he had been asked in prayers intercede. DOLLING UP the HIGHWAYS

The Motorist Seems to Be Coming Into His Own.

WITH May at hand, the average family feels a strong desire to take the gondola out of the garage and go out and look at the billboards. Many important changes should be in evidence on the highways this season as a result of last year's contest for the most beautiful hot-dog sanctuary.

The hot-dog kennel is not what it used to be. Magnificent stands in early Renaissance, Georgian or Colonial architecture will replace the ramshackle wooden hut in late Bolonian. These salons won't be known as "Ed's Place," "Pete's Joint" and "Gravy Mike's,' but as "The Palais de France" and "Au Canine Roti." The national passion has been glorified and now ranks with artichokes, Brussels sprouts, pear salad and other white-collar edibles.

Perhaps you will find an elaborate Gothic structure with flying buttresses, arched windows and stained glass, where a uniformed attendant will salute you and open the doors of your car. There is no fat man in a soiled apron lolling in the doorway yipping "R-r-red hot!" but an austere gentleman in an immaculate Tuxedo. A string quartet, concealed behind potted palms, whines something from Debussy. After you have specified how you want your hot dog—either "straight" (undivided) or "on the half-shell"—they bring out a canine aristocrat with little blue ribbons tied around the terminals.

The effects of this uplift movement will be closely watched by all hot-dog followers. Some are extremely apprehensive. They contend that hot dogs lose their charm unless bivouacked on a rusty gridiron in full view of the audience where you can inhale their fumes and hear them sizzling in their own syrup. The epicure may feel nervous with a plate that isn't a half-inch thick when he knows it will break if dropped to the floor. Then, too, the dogs will lose that zestful tang formerly provided by sand and bits of charred wood.

However, the liberal element in hot-doggery is willing to give these methods a fair chance. They view the new merchandising as a noble experiment. But if the proprietors go so far as to introduce checkrooms and dancing space, even these liberals will desert the cause and flock to the hamburger banner.

PERHAPS the modern hot-dog chaperone will quit intoning that doleful phrase, "We've just run out of buns," and will provide a non-sinkable paddle for the mustard jar. This improvement is sorely needed. The ideal way to correct the evil would be to use a long paddle that couldn't possibly sink in the jar.

The public would also like to see the shepherds divide their terriers more evenly before winding buns around them. It is very difficult to apply mustard between a hot dog that isn't evenly divided, and even more difficult to apply it on the glossy exterior. As everybody knows, mustard and hot-dog hides won't mix. The old school of hot-dog venders was careless in bisecting its dogs; or, if this is an injustice and they did try hard, they had no sense of perspective.

The delicacy is in its rightful environment at last. But the additional improvements should also be introduced if we are to let the hot dog express itself to the fullest extent.

The idea in filling-station architecture is to have the buildings look as little like filling stations as is humanly possible. Different companies carry out different motifs. Some filling stations resemble Turkish seraglios, while others look like Chinese pagodas, Eskimo igloos, Roman baths and Spanish siestas. Of course, it is rather difficult to recognize these places and the motorist should always be sure of his ground. Otherwise he might drive up to some handsome edifice, ask the man for five gallons of gas and a quart of oil and then discover it is a mausoleum.

You can generally tell a filling station from a mausoleum by the sign reading "18.9" or by the globes of colored liquid similar to those in the corner drug store. When you order gas, the attendant won't ask you what test you want, but what shade. You can get your choice of gasoline in emerald, apricot, mauve, cerise, sunset or blue, to match the body of your car.

These stations are firm believers in service. When you drive in, six men will leap to your car, attend to the water and air, wipe off the windshield and curry the body, all at no extra expense.

In time it will be possible to have your car oiled and greased or get a new paint job free of charge; and if you can get that much by merely asking the distance to Sappville, it will seem only reasonable to expect a free tire if you buy a gallon or so of gas.

However, the dispensing of oil and gas, like drugs in a drug store, has become a minor consideration. You can go into one of these places and telephone, write letters, get stock reports, obtain a night's lodging, play in a sandpile and do everything else you could do at a smart metropolitan club.

In fact, when you instruct some filling-station attendant to "fill 'er up," he is liable to say that he is out of gasoline, but that you and your party are at liberty to step inside and look over the current magazines, hear a radio concert, play ping-pong or take a swim.

EVEN the roadside vegetable stands will clean up and paint up. The rickety, tumble-down structure of other days will yield to a stuccoed kiosk, with plate-glass windows, where the vegetables will be attractively displayed with manikins and a futuristic background. When your party enters the store a man in striped trousers and a frock coat will pleasantly murmur, "Something in string beans? Two aisles over, please," and hand face-powder samples to the ladies.

Then you strike a railroad crossing. The watchman's booth is not a dilapidated wooden hut bearing the slogan "Painted 1-9-19," but a neat stone building set in a little garden along with a weather vane, a sun dial and a bird bath. The watchman emerges, clad in a movie usher's uniform. Waving his baton, he courteously announces: "There will be a short wait for the Cannonball Express."

Despite all these improvements, you are not apt to see anything more in the way of scenery. The side view is still obscured by billboards and the front view is hidden by busses. The advertising situation is getting so bad in some states that they are sending men around to hang "Post No Bills" signs on their mountains.

As long as the advertisers refuse to tear down their billboards, they ought to paint scenery on them, so that the motorist won't lose out altogether. A tooth paste advertisement could show a range of snow-capped mountains, and this scene could be linked up with the product by a slogan reading: "Zuggle's Delicious Tooth Pasta. It Alps the Gums."

Advertisers will wake up some day to the possibilities offered by the most brilliant stunt of all. They will omit the billboards and substitute diminutive placards reading: "Brook By Courtesy Stifle-Heat Range Co.," "Valley and Cornfield By Courtesy Hibbard's Hand-Forged Fountain Pens, Inc.," and "First Robins By Courtesy H. Gubbins Iron & Steel Co. Send for Free Illustrated Booklet."

low I know. He is all wool and a yard wide. He's rapidly getting rich. When he isn't knocked goofy by you, he's swell company. Of course, he wouldn't fit in Boston. You've got to be born to bloom in that atmosphere, but if you think you could exist anywhere else—"

"I hate Boston," she said passionately. This was news and I got enthusiastic.

"Then here's your chance to move to a good town. Crook your finger and you can have Dave."

The light went out in her face, her head reared and her eyes narrowed. Her lips drew into a thin straight line and the look she threw me was baleful.

"Are you a marriage broker?" she asked contemptuously. "Is there a commission involved?"

If she had been male I would have struck her. I scrambled to my feet, returned her glance intensified, and walked off with as much dignity as a thin man in a bathing suit could muster. The nasty little vixen. Insulted me for trying to put in a good word for Dave. Just as I had begun to think that she was a nice girl after all.

I WAS so angry I made a stupid job of dressing and it took me 20 minutes to complete the job, and I had hardly finished when Dave tore in, bubbling like a California gusher.

"What's the matter with you?" I asked sourly.

"I met Prudence, Pete. I'm in right. She asked me over to play tennis this afternoon."

"Congratulations. See you at the house."

So what I said had made an impression, I thought, as I drove home. Though she had snapped at me like a thankless cat, she proposed to take advantage of my proposition.

"We're invited to dinner at the Winslows' tonight," Aunt Dora informed me when I reached the house.

"I'm going to be excused, please. I feel like a solitary diner tonight."

She looked at me searchingly. "Have you quarreled with Prudence?"

"She gives me a pain."

Aunty sighed. "I hoped you'd like her. She's the sweetest girl I know."

ICE-COLD KISSES

her. You and he should get together."

Aunt Dora wagged her head reproachfully and left me to my own devices.

I refused to go swimming next morning and told Dave I felt like golf. With what he expected to find on the beach, I knew I wouldn't be pestered by him on the links. But I sliced my drive for the fourth hole and lost the ball in the rough.

While I was trudging around looking for it I heard a faint halloo from behind and saw a woman a hundred yards back who wanted permission to play through. I waved and she came on. She was wearing a red tam and a blue sports suit which couldn't disguise the most wonderful figure in the world.

SHE looked at me unsmiling and with expressionless eyes. I didn't speak.

"I thought you were bathing," she said in her cool, even tones.

"I felt like golf," I answered sullenly.

Prudence sat down on a rock, dropped her bag of clubs and folded her hands in her lap.

"I didn't go swimming because I would probably meet you," she stated. "I owed you an apology, and I hate to apologize."

"Then let it pass."

"I tried to make amends by being nice to your friend. Did he tell you we played tennis?"

"He did."

"I hoped you would understand from that that I was sorry. I felt hurt that you refused to dine with us last night."

"I wasn't feeling very well," I lied. She made me uncomfortable and she was too darned beautiful to be close to a fellow who was human.

"You hate me, don't you?" she said pensively.

"I don't hate anybody. I admire you; your beauty, your intellect, your—your—"

She lifted a protesting hand. "Please. You are still resentful. But you don't realize that you insulted me by assuming that I would crook my finger at a man to escape from Boston. You intimated that I am a designing woman."

"Well, aren't you? You went after Dave right away."

"I have explained, I believe," she said calmly. "I don't know why I want to set myself right with you. You are a rather useless person. I understand you are not very successful in business. You are not athletic. You seem to have no ambition. Yet you led your class in college. I suppose the money you are coming into has had a deleterious effect on you."

"Thanks," I retorted hotly. "You might add that I am a freckled, snub-nosed, carrot-headed person of low birth and no breeding."

"No, I wouldn't say that. You rail about Boston, but I happen to know that your grandmother was a Wentworth of Mount Vernon street."

"I'm exposed. Take away your microscope."

Prudence showed me she could laugh. It had an elfin ring.

"I find myself able to talk freely to you," she explained. "With persons whose good opinion is important I am apt to be self conscious and stiff but I am really at ease with you. Droll, isn't it?"

"Weird," I said tartly. "You always struck me as convinced of your superiority and puffed up with pride about your funny family. First time I saw you I said to myself, 'What a lovely Spanish girl,' and then I found you were just a Puritan in masquerade, stiff as a poker and quilly as a porcupine. You were standing on a pedestal and I had a small boy's mischievous notion of kicking it from under you. That's why I tried to kiss you."

"Oh!" she exclaimed. "You didn't want to kiss me?"

"Certainly not, when I found out you were a Winslow. No sane man would kiss a Winslow."

She bent her jet brows at me. "You're not even halfway polite. I think your friend, Mr. Belham, would like to kiss me."

"Huh. He thinks you are a gay senorita from Seville, the poor gump. If you don't take a few lessons in kissing, the first one will undeceive him."

To my surprise she didn't flare up at this but looked thoughtful.

"That isn't a bad idea," she said gravely. "I've never been kissed in my life and perhaps I need instruction. Can you recommend anybody?"

I grinned, but she kept a straight face. It was possible there was a sense of humor hidden there which nobody had ever suspected. The idea was to persuade me to volunteer as a professor and then to pulverize me.

"You see I feel kindly toward Mr. Belham. If he is in love with me he is the first man I have inspired with such a passion."

"Do you expect me to believe that?"

"One of the Winslow fetishes is truth, Mr. Torrence. I have had admiration but I don't think anybody has ever loved me."

"Well, Dave does. He's clean off his head about you, but you could never marry him."

"Why not, if I loved him?"

"You just couldn't. You're as far apart as the poles. He's a blatant New Yorker. He drinks. He is noisy. He's a go-getter, a glad-hander. He has red blood, not skimmed milk, in his veins. Your family would call him a Babbitt. The Winslows would say it was a mesalliance"——

I was interrupted. She had jumped up from the rock. Her bosom was heaving, her big eyes were blazing and her marble cheeks were pink. She clenched her hands and stamped her foot.

"Damn the Winslows!" she exclaimed, and then she picked up her golf bag and ran out on the course, leaving me paralyzed.

DAVE was over at the Winslows' pretty steadily for the next few days. They played golf together and swam together and I kept away and gave the boy his chance.

We had arrived on a Saturday and on Thursday I was writing a letter to Bill Dickinson, asking him to send me a telegram calling me back to New York on Monday, when the footman came to tell me that I was wanted on the phone.

"Mr. Peter Torrence?" asked a voice that couldn't be mistaken.

"None other."

"I wondered if you could come right over to my house. I wouldn't bother you but it's something very important—to me, at least."

"Yes, I can come. I'll drive right over," I assured her. "No, it's not a bother. I'm just loafing."

I went out and jumped into one of the five or six cars Aunt kept in the driveway for the use of her guests and started for Winslows', which was three-quarters of a mile east. Of course, I was curious.

Since the day on the links when she did my heart good by damning all the Winslows, I hadn't talked with her although I had seen her at the beach once or twice, and she was at a dinner at the Welches' which our outfit attended and was taken in by Dave.

It might be that Dave had proposed. I knew she hadn't accepted him because he would have broken down my door to tell the joyous news. She might be considering his proposal and wanted to ask me some questions about him in a canny Yankee way. If it wasn't that, I didn't know what it could be.

I ran up to the front door and disposed of my car and then asked a butler who answered the bell to tell Miss Winslow that I had arrived.

"She is in the summer house in the woods, sir. She wishes you to join her there."

I LIFTED my eyebrows in what was supposed to be a whimsical expression, crossed the great hall, and went out the back door and wandered down to the patch of woods. In the center of the grove was a screened-in summer house, but it was empty. I looked about and a tinkling laugh came from behind me. Whirling around, I saw Prudence Winslow coming from behind a tree.

She wore a Spanish lace dress and quaint buckles on her shoes. Her blue-black hair was piled high on her head and there were round gold earrings in her pink-snow ears. She stood with her hands on her hips and laughed at my astonishment. The girl was actually merry. I pulled myself together.

"Why the masquerade?" I asked with as much indifference as I could assume. Prudence was so stunning she would have galvanized a cigar-store Indian.

She drew near, moving with the undulating gait the peasant girls of Spain acquire from carrying vases filled with water on their heads. She caught the sides of the voluminous lace skirt and made me a graceful curtsy.

"Who shall say which is the masquerade?" she asked in limpid syllables.

"I'll say. You can't fool me with those gold earrings. You are Prudence Winslow of Beacon Hill, daughter of the late Enoch Winslow of Boston, banker and broker."

Her smile faded. "You are so cock-sure," she sighed. "Come into the summer house if you're not afraid to. I have something to say to you."

I followed her in and sat beside her on a bench. It was very hard to believe that I wasn't looking at a dancer in a cabaret in Madrid or Barcelona except there were no dancers in Spain so perfectly beautiful.

"You don't dislike me any more, do you?" she began.

"Of course not. I think I know you better now."

"I suppose you are the only man in the world I would dare to dress up for, like this, or to whom I could talk as frankly."

"Was the costume for me? Thanks. I appreciate it. But why do you feel that you can be frank with me?"

"I told you the other day. You don't matter. I don't bother to be Prudence Winslow with you. I'm myself. It's a comfortable feeling."

"It must be," I said acidly. "I have some personal vanity and I don't enjoy not mattering at all to a girl like you. I am not sexless entirely."

"But you are so thoroughly convinced that I'm an unpleasant prude that I don't have to try to interest you because it's useless."

"Well, I admit nothing. But go on. What do you want to see me about?"

She bent her head and smoothed a fold in her skirt.

"It's Mr. Belham. I've been seeing a lot of him. He is very nice. He proposed to me last night."

"Good for Dave. Did you accept him?"

"No, not exactly. I asked for time to consider it."

"Well, Dave is my best friend. I don't think you two are suited to each other, but people in love want no advice. You're going to take him, aren't you?"

"Yes."

"Oh!" I had not expected that. All along I supposed that her cold common sense would guide her. "Then why didn't you tell him so and put him out of his misery?" I asked hotly.

She cocked her head on one side and regarded me out of the corners of her eyes.

"Well, if we were engaged, he'd want to kiss me, wouldn't he?"

"He would."

"That was it. I remembered what you said. I don't know how to kiss. He would be disappointed."

I had to laugh at that. "Give him a chance. He'll be glad to show you how."

She shook her head slowly. "I am afraid. Honestly, Pete—er—Mr. Torrence. I want to make a good impression. I thought I ought to take lessons."

I LOOKED at her incredulously. "You're not really as green as that."

She was crimson and she kept her face away. The profile was enough. A gush of compassion for the poor, proud, ignorant darling swept over me.

"You poor kid," I sighed.

"I thought, if I could find somebody with experience, somebody that was very indifferent to me so that it wouldn't matter, I thought maybe he would give me lessons."

"Try to find somebody like that," I muttered, skeptically.

She turned those great lamps full on me.

"I have. I want you to do it."

I leaped to my feet.

"What?" I yelled.

"Yes. I do want to make a good impression on Mr. Belham. Will you teach me how to kiss?"

I stared at her and then I grew so furious I wanted to hit her.

"I'll be hanged if I will. No, no, no!" I shouted. "Of all the rank brazen impudence!"

"But why not?" she said softly. "Am I repulsive or something?"

"You know damn' well you're not. But if you think I'm going to practice kissing with you so you can show a good time to that big bohunk of a Dave Belham, you're crazy."

SHE bent her head and her shoulders shook. I never could resist tears.

"But—you claim to be his friend," she reproached.

"There are limits to friendship. No!"

She looked up and her lips were quivering. They were so full and ripe and luscious, I suddenly trembled with a mad desire to press my own against them.

"For my sake. Please?" she pleaded.

I yielded. It was that or having epilepsy. "All right," I said, trying to make it sound grudging. She gave me a dazzling smile. "Stand up," I commanded. "Come here. Now purse your lips."

I intended to touch them lightly but at their touch the blood rushed to my head and I pressed against them passionately. My arms were at my side and I forced them to stay there, but suddenly her right arm crept up and went over my left shoulder, and I felt the pressure returned. In a second my arms were around her, holding her tight, and her left hand had the back of my head and it was forcing me to kiss her harder. What started as a strictly platonic lesson ended in a passionate and lingering embrace.

I quit because I had to say something.

"My darling! My beautiful darling!"

"Kiss me," commanded Prudence. Ice? All the bottled sunshine of Andalusia was in that kiss.

WE came up for air. "You fraud," I said tenderly. "Teach you to kiss, indeed! If you suppose for a minute you're going to do this to Dave Belham"——

"Bother Dave Belham," she exclaimed. "I never liked that man."

I led her over to the bench and we sank on it, still entwined.

"How the deuce do you happen to be in love with me?" I wondered. "You have only seen me three or four times."

"Apparently you are in love with me."

"I only just found it out. I guess, though, I've been a goner since that first day at the beach but I had a weird idea of you—"

"I've been in love with you for five years," she said. "That day you tried to kiss me began it. Of course, I repulsed you like a stupid prude but I never got you out of my mind. Pete, I've never stopped regretting that I didn't let you kiss me. And it was I who asked your aunt to invite you down. I asked her last year and the year before to invite you, but you never came. And when you did come I was so delighted. Then you began doing a John Alden for your friend, Miles Standish, and it infuriated me. I encouraged him just a little but it was to try to awaken your jealousy. This kissing lesson was my last hope."

"Poor Dave," I sighed. "He probably thinks he's engaged to you."

I looked at her sternly. "I thought all the Winslows spoke nothing but the truth."

"It's my Spanish blood," she said demurely.

"Thank God for it!" I exclaimed devoutly.

"Pete, you don't really think I am a proud, supercilious, prim, Puritan icicle?" she asked earnestly.

"After that kiss?" I laughed. "Your name isn't Prudence. It's Vesuvia."

She nodded. "And a good name, too."

Once a Waitress—Now a Social Favorite in London

one party she hired the entire chorus of the "Midnight Follies" and in addition imported a famous quartet from Ireland.

In the meantime, the Corrigan-McKinney Steel Company wasn't taking much of Jimmy Corrigan's time. His stock was paying him handsome returns and he was content to leave its management in the hands of Price McKinney. But Mrs. Corrigan had not forgotten the snubs she had received from Mrs. McKinney, and she soon convinced Jimmy that it was to his interest to gain complete control of the business. And then started a legal battle that became famous.

CORRIGAN appealed to the courts to remove McKinney as trustee of his $20,000,000 estate. In his petition he claimed that McKinney was endeavoring to "squeeze" him out and had voted sufficient stock to change the name of the company to the McKinney Steel Company. The case dragged from court to court without a decision. In the meantime Corrigan began negotiating for a block of 13 per cent of the stock, owned by a family named Burke. With his 40 per cent and the Burke stock Corrigan would have control. But the Burkes, sensing the value of their stock, wanted $7,500,000 for it, and Corrigan didn't have anywhere near that amount of cash.

Finally, an agreement was reached. Corrigan literally pawned his 40 per cent as security for a bank loan which enabled him to buy out the Burkes. And with 53 per cent of the voting stock under his control he and his wife returned to Cleveland in May, 1925, and, to the surprise of American industry, assumed control of the business. McKinney, though still owning a substantial amount of stock, was voted out and Corrigan elected himself president of the business. The defeat so preyed on Price McKinney's mind that a year later, although still a very wealthy man, he committed suicide. It was then that Corrigan made a graceful gesture by changing the name of the company back to the Corrigan-McKinney Steel Company.

These events, needless to say, did not endear the Corrigans to Cleveland society, which had long sided with the McKinneys. But this was of little concern to Mrs. Corrigan, for she and her husband continued to maintain their London house and each year went there for a season of brilliant entertaining. Then, in January, 1928, as he was entering the Cleveland Athletic Club, Jimmy Corrigan dropped dead of heart failure. His will left everything to Mrs. Corrigan, who thus acquired the controlling interest in the steel mills. Now the richest woman in Cleveland, she continued to spend most of her time abroad.

LAST month she returned to Cleveland to consummate the sale of the Corrigan-McKinney Steel Company to the Cleveland Cliffs Iron Company for $60,000,000, and 53 per cent of this amount went to Mrs. Corrigan. A few days later she was in New York, preparing to return to Europe.

If Cleveland society is sorry for having been unresponsive in the past, it is certainly too proud to admit it now. In fact, it is said that a group of Cleveland society dames went to particular pains to let Mrs. Corrigan know that if she intended remaining in the city the old taboo would still hold good. There is little doubt, however, that Mrs. Corrigan could bring Cleveland society to terms in time if she cared to make the effort.

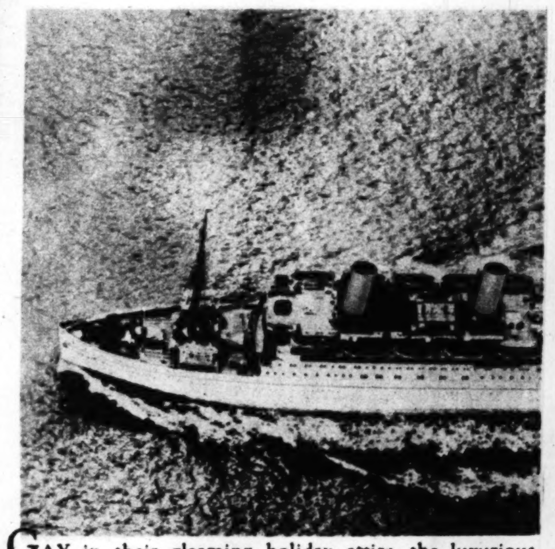
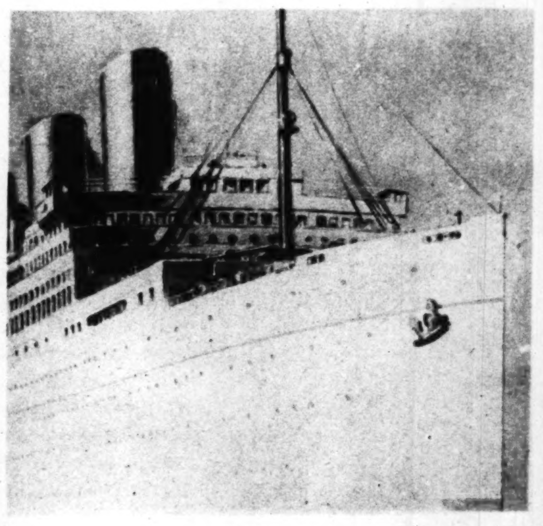
2 WORLD SEAPORTS . . .
18 OCEAN GIANTESSES . . .
born of this 1000-MILE Seaway



GAY in their gleaming holiday attire, the luxurious Empress and Duchess liners head for Europe between two magic coastlines. Norman-French Canada bids them a lovely 48-hour bon voyage . . . on either deck-rail, habitant villages and farms, fields, forests and mountains. Two days of this picture-book seaway . . . then, after only 4 days open ocean, Cherbourg and Southampton, or Havre, Antwerp, Hamburg, Liverpool, Glasgow, Belfast, London.



HAVE you heard about this latest giantess of the Atlantic? Another mighty Empress nears completion in Scotland. She'll be the Empress of Britain, 40,000 gross tons! She'll make her maiden voyage in 1931, with every new luxury of ocean travel within her great white hull. She'll steam from the heart of America to Europe in 5 days!

© ASSOCIATED SCREEN NEWS, LTD., MONTREAL

St. Fabien and Laurentian mountains from 1500 feet in the air

HAVE YOU CONSIDERED THIS DIRECT "TAKE-OFF" TO EUROPE?

DID you know there are 2 famous ocean harbors . . . Québec and Montreal . . . which are a 2-day voyage from the sea? Did you realize that Montreal is America's second largest seaport . . . and yet, 1000 miles from the Atlantic? Would you believe that the mammoth docks of these seaports . . . some of them 1000 feet long . . . receive and send forth each month a high-seas cargo of 1,600,000 tons?

All this world-shipping activity is born of the St. Lawrence . . . not a "river," but a huge seaway . . . an actual salt arm of the Atlantic! Ages ago, the Atlantic thrust this irresistible wedge into the verdant heart of North America. It started 90 miles wide . . . 20, 15, 10 miles . . . then narrowed to two miles across . . . a majestic, balmy-surfaced ocean offspring reaching 1000 miles from the ocean. No wonder the early French explorers thought it their long-sought passage to China!

Today, 220 "ocean bottoms" a month ply up and down the St. Lawrence seaway . . . merchant ships to and from the earth's largest ports. They include Canadian Pacific's fleet of giantess passenger liners, led by the renowned white Empresses and Duchesses. Full speed ahead, their prows part the St. Lawrence seaway . . . a shorter and most direct route to and from Europe.

Every year adds thousands to the stream of travelers who have "discovered" the Empresses and Duchesses and the St. Lawrence seaway. Ask these people about this unique route to Europe. They all say it's a wonderful, delightful way to go.

WHITE EMPRESSES AND DUCHESSES WITH EVERY TYPE ACCOMMODATION

Canadian Pacific's huge passenger liners offer you any type of accommodations. You wish the utmost in first-class luxuries? Board a shining white Empress. The latest advances in cabin class? Take a regal Duchess, one of 4 new sister ships. The fleet also offers the popular tourist-third facilities, as well as third class. Whatever the accommodations, they include Canadian Pacific service and cuisine, famous on the earth's every horizon. Remember, 3 to 5 sailings a week.

A Gift of 500,000 Cameras to the Children of America

In Commemoration of the 50th Anniversary of Kodak

IF you have a child—boy or girl—whose twelfth birthday falls in any month of the calendar year 1930, go to an authorized Kodak dealer's and accept the camera illustrated on this page—complete with one roll of Kodak Film—without cost or obligation.

It is a gift, made with the compliments of George Eastman, Chairman of the Board of the Eastman Kodak Company, to the Children of America, in celebration of the 50th Anniversary of Kodak.

Editors and educators pronounce it one of the most unique public gifts in the history of American industry. Five Hundred Thousand cameras are to be given to children, beginning May 1, 1930, under this plan.

There are no reservations to the gift, except that no cameras will be distributed before May 1st or after May 31, 1930. And none after the original supply of 500,000 is exhausted. Do not criticize your dealer if you delay till his supply is gone.

"No Parent with a Child Eligible Should Fail to Accept"

No parent with a child eligible should fail to accept for his child the Eastman Anniversary Gift Camera and Film.

For, as a factor in developing observation, amateur picture-making is probably second to no other as an educational adjunct.

a Patri

ANGELO PATRI
Famous educator and authority on child problems

Simply take your child to an authorized Kodak dealer's, on or after May 1st, and get the camera—complete with one roll of Kodak Film. You pay nothing, you buy nothing—this is a gift.

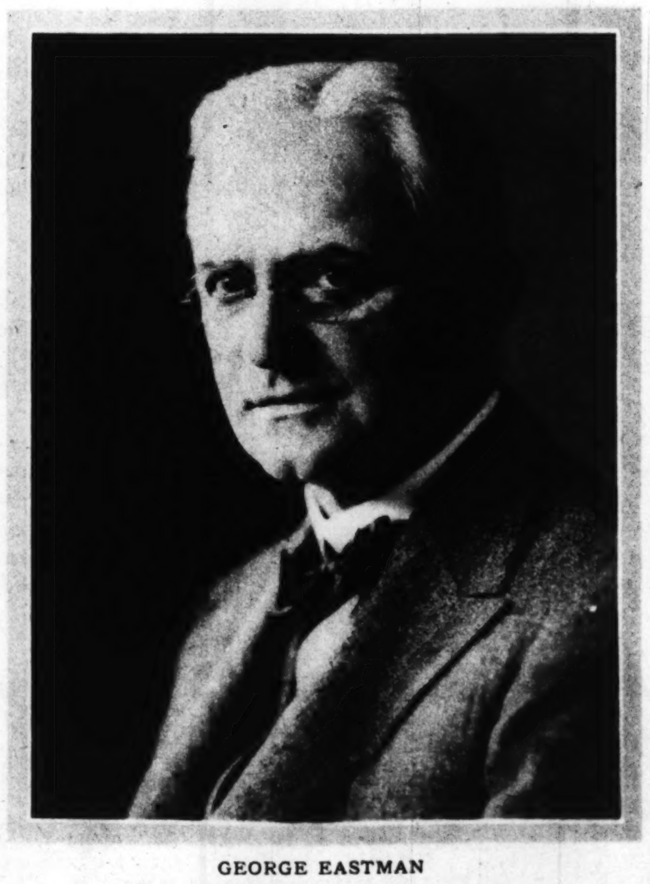
Why the Gift is Made

The gift is made for two reasons.

From a sentimental standpoint: As a token of appreciation to the grandparents and parents who for 50 years have played so important a part in the development of amateur picture-taking in America, and of the Eastman Kodak Company. To place in the hands of their children and grandchildren an admittedly important educational and character-building force.

From a business standpoint: As a means of interesting hundreds of thousands more children in picture-taking. And thus to raise amateur photography, among the coming generation, to even greater heights than its present remarkable peak. For, as amateur photography increases in popularity, the use of Kodak products will increase with it.

A Parent's Duty to Accept this Important Character-Building Aid



GEORGE EASTMAN
Creator of Kodak, which celebrates its 50th Anniversary by giving away 500,000 cameras to American Children

Before this gift plan was definitely decided on, the opinions of leading educational authorities were sought.

The offer of cameras and film to 500,000 boys and girls has won enthusiastic comment from eminent men and women interested in child welfare. Many hold that the acceptance of this gift is a duty parents owe their children—as a definitely important character-building aid.

For, as a factor in developing character, observation, appreciation of beauty and a depth of human understanding, they point out, amateur picture-making is probably second to no other as an educational adjunct.

It brings a child in touch, they say, with every phase of life and nature, and implants a clean interest in the formative mind, during the dangerously impressionable years, when a wholesome pastime is most needed to safeguard the future of the growing child.

That is why amateur picture-taking is being so widely advocated by educators today. Why so many hold that providing a child with the means to practice it is a praiseworthy benefaction.

And every day, more and more, thinking parents are viewing it in that light.

Distribution Begins May 1

The Anniversary Cameras will be at authorized Kodak dealers' ready for distribution on May 1st.

Take your child to one of these stores. Get the camera. No red tape, no delay, no cost.

The gift-giving period will extend into the month of May, 1930, only as long as the supply of 500,000 cameras holds out. To avoid disappointment act early. Be sure of getting one of these cameras for your child.

Eastman Kodak Company, Rochester, N. Y.

A GIFT OF 500,000 CAMERAS

THE camera—complete with one roll of Kodak Film—is given absolutely WITHOUT COST to any child whose twelfth birthday falls in any month of 1930.

500,000 cameras, as illustrated, are to be given children who reach the age of twelve this year.

The gift is from the Eastman Kodak Company, with the compliments of George Eastman, Chairman of the Board, in commemoration of Kodak's 50th Anniversary.

NOTE: In appreciation of their coöperation and loyalty through the years, this special gift camera will be distributed through stores of the nation-wide network of active, authorized Kodak dealers. Authorized Kodak dealers are located everywhere.

DUMB DORA

This comic appears every day in the daily Post-Dispatch

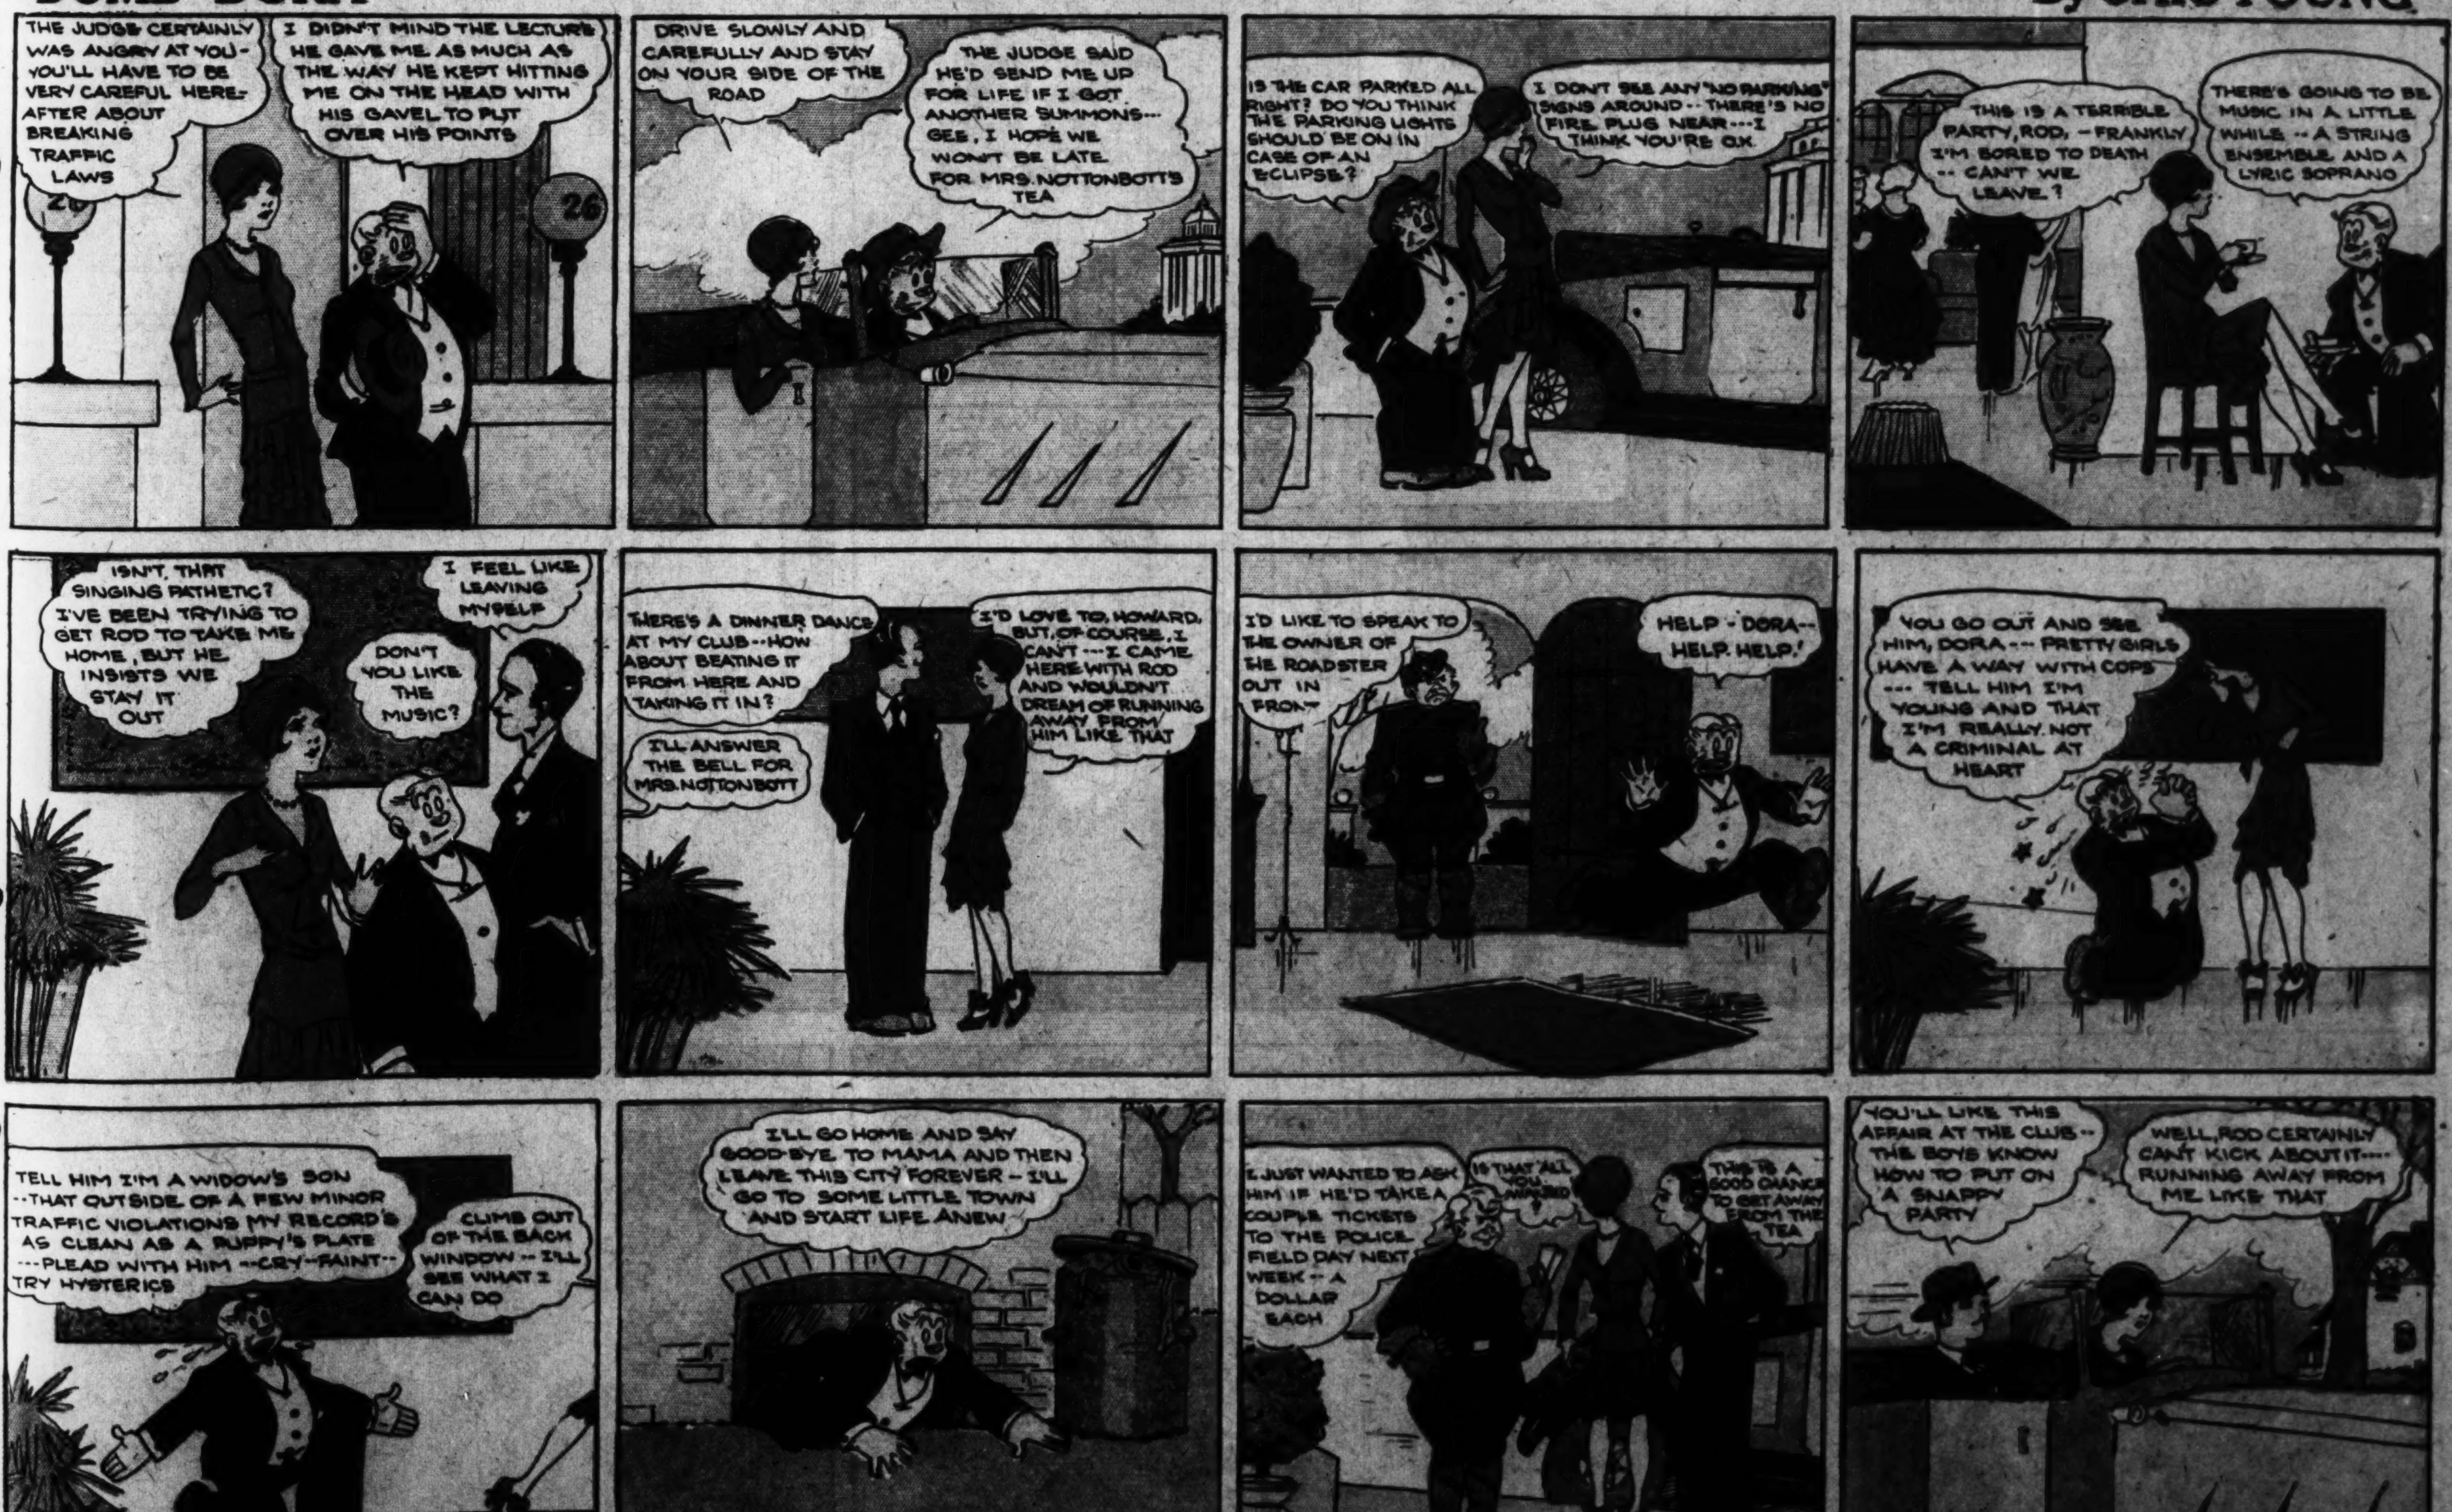
By CHIC YOUNG



THE JUDGE CERTAINLY WAS ANGRY AT YOU – YOU'LL HAVE TO BE VERY CAREFUL HERE-AFTER ABOUT BREAKING TRAFFIC LAWS
I DIDN'T MIND THE LECTURE HE GAVE ME AS MUCH AS THE WAY HE KEPT HITTING ME ON THE HEAD WITH HIS GAVEL TO PUT OVER HIS POINTS
DRIVE SLOWLY AND CAREFULLY AND STAY ON YOUR SIDE OF THE ROAD
THE JUDGE SAID HE'D SEND ME UP FOR LIFE IF I GOT ANOTHER SUMMONS--- GEE, I HOPE WE WON'T BE LATE FOR MRS. NOTTONBOTT'S TEA
IS THE CAR PARKED ALL RIGHT? DO YOU THINK THE PARKING LIGHTS SHOULD BE ON IN CASE OF AN ECLIPSE?
I DON'T SEE ANY "NO PARKING" SIGNS AROUND -- THERE'S NO FIRE PLUG NEAR --- I THINK YOU'RE O.K.
THIS IS A TERRIBLE PARTY, ROD, – FRANKLY I'M BORED TO DEATH -- CAN'T WE LEAVE?
THERE'S GOING TO BE MUSIC IN A LITTLE WHILE -- A STRING ENSEMBLE AND A LYRIC SOPRANO
ISN'T THAT SINGING PATHETIC? I'VE BEEN TRYING TO GET ROD TO TAKE ME HOME, BUT HE INSISTS WE STAY IT OUT
I FEEL LIKE LEAVING MYSELF
DON'T YOU LIKE THE MUSIC?
THERE'S A DINNER DANCE AT MY CLUB -- HOW ABOUT BEATING IT FROM HERE AND TAKING IT IN?
I'D LOVE TO, HOWARD, BUT, OF COURSE, I CAN'T --- I CAME HERE WITH ROD AND WOULDN'T DREAM OF RUNNING AWAY FROM HIM LIKE THAT
I'LL ANSWER THE BELL FOR MRS. NOTTONBOTT
I'D LIKE TO SPEAK TO THE OWNER OF THE ROADSTER OUT IN FRONT
HELP - DORA -- HELP. HELP!
YOU GO OUT AND SEE HIM, DORA --- PRETTY GIRLS HAVE A WAY WITH COPS --- TELL HIM I'M YOUNG AND THAT I'M REALLY NOT A CRIMINAL AT HEART
TELL HIM I'M A WIDOW'S SON -- THAT OUTSIDE OF A FEW MINOR TRAFFIC VIOLATIONS MY RECORD'S AS CLEAN AS A PUPPY'S PLATE --- PLEAD WITH HIM -- CRY -- FAINT -- TRY HYSTERICS
CLIMB OUT OF THE BACK WINDOW -- I'LL SEE WHAT I CAN DO
I'LL GO HOME AND SAY GOOD-BYE TO MAMA AND THEN LEAVE THIS CITY FOREVER – I'LL GO TO SOME LITTLE TOWN AND START LIFE ANEW
I JUST WANTED TO ASK HIM IF HE'D TAKE A COUPLE TICKETS TO THE POLICE FIELD DAY NEXT WEEK -- A DOLLAR EACH IS THAT ALL YOU WANTED?
THIS IS A GOOD CHANCE TO GET AWAY FROM THE TEA
YOU'LL LIKE THIS AFFAIR AT THE CLUB -- THE BOYS KNOW HOW TO PUT ON A SNAPPY PARTY
